In the early histories, it is recorded that the merchants of the two cities rarely attempted to make the round trip in a day. To improve this condition, the first turnpike built in America was constructed between Norwich and New London, on the west bank of the river, and one of the statements appearing in the records of the time is to the effect that this road shortened the distance between the two cities by more than half a day's journey.

Where the padded foot of the Indian trod the trail through the forests and meadows of the Mohicans, now the rubber tires of the motor vehicles roll smoothly over roads largely concrete, and the distance between the two cities is reduced to 20 minutes. The two cities are now bound together by two trunk line highways (one on either side of the river) by steam roads, on the east and west banks, and by a trolley line on the west bank.

I have given just a little bit of the early history of this valley in the hope of whetting your interest in what to us who live here, is one of the most beautiful sections of the state of Connecticut.

Opportunities for Development

The Thames, a tidal river, 13 miles long, with its source the confluence of the Yantic and Shetucket, is navigable its entire length, and because of its width gives the impression, at many points of being a great lake. It offers exceptional opportunities for industrial development, with its easy access through the race from the ocean, making possible the use, for the industries, of vessels of heavy tonnage. Attracted by this and other transportation facilities, and the natural advantages many industries have located on the river, and while to some the location of an industry means a blot upon the scenery, it is the ambition of the people of this valley to see all the locations on the Thames utilized for industrial purposes, and the two cities so developed that it will be difficult for one to recognize the point where, in driving from one city to the other, you leave the one and enter the other.

The interests of these two cities are protected and advanced by live, energetic and ambitious chambers of commerce, which lose no opportunity to call to public attention the particular attractions of each city.

I speak as the representative of an organization known as the Thames Valley Citizens' committee, made up of representatives of the chambers of both cities, whose purpose it is to create a sectional spirit of emulation as distinct from a purely local one, and our endeavor is to build up the whole area of the valley without prejudice to any part of it.

Women's College

I said at the beginning of this address that it was impossible for me to cover the subject, but I want to take you with me, for just a moment, up this new old turnpike and show you what has already come about as the result of the natural advantages of this area.

On the eminence, just north of the city of New London, overlooking the harbor, is the Connecticut College for Women, a group of granite buildings constantly being added to in order to provide for the demand for higher education for women. The college has a most enviable reputation, not only in Connecticut, but throughout the entire United States. It was, partly, the gift of a few public spirited men of New London and, partly the generosity of others living outside this area.

Big Power Station

Passing through the settlement known as Quaker Hill, a little further north, on the border line between Waterford and Montville, by following the old turnpike, which at this point is slightly changed, we look down into the valley of the Thames, with a wonderful view to the north, and just below here we see the steam station of the Eastern Connecticut Power company, the principal source of power for the entire eastern end of the state. This is one of the three great steam stations of Connecticut, and it will shortly be connected by high tension line with the other two stations, adding to the efficiency and economy of all three. This station is now a part of the Connecticut Electric Service company's system, and as the addition of mechanical power to the physical strength of man is one of the great contributions to the high standard of living in America, the service of this system is bound to add greatly to the growth and development of Connecticut.

Water Power Developments

Here, at Uncasville, is the large plant of the well known Robert Gair company, and, on what is known as the Oxoboxo stream, the course of which we are obliged to follow because of construction work now in process, we see one of those interesting situations that has contributed more than anything else to the development of New England; namely, the use of the water power provided by our streams.

Here, on a short stream, perhaps five miles long with the Oxoboxo pond and drainage area as its source, are six or seven small developments. These natural sources of energy accounting for the original settlement of this valley.

You have, undoubtedly, noticed that practically all of the industrial towns in Connecticut (except those at tide water) are built up around water powers, so that sometimes we feel that we can attribute our supremacy as a manufacturing state to an abundance of cheap power.

To the north of Uncasville, and in the town of Montville, if we had time, we could visit two of the old forts of the Mohegans—one on Mohegan Hill and one on the west bank of the Thames, known as Fort Shantok. Many interesting bits of Indian history center about these two forts.

Further on, at Norwich, the greatest Indian battle of the period was fought, between the Mohegans and Narragansetts, and, in Norwich, is the monument of the historic Uncas, while in Cooperstown, N. Y., is the monument of the Uncas of fiction.

City Merger Possibility

To justify our belief that these two cities, Norwich and New London, may sometime be merged, we want to call your attention to the development along this trunk line highway, now lighted the entire distance and with almost a continuous line of homes, industries and institutions along its borders.

Infinite Variety of Products

The industries of the valley cover an infinite variety of products—from cotton and woolens to silk and velvets—from sheeting to comfortables—prints to printing presses—submarines to sea sleds—cotton thread to silk floss—paper to cartons—cutlery to Thermos bottles—gun cotton to guns—chicks to chickens—giving a diversity of employment to a population of skilled artisans.

A ride from New London to Norwich, on the west bank of the river, and down the east bank, with some one to point out to you the places of particular interest, would, if taken by you, we believe prove to be one of the most attractive features of this very interesting convention, and I want to urge that each one of you, who have your own cars, make this trip and visit the two hills directly to the east, Fort Hill and Pequot Hill, from which you may see the wonderful picture presented by the shore line extending from a point west of New London through to Rhode Island, with Fishers Island in the distance. From the Connecticut river to the Rhode Island state line is one almost unbroken summer resort.

In spite of the fact that most of you are already residents of Connecticut, we want you to see this territory, for you may be tempted to make it your summer home, and our attention is to see this part of the state grow more rapidly than does the state as a whole, and so create a competition that will help in this interesting drive, just now in progress, to sell New England to the rest of the world.

GAVE DARE TO WRONG OFFICER AFTER SMASHING AUTOMOBILE IN NEW LONDON

(Special to the Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, June 22.—Winifred Busch, 40 Montauk avenue, a pay clerk aboard the United States Coast Guard destroyer, Jouett was arrested this evening charged with reckless driving and resisting an officer. Besides these charges he smashed a 1926 Buick sedan, inflicting such damage to the automobile that it was made a specimen for the junk shop.

Busch, according to the police, drove his automobile through Broad street at a high rate of speed when an alarm of fire was rung in, it being Busch's intention to follow the fire apparatus. When his automobile reached a point on Broad street, near Ledyard street, an automobile operated by Miss Priscilla Curtis was driven from Ledyard street to Broad. Busch's automobile was travelling at such a high rate of speed that he could not avoid a collision with Miss Curtis' automobile. The impact of the collision caused Busch to lose control of his steering wheel and in another instant the automobile plunged across the highway, climbed the curb and passing over the sidewalk, ascended an embankment and hit a tree, completely wrecking the entire front of the automobile.

Miss Curtis made complaint against Busch to the police alleging reckless driving. Sergeant Samuel Hick and Motorcycle Officer George McCaskey were sent to the scene of the accident and there found Busch standing near his automobile. When informed that he was under arrest upon complaint of Miss Curtis he disputed the authority of the officers to arrest him and became insolent. Sergeant Hick left Busch in charge of Officer McCaskey and while the latter officer was endeavoring to persuade Busch to exercise reason instead of becoming belligerent, Busch informed McCaskey that he would not go to the police station and that the officer was not big enough to bring him there. That was enough for McCaskey, who is one of the smallest members of the police department. He at once tackled Busch, after having opened the door of the police car. Seizing Busch by the lapels of the coat he dragged him bodily into the car and drove him to the police station. At the station, Busch continued to be defiant. He was released upon furnishing a cash bond of $100 for his presentation in the police court tomorrow morning. The wrecked automobile was towed to a garage.

Drunks and autoists provided business for the police court this morning. There were not so many of them, but they were more numerous than would naturally be looked for when past experiences are considered. Edward Cunningham, a robust fellow, was found intoxicated at the railway station. He was drunk enough to be ugly and gave Officers John Murphy and Ernest Opperman a tussle to get him to the lock-up. Cunningham said he came here yesterday and while waiting for a boat to convey him to Fisher's Island he hoisted a few and became drunk. He was fined $3.

John Leary of Truman street was intoxicated at his home and so abusive that his arrest was asked for. He was charged with intoxication and breach of the peace and was fined on each count, but to give him a chance to show that he could live a different sort of life the execution of the judgment was suspended for six months. In that time John will demonstrate whether he means what he said when he sought clemency.

John Dolan, an employe on the state road in Groton where improvements in the highway are in progress, had a day off Monday so he fell into the number of hooch imbibers. He had never been in the court before and has been a steady worker since he arrived here, so he was given the chance to show he was capable of leading a better life than that which sees a man drunk.

James P. Morgan of Niantic was in town with his auto yesterday and parked the machine on State street where he allowed it to remain so long that it was tagged for violation of the parking ordinance. Then it developed that Morgan did not have an operating license. He had a license for the year 1925, but that was valueless on the 21st of June 1926. He explained that when he received his reissued license he supposed he put it into his pocket, but instead put it in his dress and put the obsolete license into his duds. A suspended judgment came to him.

Monty Serafin was fined $5 for parking ordinance violation. He endeavored to deceive the court. Judge Haines inferred from what he said so a fine came to him. It was only $5, however.

One woman was arraigned for violation of parking ordinances, but she escaped without severer discipline than the illumination of appearance in court.

Building work seems to have fallen off in this city. Few applications are made for permission to build, though there is considerable repair work and garage building.

From any conditions on the streets of the city there is no indication that the yearly Yale-Harvard races are two days away. Local interest is entirely absent. In contrast with the first years the races were rowed on the Thames the contests of Friday next have failed to arouse even passing concern.

An automobile owned and driven by John C. Hinrichs, 21 Town street, Norwich Town, and an automobile owned and driven by J. Roland Brantner, Colt street, collided early this morning on Main street, corner of Federal streets. Hinrich's auto was travelling southerly through Main St., and at an estimated speed of 20 miles an hour. Just before the auto reached Federal street, Brantner's auto emerged from Federal street and before the latter auto could cross the center line of Main street to proceed northward, Hinrich's car crashed into it. The running board and both mudguards of Brantner's auto were demolished.

Mrs. Thomas Horner and infant daughter, 182 Howard street; Mrs. Alfred Geier, 34 Jay street, and Anthony Ealahan, 126 Squire street, patients at Lawrence-Memorial Associated hospital, were discharged today.

The funeral of Mrs. George H. Ryley, was held this afternoon at 2 o'clock at 48 Shapley street. The services were conducted by Elmer Page, spiritualist reader. Nephews of Mrs. Ryley acted as bearers. Burial was in Jordan cemetery.

Funeral services for Mrs. Albert Mosher, were held this afternoon at 2 o'clock at her home, Broad street extension, the services being conducted by Rev. J. Romeyn Danforth. Burial was in Gardner cemetery, Ocean avenue.

Simon Hess, 67, well known State street merchant, having long been connected with The Bee Hive, died yesterday afternoon at his home 1123 Ocean avenue, his death ending a lingering illness. He is survived by his wife and a daughter, Mrs. Madeleine Sanger. Mr. Hess was taken ill several months ago and about two months ago his condition became so acute that he was admitted to Home Memorial hospital, where he underwent an operation in the hopes of bringing about an improvement in his health. The anticipated results did not develop and recently Mr. Hess was removed to his home where his decline was gradual until the end.

Commissioner of Motor Vehicles R. B. Stoeckel today ordered the driver's license of Edwin Ancell, submarine base, recently suspended, returned to the owner.

Ignace Weiss, New York salesman, and John Crawford, Providence road, Groton, who were arrested last evening by State Police Officer Bernard Kenerson, Groton barracks charged with failing to grant right of way following a collision of the automobiles on the Thames river highway bridge, were not prosecuted in the police court this morning. Weiss' automobile was extensively damaged.

Mrs. Amanda Levesgne, inmate at Norwich state hospital who recently escaped from the institution, was arrested in this city this afternoon by Traffic Officer Clyde Murphy, although the New London police had not been informed of the escape of the woman. Mrs. Levesgne boarded a bus enroute from Hartford to New London on the outskirts of the city and her queer actions attracted the attention of the driver, who entertained the opinion that the woman was not of sound mentality. When the bus reached State street the driver informed Officer Murphy of his suspicion and with the officer interrogating her, he was of the same belief as was the driver. Escorting the woman to the police station Mrs. Levesgne was questioned and it then developed that the woman was insane. The hospital authorities were communicated and it was then revealed that she was being sought by them. Later two attendants came to New London and took charge of the woman.

Mrs. F. H. Strickland, Thames View, Waterford, reported to the police this afternoon that Etta J. Beebe Loper, had been missing from the Strictland home since last Sunday and requested, that in the event of the young woman being found in New London that she be arrested and Mrs. Strictland notified. The young woman is described as being 22, about five feet four and one-half inches in height, hazel eyes and black bobbed hair. When Miss Loper disappeared she was dressed in a dark blue coat and scarf, cream colored straw hat, black shoes and stockings.

Abraham Bronstein, New York, formerly of New London, is spending a few days in this city.

The condition of Harry LeRoy Ward, United States Coast Guard academy, who attempted to commit suicide at Darien last Sunday following his arrest for the theft of an automobile owned by David Barnes, Waterford, is reported as improving and it is now believed that Ward will recover. He swallowed a solution of bichloride of mercury. It has been revealed since Ward's arrest that he is in possession of several checks purporting to have been drawn by New London merchants, but which are known to be forgeries. Whether Ward cashed checks other than those found in his clothing, it is not known.

An alarm of fire was rung in from Box 39 corner of Broad and Ledyard streets, at 5:40 o'clock this afternoon when a roof fire was discovered on a dwelling on Parker street. A small quantity of chemicals was sufficient to extinguish the fire.

Another batch of violators of the city's parking ordinances were tagged on the principal streets of the city this afternoon, but most of them were released with a warning. Four, however, were ordered to present themselves in the police court tomorrow morning. They are Harry Elion, 77 Montauk avenue; William H. Cushing, 849 Pequot avenue; William Baum, 45 Spring street, and David Mulcahey, 16 Tilley street. Two of the drivers ordered into court have been previously summoned into court, but were released at that time by being warned against further infractions of the motor vehicle law.

BANK STREET RETURNS TO FULL TRAFFIC RANKS

(Special to the Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, June 22. — After being a one-way street to both vehicular and trolley traffic for nine days, Bank street tonight became a two-way thoroughfare for an edict issued this afternoon by City Manager William A. Holt ordered that the former rules governing traffic on that street be adopted beginning at midnight. At that hour all traffic was allowed to enter and depart from Bank street at State street in both northerly and southerly directions. The trolley traffic, however, continued to be operated in one-way, the same as has been the case since the one-way street was ordered and it will probably be another day or two before the trolley cars continue to pass through Bank street in both directions.

The action of City Manager Holt in ordering two-way traffic on Bank street did not come with surprise after last night's long session of the city council and when a lengthy petition was presented by merchants of that street remonstrating against the one-way traffic because of the great damage to their business.

When City Manager Holt decided to make Bank street a one-way thoroughfare the city was put to a considerable expense as was the Connecticut company. The city caused sidewalks to be ripped up at various points and substantial iron signs erected to direct automobile drivers as the route to pursue, either in entering or leaving Bank street. The Connecticut company had a force of electricians and laborers at work on State street, corner of Washington street, several days installing an electric switch and signal. What further action, if any, will be taken by City Manager Holt to relieve the congestion on Bank street, has not been determined.

QUESTION OF GARBAGE COLLECTION IS IMPORTANT

(Special to the Bulletin)

WESTERLY, R. I., June 22—Westerly Chamber of Commerce, Lewis Stanton, president, held its June session Tuesday evening in the council chambers of the Westerly town hall. The annual banquet of the chamber, usually held at this time of the year, has been postponed until the September meeting.

President Stanton announced that specifications for painting the interior of the Westerly postoffice in plain colors had already been received in Westerly from the U. S. Treasury department so that some good had resulted from representations made by the Westerly chamber.

The annual dinner of the chamber was announced as likely to be held during the first week in October.

Thomas McKenzie, a member of the committee from the chamber, on garbage collection, made an extensive report. He said that the collection of garbage, ashes and rubbish was a civic cleanliness question, if not one where public health, with the available laws, was concerned. He reviewed the collection of garbage in many Massachusetts and Rhode Island cities, saying that it has been found where only ashes were collected, 14 to 45 per cent was found to be garbage. It was his belief that the matter could be best regulated by the town of Westerly as a whole, and, on a basis of figures compiled, and on Westerly's population of 9,000, four cubic yards of garbage and 23 cubic yards of ashes a day would have to be cared for. The simplest way for the town to care for the expense would be by adding the cost to the present tax rate and contracting for removal. It would be a campaign of education for the whole town and when it was thoroughly understood there would be no confliction with the Pleasant View, Watch Hill and Westerly fire districts. He said that Pleasant View and Pawcatuck fire district now had their refuse removed by contract. Another alternative would be to have legislation enacted so that the Westerly drainage district could include the work in its department and that the town of Westerly should own the trucks and have someone with authority in charge. The committee was continued for further review of the subject.

Col. E. E. Whipple of the Westerly Historical society, a committee on placing signs on old houses, asked for assistance from those who have knowledge of the builders and dates of the erection of old houses. A letter was read from Mrs. Arthur B. Lisle of the South County Garden club, relative to her co-operation in the removal of unsighly signs and sign boards.

It was voted that the sessions during July, August and September be omitted, the next meeting to be held subject to the call of the president.

Col. A. E. Dick, a resident of Watch Hill and Winter Park, Fla., spoke at length on the growth of the southern "City of Homes" after the women's club, business, men's association and board of trade had merged into a chamber of commerce of 1,500. The colonel waxed eloquent on the charms of Winter Park as a winter home and Watch Hill as a summer home, which last remark brought forth great applause.

Women In Forefront

Women probably have more to say about municipal affairs in Bolgorovsky, a city near Novgorod, than in any other city in the world.

In the recent election of 89 members of the soviet city 43 women won seats. This year 43.5 per cent of the population voted, compared with 7.7 per cent last year. By occupations the soviet consists of 23 workmen, 24 clerical employes, 6 intelligentsia, and 37 housewives and professional persons. Of these, 19 are Communists and 4 members of the Komsomol, or young Communists.

TODAY'S EVENTS

Thirty-two years old today, the prince of Wales is four years older than was his father when he married and ten years older than was Edward VII, when he was wed.

Clarence Eddy, the dean of American organists, whose playing delighted the visitors to the Philadelphia centennial half a century ago, is 75 years old today.

RULES CONCERNING DOGS IN THE TOWNS OF GRISWOLD AND PLAINFIELD

Whereas, a rabid dog has recently run at large in the towns of Griswold and Plainfield, thereby exposing persons, dogs and other domestic animals to the infectious disease known as Rabies, now

Therefore, the Commissioner on Domestic Animals, deeming it reasonable and necessary for the security of the inhabitants and their property and to prevent the spread of said disease, and to protect the public therefrom, in pursuance of the authority given under Chapter 263, Public Acts of 1925, hereby makes and promulgates the following rules and regulations for confining, controlling and destroying dogs and other domestic animals in the towns of Griswold and Plainfield:

1. All dogs or other animals in said towns known to have been bitten by a rabid dog or other animal shall forthwith be mercifully killed by the dog warden of the town unless the dog so bitten has received, prior to the time of the biting or inoculation by a rabid dog, a vaccination treatment known as the anti-rabies vaccination, which treatment must have been applied by a registered veterinarian who shall furnish the Commissioner on Domestic Animals and the dog warden of the town a certificate to that effect, giving date of application of treatment, the method used, and the name of the manufacturer of the biological product so used; or unless a dog which has been bitten by a rabid dog shall have received within three days from the time of biting or inoculation, the first injection of the treatment known as the anti-rabies treatment or Pasteur treatment for animals, such animal being held in quarantine while under this treatment and until released in writing by the Commissioner on Domestic Animals or his agent.

2. All dogs in said towns known to have been in contact with a rabid dog but not positively known to have been bitten by said rabid dog, and all dogs showing symptoms of rabies shall be quarantined in close confinement to the acceptance of the dog warden and the special deputy until released by the Commissioner on Domestic Animals or his special deputy.

3. All dogs in said towns shall be quarantined in close confinement or securely chained on the premises of the owner or keeper and no dog shall be shipped, taken or removed out of the towns of Griswold and Plainfield without written permission of the Commissioner on Domestic Animals. No dog shall be allowed to go at large from and after the date these rules shall go into effect until the same are rescinded.

EXCEPT

(a) Dogs being led or held on leashes of not more than five feet in length in the hand of the owner, keeper or attendant, provided such owner, keeper or attendant is of responsible age.

(b) Hunting dogs while actually engaged in hunting game accompanied by a licensed hunter.

(c) Sheep and cattle dogs while actually engaged in driving or tending sheep of cattle and accompanied by and in control of the owner, keeper or herdsman.

(d) Dogs which have been vaccinated from ten days to one year prior to June 14, 1926, under proper certification.

4. The dog wardens or any constable or police officer having jurisdiction in said towns shall humanely kill all stray dogs which they may find at large without collar and license tag attached. Said dog wardens shall capture and take into their custody every dog in said towns found with collar and license tag attached NOT confined and controlled agreeable to the foregoing, and shall impound and hold such dog so seized two hours and kill the same if unclaimed as is provided by law.

5. These rules shall take effect at 12 o'clock noon, Eastern Standard Time, the 27th day of June, 1926.

PENALTY

Section 32, Chapter 269, Public Acts of 1925: "Each person owning, keeping or harboring a dog who shall violate any provision of this act for which no other penalty is provided or any rule legally made and published, for restraining or destroying dogs, shall be fined not more than twenty-five dollars or imprisoned not more than thirty days or both."

MARKET WAS IRREGULAR

NEW YORK, June 23—(AP)—Bullish demonstrations in a selected list of oil and railroad shares featured today's irregularly higher stock market, which was called upon to absorb a rather larger volume of profit-taking. Trading showed a further falling off in volume, the day's sales aggregating 1,588,700 shares, compared with 1,745,200 yesterday and 2,230,600 last Friday.

Merger reports, involving several of the California and mid-continent companies, combined with reports of large current earnings and official assurances that trade conditions were satisfactory, provided the background for the advance in the oil issues. New peak prices for a year or longer, were attained by Texas company, Phillips, and Standard Oil of California, Union Oil of California, which has been associated with them in three other companies, in consolidation rumors, rallied 2 points to 55. Attempts to bid up Maryland and Pan-American B, failed to make much headway.

Excellent May earnings reports furnished the basis for the advance in the railroad shares, the average of 20 leading issues in that group touching a new 1926 record. Several in this group also broke through to new high levels, the list including Union Pacific, Lehigh Valley and Gulf, Mobile and Northern common and preferred.

Profit-taking was particularly heavy in some of the standard industrials although U. S. Steel common developed an outburst of strength in late trading, touching 139 and closing at 138 1-4 up 3-4 net after having sold down to 136 1-2 in the morning. General Motors, Baldwin, Coddenson Electric, Coca Cola, Marine preferred, Mack Truck, Pierce Arrow, Postum Cereal and Woolworth, all sold down 1 to 3 points.

Pools were again active in a number of specialties which have promising dividend or merger possibilities. Pullman touched 182 1-2, the highest price in 17 years, and net gains of 2 points or more were recorded by Atlantic, Gulf and West Indies, Howe Sound, Federal Mining and Smelting preferred, Great Western Sugar, Savage Arms, Simmons company and Sloss-Sheffield Steel.

Commodity markets moved within rather narrow and irregular limits. Active wheat futures yielded slightly in reflection of favorable weather reports in the northwest. Cotton closed 24 points higher to 5 points lower, with the strength of the near months contrasting as the feature. Raw sugar was unchanged, but the futures market was slightly easier. Coffee closed unchanged to 5 points lower. Call money renewed at 4 1-4 per cent and held steady at that figure all day. Banks called about $10,000,000 in loans but there seemed to be plenty of funds available at the renewal rate. Time money rates were slightly stiffer, being quoted at 4 1-8 to 4 1-4 per cent. Commercial paper rates were unchanged.

Reactionary tendencies predominated in the foreign exchange market. Demand sterling held firm at $4.86 3-16. French francs broke about 7 points to around 2.56c in reflection of the difficulty experienced by Premier Briand in forming a French cabinet, but they recovered half their loss in late trading. Spanish pesetas ruled about 13 points lower around 16.20 cents.

The funeral of Walter Louis Fedler was held Tuesday morning at 8:45 from his home, 142 West Town street, to the Sacred Heart church at nine o'clock the pastor, Rev. Charles W. Brennan, celebrated a requiem high mass, which was attended by relatives and friends. The musical part of the mass was under the direction of the organist, Mrs. William A. Murphy, during which the choir sang The organist, Miss Mary Buckley sang De Profundis at the offertory, and for a working hymn, she sang Some Sweet Day. For the recessional, the choir sang Lead Kindly Light. There were beautiful floral pieces. The bearers were Delo Herbert, August Fedler, Jr., East Brookfield, Mass., Charles Bradley, William Weeks, Joseph Fedler of Warren, Mass., and Louis Fedler. Burial took place in St. Mary's cemetery where Rev. Father Brennan performed the committal service. Cummings and Ring were in charge of the funeral arrangements.

Preparatory to his sermon at the Sunday morning worship at the First Congregational church, the pastor, Rev. Burton F. Bailey, made special reference to the eucharistic congress of the Catholic denomination, which opened in Chicago Sunday morning, this vast body coming together in recognition of Jesus Christ.

For the theme of his sermon Rev. Mr. Bailey preached eloquently from the book of Daniel, first chapter, tenth verse. But Daniel purposed in his heart that he would not defile himself with the portion of the king's meat, nor with the wine which he drank, therefore he requested of the prince of the eunuchs that he might not defile himself.

Considering the Lilies, was given as a duet, in pleasing voice by Miss Bernice Underwood, soprano, and Mrs Charles Schwenk, with Organist Herbert L. Yerrington accompanying.

At six o'clock the junior and senior Christian Endeavor societies, held a joint meeting with several members from each society having an important part on the programme. The topic used was What We Learn from the Out of Doors.

True Recreation, Mark 6:31, with special reference to 30-44, will be the theme of the Congregational midweek service Thursday evening.

Miss Effie Ladd, was the leader of the Young Peoples Christian Endeavor service, Sunday evening at the First Methodist Episcopal church, where the topic assigned was How Much of a Goal Should Money Be? Matthew 6:19-24, 33.

JOHN VERNET FAMILY GROUP—PAINTED IN NORWICH IN 1803 BY JOHN TRUMBULL

TRUMBULL PAINTING OF NORWICH FAMILY GROUP BROUGHT TO LIGHT

The Bulletin is indebted to Anne Leg French of 69 North River street, Wilkes-Barre, Pa., for the photograph from which the accompanying cut is made, reproducing a painting of great local historical interest as it was painted in Norwich by John Trumbull and is a life size group of the family of John Vernet who married Ann Brown in Norwich in 1802.

In a letter accompanying the photograph of the painting, Mrs. French writes:

"I think that you will probably be much interested in an extraordinary discovery which has just been made in the Wyoming valley (Penn.) of three original portraits by John Trumbull, which have until this time been unknown to history.

"As all three were painted in Norwich in 1805, the subjects being citizens of Norwich at that time, I am sending you a photograph of the largest picture, a life-size group of the family of John Vernet. It was painted from the porch of the Vernet house and the scene in the background is a view of the Thames river from that spot. John Vernet was visiting the Vernet family during the painting of the portrait and because he was a personal friend, put more work in detail upon the background than was his custom.

"John Vernet was born in Forschviller, Lorraine, France, on Oct. 6, 1764. He died in Port au Prince, Hayti, in 1827 of yellow fever. He was a trader with the West Indies. He married Ann Brown in Norwich, Conn., on Dec. 15, 1802. The two children in the picture are John Gill Vernet, born Oct. 13, 1803, died at East Whiteland academy, Chester Co., Pa., Aug. 29, 1819; and Peter Croise Vernet, born Aug. 10, 1805, died in Florida, Aug. 1, 1840. The woman in the picture, Ann Brown Vernet, visited in this city (Wilkes-Barre, Pa.) when she was an old lady and only the other day I talked with someone who could remember having met her in their tiny childhood.

"The pictures are the property of the direct descendant of John Vernet. The two single portraits (half length) of which I have no photographs are of John Vernet and of William Brown, his brother-in-law.

"Ann Brown Vernet is the great-great-granddaughter of the Jonathan Rudd whose romantic marriage is recounted by Miss Caulkins in the History of New London as follows: A young couple of Saybrook were to be married. The groom was Jonathan Rudd, Governor Winthrop does not give the name of the bride. The wedding day was fixed and a magistrate from one of the upper towns engaged to perform the rite, as no one in Saybrook was qualified to officiate on such an occasion. But, there falling a great snow, the paths were obliterated and the magistrate hindered from coming. Application was made to Governor Winthrop to come to Saybrook and unite the parties, but he, deriving authority from Massachusetts, could not officiate in Connecticut. So he proposed that they come to a place now called Brides Brook. On the bank of that little stream, met Winthrop and his group of friends from Pequot and the bridal train from Saybrook. Here the ceremony was performed without any accommodations except those furnished by the snow-covered earth, the over-arching heavens, and the sheltering side of a forest of pines.

"In the same family were found two miniatures, by Teasdale, of Ann Brown (Vernet) and her brother, William Brown, also painted in Norwich."

From Norwich History

In Miss Caulkins' History of Norwich (1874 edition), in the chapter describing places and personages at the town plot at Norwich Town, she says:

Brown's hotel was famous for good dinners and was patronized by gentlemen boarders. Merchants from the West Indies came there at intervals, and were always ready for excursions and outdoor amusements. Many a gallant hunting party with hounds and servants started from the town plot in those days. Jesse Brown, in the early part of the Revolutionary war, was in the service of the state as an express agent and confidential messenger. Before the conclusion of the war he built his house on the Plain, next to that of Dudley Woodbridge, and occupied it for many years as a hotel. It is now (1874) the residence of Mr. Moses Pierce, but the building has been repeatedly varied and improved, till it retains but a slight resemblance to the old hotel. Mr. Vernet, who married the daughter (Anne) of Mr. Brown, introduced into the garden of this house, about the year 1809, a species of grape not before cultivated in this region. It was propagated from this vine into other gardens, was highly prized, and popularly called the Vernet grape. It is not known where Mr. Vernet obtained it, but it is supposed to be identical with the Isabella. The original vine planted by Mr. Vernet still flourishes where it was set, and bears well, though upwards of 50 years old. Mr. Brown removed with the Vernet family to Wilkes-Barre, Pa., where he died in January, 1816, aged 63.

EXT MOOSE CONVENTION COMING TO NORWICH

By a close vote at the convention in Meriden last Friday it was decided that the state convention, parade and field day of the Loyal Order of Moose will be held in Norwich next year. The Norwich Moose were represented at the Meriden convention by J. T. F. Burke, Philip Baumgartner and Geo. Goepfert.

The big parade was held Saturday afternoon at 2:30 with hundreds of beautiful costumes in line, both men and women of Mooseheart Legion marching to Starlight park after dancing, entertainment, band concerts, degree work, and drill work were enjoyed. Norwich lodge received two loving cups, one for the best banner and the other for the best appearance in line for men and women.

At the lodge meeting Friday night committees will be appointed to try and make this the biggest convention ever brought to this city.

Washburn, Pine Grove, Niantic, where a delightful day was spent. At noon clam chowder, sandwiches, pickles, olives and strawberry shortcake were served. Boating, dancing and games completed a very pleasant day. At 6 o'clock a luncheon was served. The ice cream was furnished by one of the members, Mrs. Marie Busch, in honor of her birthday. The party arrived back in Norwich about 8 o'clock in the evening.

ART STUDENTS ASSOCIATION ELECTS ITS OFFICERS

The annual meeting of the Norwich Art Students' association was held on Monday evening in Slater hall. The president, Mrs. Edwin Higgins presided. The annual report of the secretary, Miss Ina Ufford, showed that this the 31st year of the association has been a prosperous one. Advancement has been made especially in two lines: in the enlargement of the docent work and in the formation of a new committee to cooperate with other societies to promote care for the trees of Norwich. Italian sculpture was the topic for the monthly meetings.

The treasurer Mrs. Frederick Sudlow, gave a full report, which showed that the finances of the society are in a flourishing condition. This is largely due to the success of the lecture by Royal Cortissoz.

Annual reports were given by the press and hospitality committees, by the advisory council and by the museum extension, formerly the docent committee. The advisory council by its chairman Mrs. Robert W. Perkins, nominated the following officers and chairmen of committees.

President, Mrs. Edwin Higgins; vice president, Mrs. Ozias Dodge; secretary, Miss Ina Ufford; treasurer, Mrs. Fred Sudlow; assistant secretary, Miss Mary H. Paddock; chairman of program committee, Mrs. John D. Hall and Miss H. R. Trumbull; chairman of museum extension committee, Miss Matilda Butts; chairman of the press committee, Mrs. Charles T. Bard; chairman of hospitality committee, Mrs. Frederick T. Sayles. Miss H. R. Trumbull was elected a member of the advisory council for 5 years.

Mrs. Higgins spoke of the good work which has been done the past year and of the encouraging outlook for the future. She appointed the advisory council as a committee to consider the revision of the constitution and report in the fall. Refreshments were served after the business meeting.

MANSFIELD TO ABANDON THREE OF ITS SCHOOLS

(Special to The Bulletin.)

STORRS, June 22—Decision to abandon three of the town's schools was made at a meeting of the Mansfield school committee at a meeting here last night, according to the announcement this morning by William F. Kirkpatrick of Storrs, secretary of the committee.

The schools in question, all of the one-room type, are located at Atwoodville, Mansfield City and the Whitney Hall school at Storrs.

Coincident with this announcement came word that M. Searles Light, director of rural education for the state board of education, will in the near future submit a report based on a comprehensive survey of the Mansfield school system. He has gone carefully into the entire school situation at Mansfield, and his report will be in the form of a definite outline that will furnish the basis for future development of the town's school system.

Decision to abandon the Atwoodville school was reached because of the small number of students enrolled there. The school had but ten pupils during the last half of the present year. Further, the committee felt that the students would have the advantage of better educational facilities at the new two-room school house at Mansfield Hollow, where they will be sent another year. It was pointed out by Mr. Kirkpatrick that under the new plan with the students in a two-room school, a teacher will have fewer grades to teach, which has been found to be a distinct advantage.

Students of the Mansfield City school will be sent to the Ridges school, and the changes here will be for the same reason as at the Atwoodville school. It has not been definitely settled where the students of the Whitney Hall school at Storrs will go when the fall term opens, but it will probably be either of the Mansfield Depot or Mansfield Four Corner schools. The Whitney Hall school is in poor condition, and is far from satisfactory for the use to which it is put. In his examinations of the school room, Mr. Light of the state board strongly urged that other quarters be secured as soon as possible.

These changes, which are probably the most drastic made by the school committee at Mansfield in some years, will eliminate two teachers from the town's list, and at the same time will relieve the town of going to extensive repairs on the schools in question. The committee considered the advisability of closing the school in Eagleville, but no definite action was taken at last night's meeting.

GIVEN COMPENSATION ON "CEMENT POISONING" CLAIM

A workmen's compensation award of $13.75 for 18 weeks has been made by Commissioner J. J. Donohue in the claim of Patrick Reidy of 194 Vauxhall street, New London, against Joseph A. St. Germain of New London, by whom Reidy was employed when he was taken sick, Oct. 17, with "cement poisoning." Payment is to be made forthwith, amounting to $247.50, and the insurance company is also to pay the bill of Dr. Frank M. Dunn, amounting to $247.50.

In his finding the compensation commissioner says: "The evidence discloses that the claimant was about Oct. 17 last working for the employer named on a contract job in Westerly, R. I., and was engaged in mixing mortar which contained among other ingredients cement, which mixture spattered on to his hands and arms, later involving his head and shoulders and both legs, an infection of extensive severity developing. From the medical evidence this constitutes an injury arising out of and in the course of claimant's employment, and he is found to be entitled to compensation.

"As the contract for employment was made in New London, where both parties reside and as the Connecticut act has extra-territorial effect, the insurance coverage provided the employer for his contracts in Connecticut by the respondent insurer named in the caption is found to obtain in this case when the work was being done in Westerly, R. I.

$35,000,000 WAS EXPENDED TO LEGISLATE PROHIBITION

Fact Brought Out Before the Senate Campaign Funds Committee—Wayne B. Wheeler Testified That For Years Preceding the Enactment of the 18th Amendment the Expenses Amounted to $2,500,000 Annually—Wheeler Explained That the Amounts Mentioned Did Not Include Money Spent Directly in Political Campaigns—Examination of Wheeler is Likely to Continue Several Days.

WASHINGTON, June 23. — (AP) — Wayne B. Wheeler again facing [illegible] senate campaign funds [illegible] Senator Reed of Mis[illegible] today began turning the spotlight on Anti-Saloon league finances.

[illegible] the general counsel and legislative agent of the league, the committee learned that the campaign to [illegible] at national prohibition had [illegible] new organizations of the country and that expenses during the [illegible] years of the fight [illegible] the eighteenth amendment [illegible] $35,000,000.

Wheeler [illegible] the stand after [illegible] with the committee had detailed figures for [illegible] and presented reports on [illegible] and disbursements during the [illegible] following enactment of the [illegible] law.

Wheeler explained that the organization [illegible] to secure [illegible] in 1920 [illegible] that was the next fiscal [illegible] year that it received practically [illegible] but it took only $400,000 [illegible] to maintain the organization each year almost [illegible] total [illegible] during the months [illegible] the salaries, speakers, publication [illegible] and [illegible] enforcement [illegible] in the states.

Wheeler told Reed that the income [illegible] national organization did not [illegible] all of the various state [illegible] that he had asked officials [illegible] to send in reports [illegible] state bodies.

The witness also explained that [illegible] amounted for did not include money spent directly in political campaigns; that there was a separate political committee of which Andrew [illegible] of Washington is treasurer, [illegible] that direct reports directly to [illegible] of the house of representatives [illegible] to law.

Mr. Wheeler also explained that [illegible] amounted for did not include money spent directly in political campaigns; that there was a separate political committee of which Andrew [illegible] of Washington is treasurer, [illegible] that direct reports directly to [illegible] of the house of representatives [illegible] to law.

As illustrative of the separation of state and national funds, the witness produced records of the Pennsylvania [illegible] for the last six years. [illegible] receipts for 1922 [illegible] including $3,442[illegible] for [illegible] With those of [illegible] that the receipts [illegible] a slight decrease [illegible] until they had [illegible] $97,649 in [illegible]

In putting [illegible] Wheeler [illegible] of the dramatic [illegible] later clashes last Thursday [illegible] when Reed admonished [illegible] to answer questions directly [illegible] informed him that [illegible] committee now was engaged [illegible] Pennsylvania's [illegible] primary. It was [illegible] the activities to that [illegible]

The committee is determined [illegible] into the Pennsylvania situation was made evident today [illegible] the issuing of subpoenas for [illegible] persons from that state. [illegible] men are supporters of both [illegible] the Vare-Beidleman and the Pepper-Fisher tickets.

A subpoena also went out for W. Scott McBride, general superintendent of the Anti-Saloon league, whose headquarters are at Westerville, Ohio. Mr. Wheeler also telegraphed to a number of other officials of the league in the village, requesting them to be here tomorrow for a private conference with the committee before the hearing is resumed.

These telegrams went forward after the conference between the committee and the dry leader, which revolved around Wheeler's charges that the brewery and liquor interests spent large sums in the 1926 Pennsylvania primary. Upon his first appearance he was asked to produce witnesses or evidence to support his charge, the committee having been unable in the examination of other witnesses to elicit any testimony bearing upon such expenditures.

Wheeler occupied the stand today less than an hour, the committee quitting after the hearing for the day because of important legislation pending in the senate. Scarcely had they reached the senate chamber before Senator Neely, of West Virginia, a democrat on the elections committee, offered a resolution limiting expenditures by or on behalf of senatorial candidates to $10,000 for both the primary and general election.

An exception is made, however, in the case of personal expenditures by the candidate himself for entrance fees or for traveling, stationery, postage, printing other than for use on poll boards or in newspapers, and for distributing letters, circulars or posters and for telegraph and telephone service.

Giving notice that he would discuss the resolution next Monday, the senator said the senate should advise the republican party in Pennsylvania that it could with disfavor upon any senatorial candidate expending $500,000 on the purchase of his nomination."

Senator Blease, democrat, South Carolina, said he hoped Mr. Neely would extend what the senate had to do with a party primary contest, while Senator Reed, republican, Pennsylvania, suggested that it explain wherein lies the justice of adopting rules of conduct after the act had been committed.

New witnesses in the Pennsylvania inquiry summoned today include State Treasurer W. S. Lewis, manager of the Pepper-Fisher central committee, and Thomas S. Baxter, president of the American bank of Philadelphia. It was expected that Boyce was summoned because of reports that notes for campaign purposes were discounted at the American bank.

Wheeler probably will occupy the witness chair again tomorrow. His examination is likely to continue over several days, especially if the committee eliminates its afternoon sessions until after the farm relief bill has been voted upon in the senate.

DOMESTIC LIFE OF "BUD" FISHER AIRED IN COURT

NEW YORK June 23— (AP) —The domestic life of "Bud" Fisher was [illegible] in court today as the rough [illegible] comic strip [illegible]

The comic artist, whose full name is Harry Fisher, appeared to oppose the application of his wife, the former Countess Adelia de Beaumont of Paris, for alimony and counsel fees pending trial of her suit for separation on the ground of cruelty.

The cartoonist and the countess were married on the Leviathan last autumn after a whirlwind mid-Atlantic courtship. Mrs. Fisher brought an [illegible] action but this was [illegible] an annulment suit [illegible] Fisher.

The latest suit is based on charges that the cartoonist beat his wife [illegible] and threw her out of their [illegible] apartment on Riverside [illegible] behind the charges in court [illegible] the session was reserved to [illegible] testimony to the middle Friday. [illegible] court was packed with fashionables [illegible] the Vanderbilt [illegible] the Goulds [illegible] Hitt brothers, and the [illegible] in the immediate cities and [illegible] the talk of Reno a year [illegible]

LLOYD GEORGE TO FIGHT EXPULSION FROM PARTY

LONDON, June 23—(AP) Speaking on "the future of liberalism," at a luncheon of the National Liberal club today, David Lloyd George, liberal parliamentary leader, kept his audience in roars of laughter by humorous sallies and sly digs at his political opponents.

He declared his ambition was not for leadership, but for service, and he added: At the same time, I do not want to ruffle anybody's feathers, but I want to say quite firmly that I am not going to allow myself to be driven out of the liberal party."

Alluding to Winston Churchill's recent utterance that Lloyd George's attitude in the general strike marked the beginning of Lloyd George's downward course, the former premier remarked that so far as he could see, the downward course began when he stopped Mr. Churchill's "mad adventures in Russia," and said, ironically, "since then I have touched the depths by mixing with archbishops and such like in suggesting that conciliation was a good thing to settle the general strike."

BILLS IN BOTH HOUSES FOR TAX REDUCTIONS

WASHINGTON, June 23—(AP)—Introduction by democrats in both houses of congress today of bills proposing immediate tax reductions brought to light a somewhat nebulous plan among members of the minority party for a general lowering of rates at the short session next winter.

The democratic sponsoring the bills said their action was prompted by the estimated treasury surplus announced at the budget meeting Monday night. In placing the surplus for the current fiscal year, ending June 30, at $300,000,000 and that for next year at about half that amount, President Coolidge at that meeting took the position that further tax reduction should be held in abeyance until the new revenue law can be given a thorough test.

EUCHARISTIC CONGRESS WILL CONCLUDE TODAY

CHICAGO, June 23—(AP)—After four crowded days of pageantry and prayer in all of Chicago's two hundred square miles, interims to the 28th international eucharistic congress turned tonight toward the campus of St. Mary of the Lake at Mundelein where the concluding ceremonies of the great festival will be witnessed tomorrow. Preparations to accommodate 750,000 persons have been made.

The Chicago sessions ended today with a fourth great throng assembled in Soldiers' field for solemn pontifical mass in the presence of Cardinal Bonzano, the papa legate.

More than 60,000 students from hundreds of parochial high schools academies and universities throughout the middle west paraded the field after the mass, passing out of the stadium in a procession of music and color which extended more than two miles through the Loop to the north.

Congress officials announced tonight that more than 800,000 persons participated in or sought admission to the four services in the stadium since Monday.

Today's mass was celebrated by the Right Rev. E. F. Hoban, auxiliary bishop of Chicago and honorary president of the congress. Cardinal Daugherty of Philadelphia delivered the sermon. His text was Christ's command to all men to "Love ye one another as I have loved you."

While the throngs were passing out of the arena, the first special train left the north end of the city for Mundelein. It carried the cardinals and bishops who were guests tonight of the papal legate at a banquet on the seminary grounds.

Arriving before sundown, the prelates found hundreds of visitors already camped in the lowlands on the seminary campus. Some were pitched in the fields; some in permanently parked motor cars at the roadsides; others sharing the cities and spare quarters of the thousand townspeople of Mundelein.

The eucharistic procession, the climatic event of the congress will begin at the outdoor sanctuary before the seminary chapel immediately after solemn pontifical mass is celebrated by the legate.

The mass is scheduled to begin at 11 o'clock. The procession will be three miles one and will wind a course of four miles around the inland lake at the seminary grounds returning to the chapel about six o'clock.

AMNESIA GIVEN AS HIS GROUNDS FOR DIVORCE

BRIDGEPORT, June 23—(AP)—Until recently a victim of hysterical amnesia seizures which literally converted him into a new woman completely changed his personality, caused him to forget who he was and where he was from and to utterly wipe out every vestige of memory concerning his past life, James L. McIntosh, 29 years old, a mechanical dentist of 196 Division avenue, Shelton, appeared before Judge Alfred V. Baldwin in superior court this afternoon and asked that he be divorced from a woman he could not remember when he married and whom he did not remember ever having seen, "if she was in this room now," he said "I would not know her."

Yet, it was shown that for six months he had been in close contact with and then had married a personable and well-educated young woman, Geraldine Snyder, of good family, during one of those queer interval's when so far as his mentality went, he was an individual wholly alien to his normal self.

It was from Geraldine Snyder, the wife of whom he has not the slightest recollection that McIntosh asked to be separated by decree of annullment, for he has letting his legal, undivorced wife, Mary Frances Nicholson McIntosh, to whom he was married in 1920 and who is the mother of his two children, Judge Baldwin deferred decision.

SWEDISH ROYAL COUPLE IN THE MIDDLE WEST

CHICAGO June 23—(AP)—The host to the throne of Sweden, Crown Prince Gust of Adolf, the Crown Princess Louise and their retinue were royally welcomed to the middle west today. At Gary, city of steel and steel, the prince inspected the 1,000 acre plant of the Illinois Steel company and on his arrival in Chicago his first act was to place a huge wreath at the foot of the statue of Abraham Lincoln.

Greeted by Mayor Dever and a committee of prominent citizens the prince and princess were almost crushed by the huge crowds desiring to shake hands with them.

The royal party were guests tonight at a banquet at which the prince, Mayor Dever and other prominent Citizens spoke.

Briand Has Formed His Tenth Ministry

It is Expected That Caillaux, as Finance Minister, will Endeavor to Stabilize the Franc.

PARIS, June 23 — (AP)—Aristide Briand, veteran French political leader, today brought into being his tenth ministry in an effort to solve France's pressing financial difficulties.

With the formation of the new cabinet came the appearance into the political limelight again of Joseph Caillaux, long a stormy petrel of French politics. M. Caillaux who was the premier of France in the days before the World war and who held the ministry of finance only recently, again has taken over the finance portfolio.

Although Premier Briand succeeded in forming a cabinet only after two futile attempts, his success is regarded in political circles as clearing the parliamentary atmosphere and as finally opening the way to a complete renovation of French finances and the stabilization of the franc.

The appearance of M. Caillaux again as minister of finance is felt to be an indication that he has won back the prestige he lost at the radical convention at Nice, just after he had returned from Washington where he was unsuccessful in settling the French debt to the United States.

Much comment has been occasioned by the fact that M. Painleve, who forced M. Caillaux out of his cabinet after the Nice convention, is missing from the government for the first time since he succeeded Premier Herlot in 1925. M. Painleve was minister of war in the Briand ministry, which resigned only a week ago.

The new cabinet is not a union of parties but made up largely of members of the Briand cabinet plus the new premier minister and several men suggested by him. Premier Briand apparently had hoped to bring about a start from the left towards the center, that is from radical socialists toward moderate liberalism.

Parliamentary experts however, predicted that the new ministry will rally a majority sufficient to put through parliament legislation necessary to support the vigorous policy of reorganization which the new finance minister has announced.

The strength of the new government toward the Washington debt settlement is a matter that remains to be seen. Premier Briand and most of his colleagues holding over from the preceding cabinet are in favor of ratification M. Caillaux is understood to have been opposed to adopted terms further than the absolute minimum of a safeguard clause, which would make French payments depend to a certain extent on the terms of reparations. It is affirmed in an authoritative source that M. Caillaux did not press this question before accepting his new post.

RIVERS AND HARBORS BILL IN THE SENATE

WASHINGTON, June 23.—(AP)—The house rivers and harbors bill progressed today to the senate floor where stiff opposition awaits at least two of its provisions, the Illinois waterway improvement and government purchase of the Cape Cod canal.

Although Senator Howell, republican Nebraska has announced that he will oppose the Cape Cod purchase, and Senators Willis, Ohio and Cameron, Michigan, republicans, have been leading the Great Lakes fight against the Illinois project, their wishes or no opposition today. The committee compromised by limiting the entire bill to [illegible] appropriations totaling approximately $50,000,000.

The senate committee added $6,500,000 to the flood control and irrigation project throughout the country and thereby fixed $12,000,000 as the sum that might be expended on improving the Mississippi between Kansas City and Sioux City, Iowa in such manner that the improvements might form a part of a six foot navigation channel. If the secretary of war should deem such a channel advisable in the future.

The senate committee made no further change in the $20,000,000 authorization for construction of the Illinois waterway between Lake Michigan and Utica, and which does not mention or recognize diversion of water.

VOTE EXPECTED ON FARM BILL IN SENATE TODAY

WASHINGTON, June 23.— (AP) — With a vote expected tomorrow, the McNary farm bill was shunted off the stage of the senate today after only one hour's consideration.

The fate of the measure appeared to depend on the action of a handful of senators on the doubtful bench and each side spent the day in an effort to win their support. The vote is expected to be so close that Vice President Dawes looms into commanding position as a possible deciding factor in the event of a tie, with both sides claiming him.

A Story of Abduction By Woman Evangelist

Aimee Semple McPherson of Los Angeles Claims She Was Being Held For $500,000 Ransom.

DOUGLAS, Ariz., June 23—(AP)—Aime Semple McPherson, missing Los Angeles evangelist, was brought to a hospital here today in an exhausted condition and related a tale of having been kidnapped by two men and a woman at Ocean Park, Calif., May 18, and held active in Mexico for half a million dollars ransom.

James Anderson, an American, said he found Mrs. McPherson in a state of collapse at Agua Prieta, across the border.

The evangelist, pastor of Angelus temple in Los Angeles, had been given up for dead by most of her followers who believed that she had been drowned in the surf at Ocean Park the day she disappeared.

Mrs. McPherson said she escaped from a Mexican shack in which she was held, while her captors were away.

Mrs. McPherson was identified by her mother, Mrs. Minnie Kennedy, at Los Angeles, in a telephone conversation with Willis F. McCafferty, editor of the Douglas "Dispatch," after the evangelist had revealed satisfactorily where she had received a long scar on the second finger of her right hand, had named a dead cousin and given the name of a pet pigeon.

Upon receiving the answers, Mrs. Kennedy positively identified the woman as her daughter and later talked to her on the telephone. The mother made arrangements to start immediately for Douglas.

The story of the abduction as told by the evangelist to the postmaster McCafferty and police was that she had been lured to an automobile while swimming at Ocean Park beach, on the pier of a woman who asked her to minister to a sick baby. Going with the women, she said, she was thrown into the car and drugged and knew nothing further until she awoke in the shack the following day, recently it, and attended by the woman who was called Rose. Here the two informed her, she said, that she was being held for ransom of $500,000.

Aside from a description of the captors, all of whom were Americans Mrs McPherson could furnish no clue to their identity. She declared she never had seen any of them before they seized her at Ocean Park. But would recognize them on sight.

Confident will [illegible] from Los Angeles that a thorough investigation would be started into the evangelist's story he last detailed authorities a score of [illegible] Americans [illegible] have gone into Mexico in search of the two. One group of American officials was accompanied by Mexican officials [illegible] the second group was headed by Ralph Morse, general manager of the Bisbee Review and Petroleum Interests of Douglas.

Mrs. McPherson said that she believed she was at the first place about four days and that after escaping she traveled about twenty miles. A different green impressed that she had gone about ten miles [illegible] south and east toward a mountain which police and Mexican officers believe to be Nacozari Mountains in Sonora, Mexico.

BYRD AND BENNETT HONORED FOR FLIGHT TO NORTH POLE

The Lieutenant Commander and His Aviation Pilot Were Welcomed by President Coolidge—The President Also Presented Medals Awarded by the National Geographical Society, Assuring Byrd That He Has Added Lustre to the Brilliant History of the American Navy—During an Ovation in New York Byrd Gave Credit to His Staff For Making the Flight Possible.

WASHINGTON, June 23.—(AP)— With the tumult of acclaim in New York's first great friendly welcome home still ringing in their ears, Richard Evelyn Byrd and Floyd Bennett came to Washington tonight to receive from the president in person tributes to their valor and high daring such as few Americans have known.

It was the nation's greeting to sons who pioneered for the flag the air route to the top of the world and it rounded out a day crowded and colorful with generous welcome and applause that it will live forever in the memories of these two gallant adventurers.

As the young Virginian and his chosen mate in the daring air dash to the pole stepped from the train that brought them from New York into the arms of waiting navy comrades, an audience headed by President and Mrs. Coolidge and including distinguished men and women from every corner of the nations public life that centers in Washington was packed into the auditorium to give them the honors they had won. There was no vacant seat in the great hall and many who failed to obtain coveted admission cards crowded in the streets about for a glimpse of the new national heroes.

The reception was organized by the National Geographic society with which Commander Byrd worked in close cooperation in planning for his historic flight across the Arctic wastes to view again the scene so long the highest goal of explorers yet probably never before glimpsed by human eyes except for that other great navy explorer, Rear Admiral Peary. And in honor of this modern follower in her dead husband's foot steps, Mrs. Peary was there on the platform to greet him together with cabinet officers, judges of the highest court, members of congress, diplomats and other distinguished guests of the Geographic society to which both Byrd and the [illegible] belong.

There were high officers of the sister services gathered through the audience, the uniforms and emblems the decorations won in conflict with many [illegible] making spots of color in the assembly. Also, as special guests of the society, Mrs. Woodrow Wilson had been invited and Anthony Fokker, the famous Dutch designer of the gigantic flying ship in which Byrd and Bennett triumphed over nature's frozen barriers on the polar route.

The purpose of the meeting was to witness the bestowal by President Coolidge upon Commander Byrd of the golden medal of the society which once six other men have received. It is the medal of honor of peaceful achievement in honor of the thing that tears the veil of mystery from the unknown parts of the world. Service above and beyond the call of duty as the military counterpart is awarded only for such gallantry in the face of the foe. A special medal also had been voted for Pilot Bennett.

In presenting the medals President Coolidge said:

"Word that the north pole had been reached by airplane, for the first time was flashed around the globe on May 9. An American naval officer had flown over the top of the world. He attained in a flight of 15 hours and 30 minutes what Admiral Peary, also a representative of our navy, achieved, 17 years before, only after weary months of travel over the frozen Arctic wastes. The thrill following the receipt of this news was shared by every one everywhere. It was the spontaneous tribute to a brave man for a daring feat. We, his countrymen, were particularly proud. This man, with a record of distinguished service in the development of aeronautics, had by his crowning act added lustre to the brilliant history of the American navy.

"In no way could we have had a more striking illustration of the scientific and mechanical progress since the year 1909. Then Peary's trip to the pole on dog sleds took about two-thirds of a year. He reached his goal on April 6. It was September 6 before news of the achievement reached the outside world. The naval officer of 1926, using an American invention, the airplane, winged his way from his base, a Kings Bay, Spitzbergen, and back in less than two-thirds of a day. And, a few hours later, the radio had announced the triumph to the four quarters of the earth. Scientific instruments perfected by this navigator, and one by a representative of this organization, were in no small degree responsible for success.

"We cannot but admire the superb courage of the man willing to set forth on such a great adventure in the unexplored realms of the air, but, we must not forget, nor fail to appreciate, the vision and persistence which led him ultimately to achieve the dream of his naval academy days. He never ceased the effort to prepare himself mentaly, scientifically and physically to meet the supreme test. His deed will be but the beginning of scientific explorations considered difficult of achievement before he proved the possibilities of the airplane.

"Lieutenant Commander Richard Evelyn Byrd, your record as an officer and as a man is illustrious. You have brought things to pass. It is particularly gratifying to me to have this privilege of welcoming you home and of congratulating you on behalf of an admiring country; and to have the honor of presenting to you the Hubbard medal of the National Geographic society.

"And, I take further pleasure in presenting to you, Mr. Floyd Bennett, aviation pilot, U. S. N., this medal awarded to you by the National Geographic society for your distinguished service in assisting and in flying to the north pole with Mr. Byrd."

Three short boxing bouts that have been arranged in connection with an observance of the Fourth in Danielson will bring together Batty Hill and Sonny Mays in one event, Young Major and Kid Socquet in another and Kid Psloquin and Teddy Duplus in a third. All are town boys and amateurs. Each bout will be of three rounds. It will be an open air event, and, as the saying goes, easy to look at, for there is great interest and a vast difference of opinion as to the winners in each of these events.

Charles A. Downs pastor of the Woodstock church preached Sunday morning from the text James 3-17 and spoke of the wisdom that is from above. Wisdom is highly excelled in regard as well as biblical literature. Wisdom and knowledge are not synonymous. Wisdom from above causes one to shrink from contamination, stand on safe ground and avoid the questionable. It prompts its possessors to practice a "sweet reasonableness" in at Salem for the graduation exercises. world wisdom is too often like an iceberg and chills the finer sensibilities.

At the commencement exercises last week in the Mass. State Normal school of Salem, Mass., Miss Lucile E. Downs of Woodyear graduated, receiving the degree of Bachelor of Science in Education, and was the highest honor pupil in a class of 191 graduates. Miss Downs, born at Hudson, So. LEARN TO SWIM

In the plan which has been made by the Y. M. C. A. to give free swimming lessons to all boys who cannot swim, between the ages of 11 and 18, there should be the heartiest cooperation on the part of those for whom this advantage is provided.

We are on the threshold of the swimming season the period of the year when many are at the seashore the lakes, the ponds, when many are going in bathing and others are bound to be pleasure seeking in boats and canoes. This means that those who do not know how to take care of themselves in the water should be instructed.

It may be said that those who keep away from the water do not need to know how to swim. That may be true, but there's no telling when the knowledge can be put to the best use and against the possibility of doing as others do or of being unexpectedly required to give aid to others or to look out for oneself in an emergency the value of knowing how to swim cannot be too highly rated.

On the other hand there are many who are going to learn to swim anyway. For them it is of no small importance that it be done under safe and efficient conditions, and it is for such that the Y. M. C. A. is offering a service of the highest character. The opportunity is one that should be made good use of.

Thousands are prevented from drowning each year but many who were drowned might have escaped such a fate had they known how to swim. The instructions that are offered must therefore be regarded as a protective and preventive community service.

Probably there is no better exercise and sport than swimming. The time to learn is when young, for like many other things it is much easier to acquire at that time, but contrary to the ideas of some it is preferable that there should be careful instructions given to beginners than to take them out in a boat, throw them overboard and demand that they swim ashore. This is the season when learning to swim has its greatest appeal and those who are ready to teach should get a prompt and encouraging response from the eligible.

COMMANDER BYRD'S SUCCESS

There was a rousing send off given to Lieutenant Commander Byrd when he left New York for Spitzbergen, from which point he was to make his flight to the north pole. That was last April. There was more or less uncertainty about his being able to carry out his flight, but there was recognition of his ability and there was the hope that he, as an American, would be successful.

Not quite three months have passed and he is back. He was given a most hearty welcome as he sailed into the port of New York and with good reason. He comes back with the unusual honor of being the first to fly over the north pole, a flight which was accomplished in a somewhat different manner than had been anticipated under his plans and without the utilization of time in the establishment of a second base from which to hop off for the pole.

There is a high degree of satisfaction for the backers of the Byrd expedition. They had confidence, even as he did, that it could be accomplished and were ready to lend their backing. But what they did is no more than others have done under like conditions. Confidence is not the determining factor in such undertakings, as many of the polar explorers know by their records. Careful preparations, good conditions, skillful handling all figured prominently in the success of the trip and in view of the region that was visited signal is not to be lost of the part which good conditions played in the success, for careful preparations and skillful handling might have gone for nought under bad conditions.

The distinction that comes to Commander Byrd is second to that gained by Admiral Peary only because of the matter of time. Each reached the same point practically by different methods. Admiral Peary had the satisfaction of setting foot on the top of the world while Commander Byrd flew over it. But there are enough honors for both, and even sufficient left for Amundsen for the subsequent trip across the polar region in an airship. It has been a great year for seeing the pole from the air.

WHERE SERVICE WAS COSTLY

On many occasions it has been difficult to explain the reasons for action or non action in connection with the administration of the New York police department. When conditions have arisen which seemed to call for drastic steps, nothing has been done. When at other times what seemed to be a commendable thing was done it has been accompanied by dismissal.

A case of the latter character came to attention this week, when a chaplain of the police department was asked by a dying patrolman to draw up his will for him and to see that it would be legal. The provisions were dictated by the man on his deathbed and after being put in proper shape by the chaplain were signed and witnessed in a lawful manner. There was no influence brought to bear by the chaplain whose service was that of a friend in the time of need. Because it later developed that the patrolman had had some trouble at home and been disowned by his family and declaring that he was alone in the world gave his money to the person he wanted to receive it, his boarding house keeper, a contest of the will was started by his mother who had disowned him, but the document was upheld by the court.

The chaplain was the innocent party to all this smixup. And yet because he was expected to give what aid he could in his capacity as a chaplain, his resignation was called for by the police commissioner and he is out of the department and a job.

It is apparently one of those cases where the chaplain is blamed for what he did and he would be blamed if he had refused to give the desired assistance to the dying policeman. The resignation was asked by the commissioner because the case had brought embarrassment to the department, but it doesn't appear to have been the act of the chaplain, which would have been no different had a lawyer actually drawn the will, that brought embarrassment to the department so much as that of the policeman who knew that he was dying and knew what he wanted done with his money. Just where any embarrassment accrued to the department anyway is a bit difficult to see.

PRIMARY IN LIMELIGHT

Probably there is nothing unusual about indications of a division of opinion in New Jersey over the desirability of retaining the primary system. There are those who have always been convinced that the primary was the desirable thing. They have recognized the merits theoretically and feel that if everything goes as intended it is the right method to use.

There are also those who have considered that the primary system was good only in theory and that when put into practice there would be disclosed opportunities for making it quite as objectionable as the convention system. They have been watching the primary results for the purpose of saying "I told you so," and they are not losing any opportunities to back up their position by pointing to the situation in Pennsylvania.

It is well that New Jersey, or any state for that matter should give its attention to the respective merits of the two systems with the desire of returning to or sticking by whichever is considered the better. Those who favor abandoning the primary could ask for no stronger talking point than what has been furnished by the recent primary campaign in the adjoining state. The primary may never have been intended to be accompanied by such an expenditure of money and yet it gives encouragement to that very thing and the outlays can be pointed to as being entirely legitimate.

Persons New Jersey and some of the other state will see reason for placing restrictions upon the primary, even if it is not abandoned, but it would be more surprising if there failed to be a discussion of the primary, pro and con, as the result of Pennsylvania's case, than there is because of it. The limelight has been thrown on the primary.

MEMORIALIZING CUSTER'S LAST STAND

Marked was the contrast in the conditions which prevailed 40 years ago this week and those which accompanied the pageant on the Little Big Horn river in Montana in connection with the observance of the anniversary of Custer's last fight.

General Custer with less than 300 men during the days of the Indian wars undertook the impossible task of overcoming a force of Sioux, Cheyennes and Crows of ten times his strength. Caught in a position where it was impossible to escape, there was nothing to do but fight till the last man was killed. There was no more hope for success than there was for the famous light brigade. It meant the end of a valiant body of Indian fighters who served in defense of the American frontier, but it also meant the turning point in our relationship with the Indians. It was not the last battle, but conditions began to change for the better and it was significant that this June there should have been a gathering of the United States troops and the representatives of the remaining Indian tribes, now occupying reservations under government protection, on the same ground where that bloody, one-sided struggle took place.

The pageant, with the troops and the Indians gathered under peaceful conditions, was a fitting memorialization of what took place there a half century ago. It indicates the progress that has taken place in that period, the vastly better relationship and the many changes that have accompanied the improvement, changes which are permanent and for the better.

FROM LUCILE'S DIARY

Aunt Annie and a friend of hers, Miss Belle Higgins, came in from the country last week to stay a few days with us. I told mother that I thought it was most inconsiderate of them to drop in without notice.

"Not at all," disagreed mother. "You must remember how often we have run out to the farm for a little outing, particularly you, Lucile, without even asking if it was convenient. We should be glad to have Annie feel that she can come in this way and bring a friend. I am sorry though, that I happen to be so busy with my church guild work this week and Fannie is too, so you'll have to do most of the entertaining. Annie is very anxious to see 'Bowbells.' You'll have to get tickets for that and take her and Miss Belle to the matinee tomorrow."

"But, mother I've seen that. Why can't we go to some other play?"

"Because that's the one thing in town your Aunt Annie particularly wishes to see. It won't hurt you to see it again, Lucile."

"No, but it does seem a waste of money to buy a ticket for me to see a play a second time. The tickets are $2.50 apiece." I said, hoping to touch mother's economical nature.

"Well, it wouldn't be nice to let them go alone, and you're the only one who can take them, and your father is glad to pay for the seats, so why worry?" asked mother crisply. "You don't often object to spending your father's money."

I did not reply to this little thrust, but I made up my mind that just for the principle of the thing I would save a little money on my own ticket to Bowbells. I had pledged $2 to some charity that Marianna Oliver is raising a fund for and a thought how much more sincere a gift it would be if I earned it by unselfishly taking a cheap seat at the theater which I was really being forced to attend.

"Lucile," said Aunt Annie at breakfast the day we were going to see Bowbells, "I'm anxious to have Belle see the Art institute. Could we go down early and put in an hour or two there?"

"Why, I don't believe we—" I began, but mother gave me a withering glance and remarked that that would be a delightful plan.

"You can have lunch somewhere in Michigan avenue and rest between the pictures and the plays," she said, and daddy immediately said he would finance the rations, and he handed me a bill. On the way downtown I explained to Aunt Annie that I had bought myself a ticket in the gallery.

"Why, my dear child, why did you do that?" she asked.

"I've already seen the play, auntie, and I think the money saved by not buying a parquet will help a good cause in which I'm interested, and it won't hurt me to mount to the gallery. So don't say another word about it, dearie."

She patted my hand and I knew that she was touched by my unselfishness. I left her and Miss Belle at the Art institute and I called George Requier to ask him to help me select a necktie for dad's birthday. Of course, I could not refuse when he insisted upon my having luncheon with him.

"Mercy on us, Lucile," exclaimed Aunt Annie when I rejoined her and Miss Belle, "I was afraid you'd been run over."

"Nothing like that. I simply was detained. Now you dears must have something to eat at once. A snack right here in the cafeteria will be best."

Aunt Annie gave me an odd look when I said I was not hungry, but I merely smiled and said we must hasten to the theater. We did hurry so much that just as we entered the theater I turned my ankle.

"Oh, dear," I cried. "I'm afraid I can't ever climb up to my seat. This silly ankle hurts so. I'll just sit here in the foyer and wait for you."

"Nonsense," protested Aunt Annie; "you'll do nothing of the kind. I'll go up in the gallery, and you can sit with Belle."

She simply would not take no for an answer, so I had to do as she said. When we got home and I limped in from the taxi and told mother about my ankle she said: "That's too bad, Lucile, but I suppose it will be all right by Friday evening for the Wayfarers' ball."

That certainly was just like mother. —Chicago News.

From Small Beginnings

Alexis Soyer, the Cook Who Made Himself Famous

In the Crimean war, when the British soldiers were badly provisioned and badly cared for; in the same war that called forth the beautiful services and the indignant demands of Florence Nightingale, the great war nurse, there appeared another person who offered what he had, for the benefit of the suffering soldiers. This person was no great man of wealth and power, but only a cook—Alexis Soyer.

"The soldiers have poor food; it is badly prepared; they starve and they die. I, I am a cook. I have been head cook for great people. I helped when the Irish were starving. Let me go to the Crimea. I will show how to cook for an army. I will pay my own way. Let me go and help."

That was the tenor of the notice that he put in the London Times offering to do his part for the country in which he lived. England accepted the offer and he went to the seat of war. There he threw himself into the cause, and by his direction of cooking for the soldiers did more valuable work than did many generals. Once before this he had offered his expert knowledge to the British government. This was when the people in Ireland were dying of starvation. On that occasion, through the newspapers also, he urged that he be permitted to go and help. He was sent to Ireland, and there also he fed the hungry.

Alexis Soyer was not an Englishman by birth. He had been born in France, and had not come to England until he was 21. When he was a boy in the suburbs of Paris he had worked as scullion and cook's assistant, had slowly learned the art of cooking, and had worked in a great restaurant in the gay French capital. France in those days was turbulent, with revolution in the air. Alexis Soyer looked for a more peaceful land, and emigrated to England. There he found work as head cook in the homes of the rich, and finally in a restaurant in London. He looked beyond his kitchens and sympathized with the sorrow and wretchedness in the world. In England as well as in Ireland and in the Crimea he did much to aid his fellowman. He died at 49 but he had lived a true man's life.

Little Talks on Thrift

GUIDES FOR PRACTICING THRIFT

Among the questions most frequently asked by those who are interested in practicing thrift are these:

"What proportion of my income should be paid for rent? How much should I save? What percentage should I budget for clothing, food, recreation education, etc.?"

A little thought will make it apparent that no universal rule could possibly be laid down to govern these matters. These adjustments of personal expenditure and savings can only be made by the individual.

It is generally considered for example, that 20 per cent is about the right amount to pay for rent. Yet there are those who are able to find such shelter as they require at much less than this, while there are families in some of our larger cities who have to pay as much as 50 per cent.

In the matter of food, clothing, savings, recreation and other requirements, the same differences are found.

If you are sound enough in your personal economics to appreciate the need and value of thrift, you certainly are sound enough to judge how your income should be budgeted.

Use common sense in these matters. Do not be a hoarder of a miser. Do not be a waster.

Remember that one of the elements of thrift is the development of initiative and self-reliance.

Thrift is self-discipline; strength of character; efficiency and a commonsense administration of one's affairs.

Practice it as seems best suited to your individual problems and forget about rules and formulas.—American Society for Thrift.

IN THE PUBLIC EYE

Gustav Lindenthal of New York, who has been awarded an honorary doctor's degree by the Vienna Technical school, is the consulting engineer and architect to whom the railroads and the public are under obligations for the great bridge over Hell Gate and the East river. Mr. Lindenthal is a native of Austria, who came to the United States in 1874, after having studied at Brunn and Vienna; and after practical experience in engineering in Switzerland and Austria, where he assisted in the building of railways and bridges. At the Philadelphia Centennial exposition he won recognition as an authority, which led to his employment by large corporations in the building of railroads. Since 1881 he has practiced his profession in New York city and today is recognized as one of the world's greatest bridge designers and builders.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

G. & E. Competition and Taxation

Mr. Editor: In the report of the gas and electrical department it shows a profit of $121,003.28.

A resolution was passed at the city meeting authorizing the city to borrow for the gas and electrical department sums of money needed not to exceed $150,000 for expansion and extension of the plant, etc. Will some certified accountant tell us if they made $121,003.28 last year, why they have got to borrow $150,000 at the present time?

Or perhaps the chamber of commerce in its monthly letter will explain whether this showing is a matter of fact or figures, and at the same time take up the interests of furniture, dry goods, hardware, electrical and plumbing merchants who have to pay a 5 per cent city and town tax to do business in competition with the gas and electrical department which has no taxes to pay and can fall back on these same merchants for any deficiency that develops in their department. And also tell us how the welfare of our business men, taxpayers and city in general is benefitted by a city department that claims to have made $121,003.28 the past year and at the same time is obliged to borrow $150,000 to keep going. Another one for the chamber to work on: How about the men on upper Washington street, "House for sale, all city improvements, only one tax," and the fellow next door paying two taxes? Anything fair or right about this? While we know the chamber of commerce is a busy proposition, formulating its monthly letter telling us what they have done and what we ought to do, it might take up the matter of annexation of all districts that are being furnished with city water, gas and electric light and let them pay to the Crimea. I will show how to cook for an army. I will pay my own way. Let me go and help."

That was the tenor of the notice that he put in the London Times offering to do his part for the country in which he lived. England accepted the offer and he went to the seat of war. There he threw himself into the cause, and by his direction of cooking for the soldiers did more valuable work than did many generals. Once before this he had offered his expert knowledge to the British government. This was when the people in Ireland were dying of starvation. On that occasion, through the newspapers also, he urged that he be permitted to go and help. He was sent to Ireland, and there also he fed the hungry.

Alexis Soyer was not an Englishman by birth. He had been born in France, and had not come to England until he was 21. When he was a boy in the suburbs of Paris he had worked as scullion and cook's assistant, had slowly learned the art of cooking, and had worked in a great restaurant in the gay French capital. France in those days was turbulent, with revolution in the air. Alexis Soyer looked for a more peaceful land, and emigrated to England. There he found work as head cook in the homes of the rich, and finally in a restaurant in London. He looked beyond his kitchens and sympathized with the sorrow and wretchedness in the world. In England as well as in Ireland and in the Crimea he did much to aid his fellowman. He died at 49 but he had lived a true man's life.

Little Talks on Thrift

GUIDES FOR PRACTICING THRIFT

Among the questions most frequently asked by those who are interested in practicing thrift are these:

"What proportion of my income should be paid for rent? How much should I save? What percentage should I budget for clothing, food, recreation education, etc.?"

A little thought will make it apparent that no universal rule could possibly be laid down to govern these matters. These adjustments of personal expenditure and savings can only be made by the individual.

It is generally considered for example, that 20 per cent is about the right amount to pay for rent. Yet there are those who are able to find such shelter as they require at much less than this, while there are families in some of our larger cities who have to pay as much as 50 per cent.

In the matter of food, clothing, savings, recreation and other requirements, the same differences are found.

If you are sound enough in your personal economics to appreciate the need and value of thrift, you certainly are sound enough to judge how your income should be budgeted.

Use common sense in these matters. Do not be a hoarder of a miser. Do not be a waster.

Remember that one of the elements of thrift is the development of initiative and self-reliance.

Thrift is self-discipline; strength of character; efficiency and a commonsense administration of one's affairs.

Practice it as seems best suited to your individual problems and forget about rules and formulas.—American Society for Thrift.

Stories That Recall Others

A Pusher

"Hera boy," said the motorist, "I want some gasoline and please get a move on. You'll never get anywhere in the world unless you push. Push is essential. When I was young I pushed and that got me where I am."

"Well, guv'nor," replied the boy, "I reckon you'll have to push again, 'cause we aint got a drop of gas in the place."

It's All Right Now

We read of police calls for all sorts of unusual things, but imagine the thrill in police circles when one force got a midnight S. O. S. call from a fashionable apartment house, and on their arrival at a dizzy speed found that the supposed murder that was being committed, was the shrill screams of a woman in the throes of night-mare.

It seems that a woman occupying an apartment alone, had roused the rest of the people by terrific screams and calls for help; then all was still.

The police roused the woman who said in a tired voice, "Oh! I'm all right now—I had the night-mare. Thank you and good night—"

And the police remarked "Can you beat it?" as they hustled away in the darkness.

CHILD TRAINING

BASIC RIGHTEOUSNESS
Edith Lochridge Reid

"I have to sweep up the crumbs I made on the paper when I ate my cracker," said Billy as he left the playmate and started for the broom.

"Does your mother make you?" asked Theodore.

"O no," replied Billy, gently giving sturdy strokes with the little broom, "but she makes me want to."

Certainly a worth while attitude was this which Billy's mother had been wise to cultivate in him—one which taught joy in doing right.

We hear frequent discussions and references with regard to good children and bad children but often the distinction and definition is confusing. A child who is the normal, observant, active boy or girl may not be grounded in the principles of right living and conversely, a child who for the moment is in disgrace may be habitually honest and by ethical instinct.

Examples of these contrasts come to mind as illustrations. Elizabeth has delightful manners and is considerate and polite at home. Her mother is quick always to mention about these exceptional traits which, of course, need encouragement. But there is another side to Elizabeth that is not so nice. She is selfish and deceitful, and among other children is regarded as disagreeable and undesirable under ordinary circumstances. Unfortunately, Elizabeth's mother is unaware of this latter trait. Although she is mostly with quiet and unobtrusive in her course of action and gives the impression of adults of a "good" child, her goodness is usually found wanting when the test requires personal decisions.

Across the street lives Raymond. One day his mother dressed him in freshrompers and told him to keep clean until she was ready to take him with her over to grandmother's. Within ten minutes he came in bespattered with mud and looking dejectedly.

"I was spoiling Willie and we rolled in a mud-puddle" he confessed stardily.

"Tell me about it," said his mother with great gasping in astonishment. Here was an understanding heart. "He's always spoiling the kitty and wouldn't mind and I know good rather I'd play in clean than keep clean."

You were right dear, for clothes are only meant for use and they'll wash. Sometimes there are things more important than the clothes—

While Mother aren't with us—and the lesson was in his tone

Remember Mother isn't with you—you must mind and mind to't things over and over and learn to think right, replied his mother.

What a contrast! Elizabeth, though carefully guided by grown people, unfortunately only negatively and superficially good, while Raymond was seeking rules as agreeable an impression as constantly developing ideas which are grounded in an ability to make right choices and fine decisions. He should know true values.

Little Miss Brighteyes

Who never puts his eyes to use
Should never offer an excuse
—Old Mother Nature.

Eyes are given us to use. They are given us for the purpose of finding out all that we possibly can with them. To use their eyes is one of the very first things the little people of the Green Meadows, the Green Forest and the Smiling Pool learn. Times without number their lives depend on the use they make of their eyes. So eyes are very important to all these little people.

Now in the Muskrat family there was one who was called "Little Miss Brighteyes" because it seemed that always she saw more and she saw things more quickly than did any of the others. There was very little those eyes of hers missed, very little, indeed. If any member of the Home Family came Smiling Pool during the day, she was sure to be the first of the Muskrat children to see it. If in the dark hours the owl came sailing over the Smiling Pool, the chances were that Little Miss Brighteyes would be the one to give the alarm. If Jerry Muskrat or Mother Muskrat had not already done so. Sometimes they would not give the alarm signal when they felt sure that Little Miss Brighteyes didn't see any of the others. They would wait to see whether one of the children would be the first to discover the danger. Nine times out of ten it was Little Miss Brighteyes.

It was not for her protector and sister that her eyes were so bright, and that she knew how to and did make such good use of them. One night she happened to be sitting on a little sailing, a mere mud landing Jerry Muskrat had built. He had built a number of these little landings around the Smiling Pool and along the Laughing Brook. On another little mud landing across the Laughing Brook sat her brother Little Mister Know-It-All. Little Mister Know-It-All was so busy eating that he wasn't paying the attention to anything else. The moonlight flooded the Smiling Pool and the Laughing Brook. The trees on the other side made black shadows. Right between the shadows it was bright as day. Little Miss Brighteyes was just eating quite as busy as her brother, but all the time she was eating she was using those two little eyes of hers. So it was that as she looked across the Laughing Brook she saw a dark form like a living shadow cross a moonlit space and disappear in one of the black shadows. Little Miss Brighteyes kept on with her eating, but she never once took her eyes from the shadow in which that dark form had disappeared. Presently she saw it come out into the moonlight again. It was only for a moment, but that moment was enough for her to know that it probably was an enemy. She knew of no one as big as that who was not an enemy. Still she didn't give the alarm.

Just as he plunged under water he felt something smart close to the root of his tail

"If I give the alarm without being absolutely sure that it is an enemy I will be laughed at," thought Little Miss Brighteyes. Besides, I am in no danger. Whoever it is, is on the other side of the Laughing Brook."

Then in a shadow just back of her brother Little Mister Know-It-All she thought she saw a movement. It came to her suddenly that whoever it was was trying to steal up on Little Mister Know-It-All. Little Miss Brighteyes dived, and as she dived she brought her tail down slap on the water. Little Mister Know-It-All jumped head first into the water, without waiting a second. He swam under water over toward Little Miss Brighteyes. They came to the surface where it was dark. "What was it?" whispered Little Mister Know-It-All.

"I don't know," replied Little Miss Brighteyes, "but some one was sneaking up behind you. Let us watch."

Side by side they floated and watched. Presently they saw the head of Old Man Coyote cautiously poked out from under some ferns. Such a disappointed look as there was on his face when he saw that no longer was there any one on that little mud landing where Little Mister Know-It-All had been sitting.

Through Comet's Tail

What if some day the earth should bump into a comet's tail? What would happen? Well, you ought to know, for just the other day you whizzed through the tail of Biela's comet, says Popular Science Monthly.

Compared with the earth, a comet is a porous thing, made of rocks and gases hanging loosely together. The only thing unusual as we shot through the tail was a shower of meteors that burned up like sparks from Roman candles far in our upper air.

Biela's comet was first observed in 1826. Whizzing through space, it was seized by the gravity of Jupiter. But this greedy planet, which has reached its tremendous size through just such stunts, did not succeed in grabbing it for good. It did affect it, though, so that it had to start on a regular pathway around the sun. That is why we can see it at regular periods.

ACCIDENTS WITH BUSES BRING FREQUENT COMPLAINTS

Accidents involving motor buses, or they, were by far more numerous in Connecticut last year than in any other class of motor vehicles in proportion to the number registered. The fact that the accidents involved buses does not necessarily indicate that the operators of the buses were responsible. There were 475 buses registered in the state, and 427, or 90 per cent of that number were involved in accidents. This does not mean, however, that all but 48 of the registered buses got into trouble on the highways, because the records show that some buses had more than one accident during the year. Only accidents causing damage in excess of $50 or personal injury are included in the compilation.

While the number of accidents reported under motor should be remembered that there were about 42,000 miles less run by motor vehicles during the course of the year. Without doubt losses in performance of the many motor vehicles are today in not more hazards of operation than many other classes of motor vehicles. Very few of the deaths reported in accidents involved buses, trucks and only one caused death.

In the year [illegible] a number of accidents reported was 70 per cent of the total registered in Connecticut. There were 10 more registered between this state in 1925 than in 1924.

Plow to plow, taxicabs had the highest percentage of accidents last year, according to the report submitted. [illegible] were 1,000 taxicabs registered in the state and there were [illegible] accidents reported, or 40 per cent of the number registered, as against 31 per cent in 1924.

Motor trucks, used as commercial motor vehicles were more frequently involved in accidents in proportion to registration, than were passenger cars. Accidents reported to have involved some personal injury totaled 10 per cent of the number registered in 1925 and 11 per cent in 1924, while accidents involving passenger automobiles showed a decrease of the number reported, 1925 and 14 per cent, thus showing a better safety rating for pleasure cars and a worse one for commercial cars in the past year.

Motor buses proved to be less hazardous to operate than any other type of motor vehicle. Accidents to motor buses last year amounted to 9 per cent of the number registered and those were 10 per cent as many in 1924.

JEWETT CITY, June 23—Francis Moriarty of Lisbon, who is 12 years old, caught Wednesday the largest trout reported in this section this year. It weighed 2 pounds and 9 ounces which is seven ounces heavier than any reported in Norwich this year. When he landed the fish he called to his father who was some distance away. When his father saw him the boy lay on the fish on the ground so the fish could not flop back into the brook. The handsome trout was on exhibition in Carey's window Wednesday evening.

WILLIMANTIC CAMP GROUND TO HAVE GREAT PROGRAM IN AUGUST

Plans that are outlined by Superintendent Rev. Myron E. Genter of this city and the executive committee of the Willimantic camp ground association indicate for this year's programme in August a much finer and broader programme than in other years. Many changes have been made, retaining the best in the old and readily embracing the best in the new.

Two great Sundays are to be featured on Aug. 15 and 22. Three bishops are expected to be among the speakers. Bishops Anderson and Badley already having been secured, and Signor Mario Capelli, world concert tenor, is to be at the camp ground for two days.

Dr. and Mrs. Milton S. Rees, leaders in evangelism, Dr. P. L. Frick, radio broadcaster of Schenectady, Dr. R. E. Gornall of Chicago, Dr. G. H. Slencer of Boston and many others are to be on the programme.

Each morning, periods for devotion and addresses on the church school, stewardship and missions, interpretation of religious facts and evangelism will be conducted by experts.

Each afternoon at 2 o'clock, there will be a diffeernt program.

Monday August 16, the Women's Missionary societies will have a field day.

Tuesday, the state W. C. T. U. will conduct a gold medal contest.

Wednesday, Methodism's World Service program will be presented.

Thursday, Dr. Rees will bring a great message on "The Need of the Church Getting Out into the Deep."

Friday, will be inter-denominational day, afternoon and evening. It is expected that Bishop Anderson will preside, and outstanding speakers of various denominations will participate.

Saturday will be set apart as a mass meeting for laymen and Bible classes will be given large place and seated by their delegations, but women as well as men from all parts of Connecticut are invited to hear one of the ablest platform speakers the west has produced.

On Saturday evening Dr. Frick will give his inspiring lecture "Nightingale Island," and Mario Capelli will sing.

Bishop Brenton T. Badley of India will speak on August 15 and later the bishop for the camp meeting last Sunday will be announced.

Registrations to classes have been discontinued and every feature of the week will be open to everybody and every day, for the purpose is to share all with everybody who desires to attend. Other communions are cordially invited by the officers to attend, not only on inter-denominational day, but are always welcome. Offerings will be taken at afternoon and evening services to help meet the cost of maintenance, as well as mornings of the Sundays. There will be special programs for children and youth each afternoon at 3 and an excellent committee on recreation will direct happy hours in tennis, baseball and mass play each day of the week except Sundays at 4 p. m.

The musical features will have a large part in this program and it is planned to have joy running over each day, as the bucket does at the mountain spring. Mrs. M. S. Rees will conduct a large chorus and one feature planned is that a large male choir will often sing at the big gatherings Mrs. Rees has traveled widely with her husband at home and abroad, has led assemblies of thousands with him on evangelistci tours over this country and the singing will be a thrilling factor during these days.

Dr. Rees is well known in New England as a master of the platform, is a prince among preachers, and will preach every night the earlier part of the week beginning Monday night.

Life will be more glorious for multitudes after hearing this winning leader of men. He will also have charge of a class each morning on Evangelism.

The coming of Signor Mario Capelli for two days will be a star attraction and a new feature in this assemble. It is said that Caruso declared that this young man would come to large distinction and many feel that Capelli is the logical successor as a world tenor. He has just finished a tour in Canada, and at present is singing on a tour in Europe, but will be at Willimantic Saturday and Sunday, August 21, 22, with his superb attractions.

The full program for this summer assemble will be released to the press before its publication, for use of the general public and Mr. Genter said that it was now expected that the last few items would be written before July first.

SCHOOL IN ROTARY HELD AT MEETING

Wednesday's meeting of the Norwich Rotary club was devoted largely to club matters, the programme being in charge of Dr. Hugh B. Campbell, chairman of the educational committee, who put on a school in Rotary. Subjects pertaining to education along Rotary lines were discussed by the various speakers upon whom Dr. Campbell assigned questions. Those to speak were Arthur M Brown, What is a Rotary club?; Frank R. Murdy, What Rotary Membership Means; John J. O'Rourke, Our Rotary Obligation; Judge Nelson J. Ayling, Honorary Membership in Rotary; E. A. Harris, Rotary Qualifications. Emery H. Davis, The History of Rotary; Charles L. Taylor, Rotary's Name; Clayton W. Burgy, Rotary International; E. Lazus Bliven, International Officers.

All the speakers brought a message of instruction to the Rotarians and the meeting was one of interest. The five-minute speaker was H. M. Leroy who spoke on the increasing number of motor vehicle accidents especially among the children Mr Leroy said that during 1925 there were some 6,000 children killed by automobiles in the United States and that there were 103 deaths in Connecticut He said that drivers of automobiles should endeavor to co-operate with the motor vehicle department in trying to eliminate these accidents by being careful about driving fast through thickly settled sections where children are liable to dart out in front of machines. Parents can help by teaching the children to be careful in crossing streets and also the few simple traffic regulations that prevail in the cities as regards the pedestrian. I firmly believe in the playgrounds movement as a means of keeping the children off the streets. The Rotary club should be an organization to sponsor this playground movement in every way said Mr. Leroy in concluding his talk.

At the business session President E. A. Harris presided with Lucius Briggs acting as song leader. Johnny Egan, was the pianist of the day, and upon request rendered his own arrangement of "Horse", which made a very pleasing piano solo. There were several vocal selections by visiting Rotarians and the guests.

TRYING SUIT OVER SALVATION ARMY BUILDING

The suit of Alonzo T. Letender of the city against the Salvation Army on a claim for a balance due for materials and services in making alterations in the Salvation Army and cadet on Cliff street between May 1, 1923 and Sept. 15, 1923 was on trial here Wednesday afternoon in the superior court before Judge Earnest C. Simpson.

Letender was represented by Attorneys Arthur M Brown and C. V James, while Salvation Army was represented by Attorney Hibberd R. Norman.

In Letender's complaint he claims the specific value of services and materials for which he is suing to be $1,852.45. He was the only witness for the plaintiff.

The defendant's answer is that the work was unreasonably delayed by Letender for more than three months, that the walls were constructed in an unworkmanlike manner and that extensive alterations had to be made at much expense by the Salvation Army.

Letender's testimony went into much detail as to figures on contracts and money that had been paid him. At the conclusion it was figured out by Judge Simpson that the main contract was $11,000, to which was to be added $1,425 and $150 and $3,212.91, a total of $15,787.91 Letender acknowledged having received $14,963.61.

William R. Dimmock, official architect for the Salvation Army, in whose office the plans of the building were prepared, took the stand for the defendant, testifying to the way he financed the weekly payrolls for Letender and telling of several different mistakes which occurred in the course of the alterations and of the cuts which he suggested Letender could get out of them the easiest so as to hasten the construction. As it was, the architect said, the building had to be dedicated before it was completed.

Boat Race Window Display.

A boat race window, arranged at Preston Bros. store on Main street, has three interesting pictures of Yale-Harvard races around which are grouped, the banners of the two colleges and a number of articles used in aquatic sports.

GROTTO SERENADE TO BLUE AND CRIMSON CREWS

If the weather man is at all favorable to jollity and frolic, members of Nemrod Grotto will tonight (Thursday) at 7 o'clock meet at their rooms to journey to Gales Ferry and Red Top for their third annual serenade to the boys of the Yale and Harvard crews on the eve of their prize event of the season.

Trailing by automobile to Gales Ferry all cars will be parked at the Country club from which point the Prophets will parade to Yale quarters for the first part of the evening's program headed by their uniformed patrol and band.

Completing about a 30-minute serenade at Yale, the pilgrimage will march to Red Top where in the manner the Harvard boys will be numbered a few drops of jollity in their blue bood flaming with that same spirit of goodfellowship as in past years.

Presuming that the serenade program will occupy a period of about one hour the entire party will return to the Country club where refreshments will be served and the remainder of the evening devoted to dancing through the courtesy of the club, while the Roamers orchestra will furnish music.

The general program is under direction of a special serenade committee assisted by Prophets Hagberg and Sherman in charge of the band and Prophet Brad Ricketts in charge of the patrol.

DIVORCE TO HUSBAND ON HIS CROSS-COMPLAINT

Divorce to Hiram Tarbox of Westerly was granted on his cross-complaint in the superior court here Wednesday morning in the suit of Edna Hadlock Tarbox of Ocaffee, Minn., vs. Hiram Tarbox. The divorce was granted on the ground of desertion Jan. 30, 1925, which was two weeks after the wedding.

Mrs. Tarbox had brought suit for divorce on the ground of intolerable cruelty since their wedding day, which Mr. Tarbox denied and had a cross-complaint entered by his attorney, Haggerd R. Norman on which Judge Earnest C. Simpson granted the divorce.

Other witnesses besides Mr. Tarbox were Henry Tyler, John Dennett and William Latimer. They testified that Mrs Tarbox had been seen in the company of a sailor. Dennett testified the court that he had seen her and the sailor in this city headed toward the railroad station.

Mrs. Tarbox did not press her petition, nor was she present to defend her husband's action. Attorney Morgan read a letter to the court, which he had received several days ago from Mrs. Tarbox, stating that she wanted to drop her petition and let her husband secure a divorce.

This (Thursday) afternoon at Morgan Park, New London, the Academy and Westerly High baseball teams will engage in the playoff game to decide the championship of the Eastern Conn. Interscholastic league. Both teams were tied at four wins and two losses at the end of the regular league schedule and the playoff game on neutral grounds becomes necessary.

Each nine has a decision over the other in the regular league schedule, Westerly winning 11 to 9 at the campus while the local squad travelled to Westerly and administered a 6 to 3 setback to the Rhode Island boys. Therefore, in reality this game will be the third game of the series.

Coach Joel Sherman of Westerly will present his strongest lineup for the fray for the winning of this game means the clinching of the large cup donated to the team winning the league championship three years. Westerly was the champion of the league in '23 and '24. The Westerly pitching burden will undoubtedly fall on either Henderson or R. Meikle with the remainder of the lineup practically the same as participated in all games throughout the season.

Coach Earle E. Brigham of the Academy will also have his strongest team in the starting lineup. Lloyd Jarvis, southpaw ace of the local squad, will without doubt receive the mound assignment and from the pace it which he has been travelling during the season the Westerly boys are in for a hard afternoon's work solving his offerings. Mace Goldblatt, who has done the majority of the receiving for the local team during the season will undoubtedly be behind the bat. Jarvis and Goldblatt team up well in the battery positions and should keep up their good work in this afternoon's important contest. The rest of the starting N. F. A. team will be practically the same as have performed during the past season.

The game is scheduled to start at 3:00 p.m. sharp (D. S. T.) and a banner gathering of supporters of both teams is expected to be on hand.

BON TONS VS. WARRIORS TONIGHT IN LEAGUE GAME

Provided that St. Peter does not bless us with more rain the Colored Bon Ton Stars and the Warriors will do their stuff at the Duwell field tonight. For some reason or other all things the season the league had met with several setbacks, including rainy days and it is hoped that soon things will start to break the right way and that the league schedule will run off smoothly.

This game between the Bon Tons and the Warriors no doubt will attract quite a little attention as the Warriors are a new team to the league composed of youngsters who have been play real bang-up ball during the season. The Warriors have been playing in the junior twilight league and have given a splendid account of themselves and surely will make a hit with the fans throughout the season over at the Duwell field.

Couture a youngster who only two weeks ago pitched against and won from the Fort Wright team will be assigned the twirling duties while Jap Burns another popular young lad from up town will do the catching. The remainder of the lineup is not known.

The Bon Tons who made their initial appearance last week against E. C. F. and were defeated have strengthened considerably and according to their Mgr. Pete Frost consider tonight's game as all ready in the bag. The Stars last week appeared stage struck for the first few innings which resulted in the E. C. P.'s heavy scoring, but as soon as they became acquainted settled down and played nice ball for the last couple of innings.

There will be no game on Friday night owing to the Yale-Harvard boat races.

DEMPSEY-TUNNEY FIGHT MAY GO TO CHICAGO

NEW YORK, June 23—(AP)—The heavyweight championship match between Jack Dempsey and Gene Tunney will be held on September 16, "somewhere west of the Hudson river," Tex Rickard declared today.

The promoter indicated that he is negotiating with interests in Chicago which might promote the match in the Soldiers field stadium. He also said that he has an invitation from Mayor Hague of Jersey City to take the match to the big pine saucer at Boyle's Thirty Acres, scene of the 1921 championship fight between Dempsey and Georgies Carpentier.

"The action of the New York state athletic commission yesterday, in legislating the match out of New York, will not affect the principals or the date one iota," declared Rickard.

"I'm going to promote the fight between Dempsey and Tunney on September 16 and if the New York state athletic commission wants to force me out of the state, I'll go elsewhere," he added.

"I was convicted yesterday, before I was tried. I knew just what they would do and I am prepared to continue with my plans despite their stand on the matter."

Rickard hinted that a syndicate of Chicago men have interested themselves in the match to the extent of asking for a price to promote the fight with his help. He said negotiations have been going on ever since he was convinced the New York commission was hostile to his plans.

The promoter is understood to have arranged to go to Chicago Saturday to discuss terms with the syndicate there.

The Chicago stadium in Grant park on Lake Michigan, will seat 100,000 for the army-navy football game this year, according to present plans, and undoubtedly could be made to care for 150,000 at a boxing contest. But the structure is so long and wide that many thousands would be unable to see a bout clearly. Temporary seats will be built for the football contest.

YALE-HARVARD FRESHMAN RACE WILL BE ROWED

NEW HAVEN, June 23.—(AP)—Definite announcement that the Harvard-Yale freshman race would be rowed on Friday was made tonight by the Yale university athletic association. Yale has a crew of youngsters, the members of which have been approved by the director of the Yale health department, to take the place of the original freshman crew broken up by the disqualification of six of its members for violation of the honor system in examinations.

A statement issued by Professor George H. Nettleton, chairman of the board of control of the athletic association, says:

"It is a satisfaction that provision for the freshman race, as planned in the joint statement of the Harvard and Yale chairmen of athletics, dated June 17 at Gales Ferry has now been made definite. The freshman race has not at any time been cancelled, and the inclusion of the Harvard freshman crew in the Harvard-Yale junior varsity race was proposed and considered only as a possible alternative, if preferred by Harvard or ultimately required under existing conditions.

"It is a pleasure on behalf of Yale to express appreciation of Harvard's courtesy in giving Yale full opportunity to determine whether the university requirements, physical and otherwise, could be duly met by the Yale freshman crew. The frank and friendly relations between Harvard and Yale have again been emphasized by the courtesy of Mr. Bingham and his associates."

FIVE AMERICANS LEAD IN BRITISH OPEN GOLF

ST. ANNES, England, June 23—(AP)—The first round of the British open golf championship developed into an American field day such as Great Britain has never before seen, with Walter Hagen leading a field of famous international players with a record 18-hole round of 68.

Bill Mehlhorn of Chicago was second with a 70, Al Watrous and Fred McLeod, third, with a pair of 71s, and Bobby Jones, fifth with 72.

Never before have British golfing fans witnessed a more impressive exhibition by Americans. Mehlhorn's superb 70, knocking a stroke off the St. Annes record since the course became a championship lay-out, was scarcely less brilliant than the surprisingly good scoring of Watrous and McLeod and the sensational recovery of Jones after a disappointing start.

Then came Hagen's stunning 68, making the second time that the course record was shattered by an American player in a single day. Three thousand spectators saw the veteran American star post one of the finest rounds of his competitive career. His sensational march over the St. Annes fairways saw him reach the 13th before he required more than par for a single hole, and here a topped second shot resulted in a five.

HARVARD TAKES BIG THREE BASEBALL TITLE

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., June 23.—(AP)—Harvard won the big three baseball championship today by drubbing Yale 13 to 5 in the second and deciding game of their series before a commencement throng of 15,000 on Soldiers Field. The crimson won 8 to 7 at New Haven yesterday after taking two out of three from Princeton.

Harvard went on a batting spree from the start collecting 20 safeties off four Yale pitchers. Captain Lee told the Crimson attack with four hits out of four times at bat and scoring four of his team's runs.

A double, two triples and four singles gave the Crimson five runs in the first inning, and avalanches of singles, walks and two errors accounted for three each in the fourth and seventh. Yale's big inning came in the fifth when Kline clouted a homer with two men on. Booth, Harvard's pitcher, showed signs of weakening and was yanked after two hits and a pass gave Yale a run in the sixth. Cutts, facing Captain Lindley with the bases full, pulled a line drive out of the air and doubled Mecklellan at first to retire the side. The score:

CHICAGO, June 23.—(AP)—Chicago took undisputed possession of second place today by defeating Cleveland 5 to 3 in the third game of the series. The locals concentrated their attack in four innings. SUZANNE REFUSES TO PLAY EVEN FOR ENGLAND'S QUEEN

WIMBLEDON, England, June 23.—(AP)—The queen of England came to Wimbledon today to see Mlle. Suzanne Lenglen perform in the golden jubilee tennis tournament. But the queen of tennis would not set foot on the courts.

Amazement swept through the thousands who had gathered to watch the matches, and then wonder as to the cause. Club officials hurried back and forth; there were consultations in various corners and whispered explanations.

Suzanne had been delayed in reaching the ground by a breakdown in her motor, and soon rumors were in the air that she had a return of the nervous manifestations by which she is occasionally afflicted.

Meanwhile the crowds became uneasy, but Queen Mary sat complacently in her gray silk and silver-gray turban, totally unconscious of the agitation that was going on within the confines of the clubhouse in an effort to bring the temperamental Suzanne to a realization that the queen and her loyal subjects were awaiting the coming of the little French star.

Suzanne was not to be gain, said. She was in an extremely nervous condition, she explained. She had been ill overnight, she had suffered from the heat, and, finally she declined to play in two matches on the one day—the singles and the doubles.

She protested against such an imposition and she had the support of her compatriots, Doroitra, Brugnon, Cochet and the others. She would not go on—and that was the end of it.

Borotra was summoned to the royal box to explain as he might the whole sad affair. The queen was very gracious, and learning that Mlle. Lenglen had a recurrence of a nervous affection, accepted in kindly manner Borotra's statement, rendered somewhat explosively in halting English, and the apologies of the officials for the non-appearance of the champion. She could well understand, she said, that the indisposition of a player might upset the schedule for the day.

Eventually the tournament committee decided to postpone both matches. Suzanne would not play in the doubles and Miss Mary Browne and Miss Elizabeth Ryan, the American pair, declined to accept a default. Suzanne even offered to withdraw from the singles, but as the question was finally arranged, both singles and doubles are on the programme for tomorrow.

Mack Decugis, the French captain, upheld Mlle. Lenglen in not playing the singles matches before the doubles.

"She has simply refused," he said, "and I think she has a perfectly strong case. This doubles match is of supreme importance to Mlle. Lenglen, for she is playing with Mlle. Aviasto against the American pair, Miss Ryan and Miss Brown, who may easily be considered Suzanne's strongest opponents."

It was pointed out to M. Decugis that Miss Ryan had played her singles match at the start of the afternoon, yet was ready to play the doubles also. But to this the French captain merely shrugged.

Commenting on the incident, the Evening Standard says:

"What would have happened if Miss Ryan had entered a very legitimate protest about facing Suzanne in the dougles after playing her singles match, when the French woman refused. Obviously Miss Ryan would have been playing under a disadvantage."

Tonight Mlle. Lenglen was reported at her hotel "abed and resting," and it was hoped she would be well enough to play tomorrow.

TWO RACES ON THAMES RIVER THIS AFTERNOON

RED TOP, June 23—(AP)—William A. Meikleham, referee for the Yale-Harvard regatta Friday, was in conference today with the captains, coaches and managers of the Eli and Crimson crews when final plans for the races were discussed. The varsity crew captains will toss for choice of courses tomorrow. Rules that govern the regatta were outlined by Referee Meikleham and the methods of starting were explained.

Two races are on the program for tomorrow. The first will be the contest between the Yale and Harvard combination crews. It will be held in the afternoon but the time for the race has not been announced. No launches except the Yale and Harvard boats will be permitted to accompany the crews. The race will be rowed up stream over the upper two mile course.

Immediately after the combination crew race, the so-called gentlemen's race will be held. The boats will be made up of graduates of Yale and Harvard.

All four Harvard crews practiced racing starts this afternoon, starting at a 40-stroke. The combination crew left the river immediately after this practice. The freshmen paddled a mile down stream, the second varsity a mile and a half and the varsity two miles.

HORNSBY'S HOMER WITH BASES FULL BEATS PIRATES

ST. The Cardinals thus climbed to one and a half games from the top, as the Cincinnati Reds lost today. Hornsby's men are still a full game behind the Pirates. Score:

TOLSON'S HOME RUN IN TENTH WINS FOR CUBS

CINCINNATI, June 23.—(AP)—Tolson, batting for Heathcote drove to the extreme right field wall for a home run with Adams on base in the tenth inning, Chicago taking the final game of the series from Cincinnati 5 to 3.

Luque was hit on the head by a pitched ball in the fifth inning and had to retire in the tenth when he developed severe nose bleeding. Rixey succeeded him after Adams hit safely for two bases. In the sixth inning Luque hit Root with a pitched ball. There followed an argument by Luque and McCarthy, the Cub manager, but the umpires acted as peacemakers and quiet soon was restored.

NINTH INNING RALLIES GIVE DODGERS DOUBLE VICTORY

BOSTON, June 23—(AP)—Ninth inning rallies enabled Brooklyn to capture both sections of a doubleheader from the Braves today by scores of 3 to 1 and 6 to 4. In the opener, what proved to be the two winning runs were scored when Bancroft lost Standaert's grounder with the bases full and two out.

In the ninth inning of the second contest, Pitchers Graham and Smith forced in a run apiece on free passes with the bases crowded. Hal Goldsmith, formerly of the Providence Eastern league club, made his pitching debut for the Braves in the nightcap. Score:

IIIS. COMMISSION MYSTIFIED ABOUT DEMPSEY-TUNNEY BOUT

CHICAGO, June 23.—(AP)—Boxing circles here were mystified today by reports from New York that Tex Rickard was dickering with some Chicago promoter, perhaps to stage the Dempsey-Tunney match here.

Chairman Huncke of the Illinois athletic commission said he had received no application from Rickard or any one associated with him, for approval of a Dempsey-Tunney match, and declined to say whether the commission might look favorably upon such a contest in Illinois until some proposal was received.

SAM WILCOX WINS QUALIFYING ROUND OF INVITATION TOURNEY

Sam Wilcox with an 80 won the medal in the qualifying round in the state invitation tournament of the Norwich Golf club on Wednesday afternoon at the club course. Wilcox took a 39 on his outward journey and a 41 coming in. He encountered considerable difficulty on the greens but his driving and approach shots were excellent and with his usual putting he should have broken 75. S. Brainerd of New Haven, was one stroke in back of Wilcox while T. E. Wattles, captain of the Yale team, took a 82. Wattles playing over the course with Hagen some weeks ago took an 84.

The weather was not of the best, a drizzling rain falling intermittently during the greater part of the afternoon and ending with a downpour late in the afternoon which drove several qualifiers still on the course to pick up and come in. Some of the more ardent golfers stuck it out, returning drenching wet but still game. The field was smaller than was anticipated as weather conditions and a number of competing events held the entry list to about 30. The qualifying round scores were as follows:

S. Wilcox	39	41—80
S. Brainerd	40	41—82
Willis Austin	41	41—82
N. K. Lanman	47	40—87
F. S. Wilcox	46	45—91

The first round will be played today the first eighteen holes this morning and the second this afternoon. There will be only one flight of sixteen. The second round will be played Friday and the finals of 36 holes will be played on Saturday. The pairings and starting times for today are as follows:

KINSEY HAS TOUGH MATCH WITH SPANIARD

WIMBLEDON, England, June 23—(AP)—Howard Kinsey, the only remaining American in the men's singles, came through with another victory, but not until he had thrown a slight scare into the American camp for a few moments this afternoon. He had as his opponent Edouard Fallaquet of Spain and he won out in the fifth set, the final score being 6-2, 6-2, 4-6, 3-6, 6-1.

Miss Elizabeth Ryan and Mrs. Molin Maloney, the other Americans in the tourney, won their matches with ease. Miss Ryan defeated Miss E. R. Clark, 6-3, 6-2 and Mrs. Mallory had little difficulty in disposing of Mrs. H. Edgington, 6-2, 6-1.

One of the French stars in the men's singles Jacques Brugnon eliminated D. Zemla, of Czechoslovakia, 6-3, 6-0, 6-2. Zemla was no match for the brilliant Frenchman in the singles.

Henri Cochet, French hardcourt champion, and twice conqueror of Vincent Richards, the American star, defeated the English player, R. Bernard, with the greatest ease. All of Cochet's assortment of strokes were working excellently, and he is considered headed at least for the finals and probably the championship.

Jean Borotra had a bad start against A. H. Fyzee, of England, losing the first set. It was just after the French ace had been called to the royal box to explain Mlle Lenglen's non-appearance to Queen Mary, and he was apparently flustered over the complication. He settled down somewhat for the remainder of the match, and won the next three sets, one of which went to deuce.

Betty Nuthal, the little English tennis prodigy, for whom much had been predicted, was put out of the series by Mrs. M. Watson, also of England, 6-3, 6-0. The sixteen year old girl's underhand service was weak, although the rest of her game had flashes of brilliancy.

Miss Joan Fry, among the best of the English players, defeated her youthful compatriot Eileen Bennett in a well contested three set match 6-3, 4-6, 7-5.

MISS LEITCH AND MRS. GARON IN BRITISH GOLF FINALS

HARLECH, Wales, June 23—(AP)—Miss Cecil Leitch and Mrs. P. Garon, both of England, tomorrow will fight for the British women's golf championship.

In the semi-final round this afternoon Miss Leitch eliminated Mlle Simone de la Chaume, the "Suzanne of golf" as many have called her. Miss Leitch, by her defeat of the young French star, achieved some measure of revenge for her recent defeat by Mlle de la Chaume in the finals of the French women's championship.

Mrs. Garon, the former Miss M. Parkinson, eliminated Mrs. R. J. McNair of Oxhey in the other semi-final round two up. Mrs. Garon was the winner of the Essex women's championship in 1923-4-5.

FAST RACING FEATURES SECOND DAY OF BAY STATE; RAIN HALTS PROGRAM

A steady down pour after the last heat of the three-year-old trot had been run called a halt in the racing program of the second day of the Bay State meeting at the Norwich Fairgrounds Wednesday afternoon with only one heat of the 2.12 pace being completed. The rain brought to a close an afternoon of the most spirited racing seen at the local oval in a number of years. Exceptionally fast time for the local track featured the racing. Admiral Grattan stepping the first mile of the 2.12 pace in 2:06 1-2, a second and a quarter slower than the track record.

The 2.12 pace, what was supposed to be the feature event of the day, was unfinished and will be run at 1:30 o'clock this afternoon. In this event two preliminary heats were run off with Quinla winning the first and Jean Grattan, the favorite, winning the second. In the first heat after the preliminaries Quinla won by a scant nose. Hilda Hal Hollywood Walker and Jean Grattan being closely bunched as they came up the stretch

WESTERLY HOSPITAL WILL HAVE A FREE BED FUND

(Special to the Bulletin)

WESTERLY, R. I., June 23—Establishment of a Free Bed fund for the Westerly hospital is now assured for Dr. J. Gordon Anderson, M. D., connected with the hospital, has forwarded his check as first contribution and it is expected many others will follow. In acknowledging receipt Treasurer John O. Mills has stated that a new account in the savings department of the Washington Trust company had been opened for this fund.

In connection with the Westerly hospital management the desirability has been shown by the use of the wards up to the present time that they be kept open to the men on the hospital staff all the year around, in preference to their serving in rotation in the wards as in the past. With this system, for example, such cases as might come from the operation of mothers' aid would have the privilege of choosing a physician for attendance.

June 21. Albert Langworthy to South County Public Service company a certain lot or parcel of land on the west side of Langworthy road.

Estate of Peleg Clark, by William A. Wilcox, commissioner to Napoleon Ladoux (1) a certain lot or parcel of land with dwelling house south of High street.

Wilfred Wardell to Frank Clemente a certain parcel or lot of land, No. 24 of the map of the Westerly Industrial and Improvement company on Narragansett avenue.

22. Charles H. J. Douglas to George G. Stillman a certain lot or parcel of land on the south side of Greenman avenue.

23. Westerly Industrial and Improvement company to Teresa Magna Lot No. 36 and sites and house lots of the plat of the Westerly Industrial land improvement company.

William A. Wilcox, commissioner of the estate of Peleg Clark to Samuel H. Larcom lot of land, approximately 1650 square feet, Lot No. 15 in Plat No. 2.

Albert L. Brown to Daniel F. Larcom a certain tract or parcel of land situated at the rear of the property of the grantee and adjoining on the east side of Elm street.

Charles H. J. Douglas to Lloyd W. Willard and wife, Grace P. Willard, as joint tenants and not as tenants in common, a certain lot or parcel of land on the south side of Greenman avenue.

GIVES SUGGESTION FOR COLLECTION OF GARBAGE

(Special to the Bulletin)

WESTERLY, R. I., June 23—As a member of the committee on garbage disposal, Thomas McKenzie reported to the June meeting of the Westerly chamber of commerce, held in the custom chambers of the Westerly town hall on Tuesday, that in his review of efforts of Massachusetts and Rhode Island cities and towns there had been the most number of failures in municipalities. Personal solicitation after private collector, he estimated, would secure but about one-third on the village streets. Estimates compiled for manufacturing areas showed 5-lbs. per capita would be average with 3-lbs. per capita ashes and in residential areas 6 per capita garbage and that per capita ashes and rubbish. This would mention 2 collections a week for garbage with 2 for ashes or 4 in summer. Summing up, he said it would be most economical for the town to engage in the matter as a whole, the unit cost depending upon contracts which could be entered into when the whole town was divided into the variously classified districts the municipality to own teams and to have one man responsible to see that collection and disposal was properly carried out.

A communication was read from the Westerly town council relative to paying the bill contracted for by the Westerly chamber of commerce for refuse removal in the annual clean-up campaign. It was stated that this bill had been "O. K'd" this year, but the further recommendation was made that the Westerly chamber have a representative present at the annual financial budget meeting of the town to see that this figure was added to the prospective costs for the year ensuing.

No particular action was taken on a communication from the headquarters of the First Army corps area, that on branch that some large roof be selected on which to have painted the word "Westerly" that aviators might know the section of the country over which they were passing.

Pipe up a chantey, mates and set sail for OLD GOLD!

In days of old,
When pirates bold
Spread terror
on the main,
They scuttled ships
On pleasure trips,
And had a

Now seas are rid Of Captain Kidd,
And others
of his set,
Yet men still seek
Each bloody week
The TREASURED
CIGARETTE.

Their gleeful tunes
Of gold doubloons
Were sung
in ev'ry port,
To go in quest
Of treasure chest
Was their idea of sport.

If you are smart
You'll need no chart,
To make a glad-

Both mildness and fullness!

Real delicacy of aroma but without loss of natural tobacco taste and character

"They satisfy and yet they're mild"—this is no mere catch-phrase; it's a taste-description of Chesterfield.

MILDNESS and fullness, the North and South poles of cigarette taste — can they be brought together in one cigarette? Seemingly no; practically yes, and with no compromise or loss of either.

It calls for the best in tobaccos; tobaccos of rare delicacy — the tender silky leaf of the costliest Turkish type; tobaccos of rich mellowness and "body"—the choicest of fine old Burley and other Domestic varieties.

But fine tobaccos alone are not enough. To achieve mildness with fullness, to preserve natural tobacco taste and character without a trace of heaviness, to produce a cigarette that satisfies and that, at the same time, is mild—here is a job that calls not only for the choicest tobaccos, but for the highest degree of skill in blending them.

And in the Chesterfield blend you have it—the exact balancing of one tobacco against another, the accurate toning and shading of each type of leaf, the rich mildness, the satisfying fullness, the rounded-out completeness which belong to Chesterfield and — because the blend can't be copied—to Chesterfield alone!

was more than satisfied

Great institution recommends Perfection after exacting tests

TRULY scientific is the Battle Creek College of Home Economics. Its nutrition expert, Miss Margaret Allen Hall, cooked many meals on a Perfection in a nation-wide cooking test conducted by six famous cooks. Miss Hall expressed the most complete satisfaction with the Perfection.

The results were fine

"Whether I broiled mushrooms, boiled peas or fried timbale cases the results were fine," she said. "The stove lighted quickly. Its heat was steady and even and so easily regulated that I cooked all those dishes at the same time, using a different grade of heat for each.

The flame is steady

"The flame did not creep or crawl. I tested the oven with a standard oven thermometer and found that I could keep it any length of time at the temperature I desired. This is very necessary for successful baking.

Odors don't mix in the oven

"One meal I cooked entirely in the oven, corn and cheese souffle, stuffed tomatoes seasoned with onions, and angel food cake. There was no mingling of odors. This meal saved fuel, too, as I used only one burner. Through the glass doors I could see at any moment how every dish was getting along.

"The Perfection is easy to handle and easy to keep clean. And I didn't have to scrub pots and pans. The long chimneys prevented discoloration. From the former knowledge I had of oil stoves, my expectations were exceeded by the performance of the Perfection."

Battle Creek Recommends

This recommendation came from the Battle Creek College of Home Economics after the most exacting laboratory tests. Scientific Battle Creek was more than satisfied. And the Perfection was proved ready to meet the cooking needs of any household.

All six famous cooks recommend the Perfection. Every day 4,500,000 women with Perfections in their kitchens are having real cooking satisfaction.

SENATOR BINGHAM WARNS AGAINST PATERNALISM IN GOVERNMENT

United States Senator Hiram Bingham of Connecticut, who was to have delivered the keynote address at the annual banquet of the Connecticut Chamber of Commerce, held Wednesday night at the Griswold, Eastern Point, was prevented from attending by impending vote in the senate at Washington, but his prepared address was read by Secretary James M. Hammond of the New London Chamber of Commerce.

Senator Bingham's address was upon "Paternalism vs. Self-reliance and Independence" as applied to matters which he declared would be discussed in congress. He asserted that, he says, is the question which those who would make of this nation a vast paternalistic government under the administration of bureaucrats that would make the central government practically a foster father for every citizen.

In part Senator Bingham's address was as follows:

In part Senator Bingham's address was as follows:

Two theories of government are now struggling for the mastery in the congress of the United States: Benevolent despotism vs. state responsibility; paternalism vs. self-reliant independence; federal aid vs. state independence.

A study of the laws introduced and the debates of the recent session of congress will convince anyone that there is a tremendous movement on foot to provide for the people of the United States the benefits of a benevolent and powerful government and to use the federal government to minister to the health and happiness and general welfare of the people of the United States. It is a pleasant and attractive theory of government. Its advocates say that it is the duty of government to make the rough places smooth and the crooked road straight. They claim that it is the duty of the government to protect the citizen against himself, keep him from making mistakes and to insure the full moral, mental and physical development of the citizen by an all-wise central government.

On the other hand in Connecticut we have the old fundamental idea of self-reliance and independence. We have that type of old fashioned, and sturdy citizen who would rather be uncomfortable than to be an object of charity, who would rather be poor and independent than rich and dependent. We have that type of citizenship which has made Connecticut what she is and has made America great. That type of citizen who takes pride in solving his own problems. I have heard it said by a senator of the United States that if the government failed to make people rich and happy and to look out for their comfort and general welfare the government was a failure and he favors the federal government.

I know that many Americans who agree with him and there are a large number of their representatives in congress who are willing to vote any amount of money within reason, and some of them beyond reason, to promote the general welfare of the people of the United States. They would like to see the federal government a kind and willing as an indulgent parent, providing homes, clothes, food, automobiles and continuous joy rides for all American citizens. They fail to see that such an Utopia would lead to the complete atrophy of our powers as members of a self-governing republic. They fail to see that the enervating program which they present would, if carried out, make us a nation of spineless, characterless weaklings, devoid of respect. They fail to recognize that the human race is what it is today by reason of its long struggle against difficulties and not because its way has been made as easy as sliding down hill. The picture they draw of the easy-going comfortable citizen, free from worry and responsibility, living an ideal existence, laying his cares upon the government and as irresponsible as a passenger in a luxurious ocean steamer, is one which attracts the careless or thoughtless voter who is ever striving for more comfort and who meets many disappointments and endures much hardship.

As a matter of fact who is it we respect the most? Who is it who is developing character and ability, the passenger in the cabin deluxe or the seaman before the mast, fearless and self-reliant and willing to face the fury of the gale and the unknown dangers of the deep in the performance of his duty? The Americans whom we most admire, George Washington and Abraham Lincoln and others who followed in their train are the product of struggle, and the determination to succeed against great obstacles. They are not the products of a paternalistic government providing for the physical welfare of the citizens. Unless we courageously face the facts of history and realize that a paternalistic form of government eventually leads to tyranny and oppression we shall lose that precious liberty of which we have been so fond of boasting.

Do we desire independence or dependence? If we desire independence we must pay the price. If we are content with dependence we shall become subjects instead of citizens—subjects of a great central government where the power is exercised by the bureaucrat rather than by the chosen representative of the people.

Even today the helplessness of the ordinary citizen faced by the complexity and ramifications and power of the central government is a pathetic and tragic spectacle; yet hundreds and thousands of people are continually urging upon congress to carry benevolent despotism still further and to increase paternalism of a government already far too paternalistic.

Without thinking what they are doing they are actually proposing to take away from the people of the United States the great joy and human satisfaction of accomplishing for themselves their own welfare and comfort. In the end they will destroy the satisfaction of self-reliance and independence. In the end they will destroy the powers of the states and even of the local communities. All must conform to the rules of the central government which are intended to produce happiness and the general welfare.

Instead of being content to have the central government protect the American citizen from foreign interference and foreign competition and permit him to lead his own life secure behind the wall of national defense and of a protective tariff, instead of being willing to give him the satisfaction of working out his own salvation it is proposed that the federal government shall be his foster father. He is taught to regard himself as being in need of help. His character is being undermined. The future of the nation instead of being safeguarded with pride and satisfaction in what we can do to the generations that have preceded us, who have struggled against the dangers of the wilderness, the savage Indian, the hardships of a severe climate and many other difficulties, is to curse the day that we deprived them of their freedom and meddled over their fortunes with all powerful bureaucratic hands. As President Wilson in his William and Mary speech: "No plan of social betterment has ever been adopted which did not result in diminishing initiative, in lessening individual responsibility, in reaction and decadence. Forms of government whose chief source and force is bureaus are always forms of reaction and not of progress. Every country and every people, being left to itself, becomes industrial, and every industrial people presently becomes commercial. Unless bureaucracy is constantly resisted it breaks down representative government and overwhelms democracy. It is the one enemy it must fear and defeat. It sets up the pretense of making everybody comfortable and happy by taking everybody's business into its own hands."

[illegible] people have as a whole always handled affairs to better purpose than governments. We seem capable of developing self reliance and initiative. Anything which encourages such a development is to be encouraged. The splendid work of the Connecticut Chamber of Commerce in helping

Such activities as the 4-H clubs in the State and similar organizations which will give boys and girls on the farm a fairer chance for the opportunities of self-development and self reliance are important assets to the state. I have attended with great satisfaction some of the meetings and fairs of these organizations. I have been delighted with the work of boys and girls that takes part. Major Samuel Russell, Jr., of Middletown has helped in giving them an opportunity to show what they can do. The state fair at Charter Oak park in Hartford has also given splendid help in this direction. I understand that it is now proposed to erect a junior development building at Charter Oak park and to make this a central meeting place for all junior

It does not pay to buy cheap tires

The labor and overhead in making cheap tires is the same as in good tires. Then if you must buy 2 cheap tires to go as far as 1 good tire, you pay twice as much as you should for labor and overhead, and you have twice as much trouble.

Don't buy tires in which reclaimed rubber is used. The U.S. Government's Bureau of Standards says that any given percentage of reclaimed rubber in a tire reduces the mileage of the tire by an even greater percentage.

Mr. Ford Owner—you can buy a Michelin 30x3½ for only about $1.50 more than a 2nd grade tire. And the Michelin will give you at least 4000 miles more.

Blood Pressure Down Five Degrees in One Night

Mr. George Klinger of Jersey City Tells How He Quickly Reduced High Blood Pressure.

"I have suffered from high blood pressure since last July with a pressure of 238. I would have those severe headaches that come with high blood pressure, such as dull throbbing pain and ringing in my ears. I had terrible dizzy spells, at times so bad I would have to grab hold of something to keep from falling. I would become very weak and often I would faint away. Finally, I became nervous and could not sleep nights.

"I heard of Tenso and decided to give it a trial and I am certainly glad that I did. Why, do you know the first day my pressure went down five degrees and I slept fine, getting a good night's rest. Those dizzy spells have left and I haven't had a weak or fainting spell since the first few doses. To be rid of those headaches alone is worth a fortune for they were torture. I can recommend Tenso highly to any one suffering as I did."

Tenso is the new discovery for high blood pressure that good drug stores are selling so much of these days. It was first prescribed by a prominent physician with remarkable results. Guarantee of money back if not satisfied. Ask for Tenso today at any of the following drug stores: George G. Englee, Lee & Osgood, Geo. M. Rathbun, Chas. C. Treat.

activities in Connecticut, including the 4-H clubs and the Scouts. These organizations are to take the use of the building not only during the week, but at other times also. In this way Charter Oak park would be available to all junior organizations in the state it would help them toward a better development of their self-reliant activities and a building up of independent manhood and womanhood which is the best contribution to citizenship that [illegible] is exactly the kind of thing which builds up American character and gives the boys and girls a chance to work out their own salvation. It is exactly opposite to the socialistic tendency of certain western organizations which desire to draw from government sources financial aid to help them in making up their deficiencies in sound business management.

It is an easy matter to take a cheerful view of the troubles of other people.

COLCHESTER

Col. Henry Champion chapter, D. A. R. has a record to be proud of in that 60 Revolutionary war soldiers' graves have been marked with a bronze marker. Not many chapters in the state can say as much. Colchester may well feel proud of its chapter and the work it has been and is doing along this and other lines. Five years ago the Col. Henry Champion chapter was organized with 13 members and now there are over 30 members all of them fired with more enthusiasm in their undertakings. During July and August the chapter house on Norwich avenue will be open and visitors each Saturday afternoon and housekeepers and hostesses will be in attendance. Hostesses on every occasion will be in old time costumes.

LITTLE EVIDENCE IN NEW LONDON OF NEARNESS OF YALE-HARVARD REGATTA

(Special to the Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, June 23.—Notwithstanding the annual Yale-Harvard races on the Thames are but about 48 hours away there is little interest manifested in the event in New London. The harbor is filling with yachts and the hotels have reservations in large number, but there is no surfeit of strangers in the city as has been the case in past years. They will come the day of the race—indeed the afternoon of the contest for the automobile and special trains give a service that enables the visitors to remain at home until noon of the day of the race before they need to start for New London. The observation trains will be run as usual, but there will be fewer passenger-carrying steamers than were ever assembled at a Yale-Harvard race. The whole situation is in marked contrast to what it was in the earlier years of these contests.

Chief Engineer Charles Rose is making satisfactory recovery from the injuries he sustained when the fire department automobile was in collision with a truck of the New Haven Dairy company at Pearl and Green streets a month ago. The criminal action against Arthur Page, the driver of the truck, is assigned for trial in the police court next week at which time it is certain the chief will be able to appear and to tell what happened. Page is at liberty on a bail bond now.

Fred Stone, the comedian so familiar to patrons of the New York and Boston stage, has established a farm in the town of Lyme where horses are bred and where there are now more than 100 animals of high degree bred for the market. Morgan Chaney is the manager of the farm, an experienced man who has been in every horse section of the country. There are more than 100 acres in the farm and every facility for caring for and breeding the horses.

Louis Pettrini, 90 Trumbull street, was arrested this afternoon by Sergeant John Cavanaugh and Patrolman Ernest Opperman, charged with breach of the peace. He furnished a surety on his bond of $50 for his appearance in the police court tomorrow morning.

The New Haven police this afternoon requested the New London police to be on the lookout for two automobiles that had been stolen from the streets of the former city earlier in the day. One of the automobiles is a twin eight, Packard, and touring type. Its registration is Y-3444. The car is painted gray. The other automobile is a Buick, painted gray and carries Connecticut registration, 28-438.

Two-way traffic was resumed on State street after last midnight in compliance with the latest edict of City Manager William A. Holt. The handling of the two-way traffic was accomplished with little or no difficulty, this being especially the case because of the few automobiles in operation during the day. Trolley traffic in both northerly and southerly directions was started again this morning.

Another batch of alleged violaters of the city's traffic ordinances is scheduled to be presented in the police court tomorrow morning. Among the men and women whose cars were tagged was Mrs. Catherine Crowley, Norwich, who is charged with blocking traffic on Main street. Her automobile was declared to have been the cause of holding up traffic by Traffic Officer Clyde Murphy and he ordered the woman to appear in court. Others who are scheduled for court appearance are Ida M. Ready, nurse at Lawrence hospital, parking overtime on State street; William E. Farrow, Poquonoc Bridge, parking overtime on State street; Chancey Crouch, Gales Ferry, parking in restricted territory on Church street; and Byron C. Vine, 96 West Colt street, passing on the left of a traffic signal, corner of Connecticut and Lincoln avenues.

Mrs. Etta J. Beebe Loper, Thames View, Waterford, who was reported as missing from her home yesterday by Mrs. C. F. Strickland, who declared that Mrs. Loper had been missing since last Sunday, has returned home. Mrs. Loper communicated with her husband late yesterday stating that she was in New Haven and several hours afterward returned to her home. Mrs. Loper explained her sudden disappearance as being due to a notion to hastily visit in New Haven.

Congressman and Mrs. Richard P. Freeman have returned to New London from Washington and have opened their summer residence at Neptune park, Ocean Beach.

The electric traffic signal that has been located on Howard street, at the junction of Pequot avenue a number of months, has been transferred from that location to the corner of Main and Church streets.

Mrs. Kaufman, wife of Dr. Charles Kaufman and little daughter, Montauk avenue, are spending several days at Mrs. Kaufman's former home, Philadelphia.

The engagement is announced of Mark W. Worthington, 105 Blinman street, and Miss Rose Adelaide W. Remmiert, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harry J. Remmert, 309 Crystal avenue.

Leroy Forsyth, employed in the division accountant's office of the New York, New Haven & Hartford railroad, this city, is confined to his home, Mallory Hill, Waterford on account of illness.

The condition of William Harrison, 23 Chappell street, who is a patient at Lawrence hospital, receiving treatment for hiccoughs, is reported today as being slightly improved, although the patient is considered in a critical condition.

Miss Sarah B. Dolan, who has been visiting her sister, Mrs. F. J. O'Grady, 17 Rogers street, left by steamer for New York tonight and Saturday she will take passage on a steamer for Ireland.

ACCUSED OF RECKLESS DRIVING AT NEW LONDON

(Special to The Bulletin.)

NEW LONDON, June 23—Winfred Busch, a steward on the Coast Guard destroyer Jouett, was accused of reckless operation of an automobile when the police court convened this morning, but Busch replied with an absolute denial that he is guilty as alleged. He was accused by Miss Priscilla Curtis, daughter of former Alderman William H. Curtis. There was no uncertainty as to the terms of the allegations—they were positive. Beside Miss Curtis Busch was faced by Police Sergeant Samuel Hick, Policeman McCaskey, Gilmore Buzzell, William Kiely and Mr. Curtis. When Busch was taken into custody, Officer McCaskey said, Busch was insolent, and told the officer that he "would go along when he got ready." Busch denied this statement and represented that he asked the officer for a show of authority to make the arrest that he (Busch) might have it to show his commanding officer on the Jouett why he was detained in custody of the police. Busch denied that he had any intention of interfering with the policeman in the discharge of his duty. He claimed that he did not want to leave his car in the street and for that reason halted about getting into the police car. Miss Curtis, Sergeant Hick and Officer McCaskey accused Busch of having ran down the Curtis car while Busch represented that the Curtis car ran into his machine. He is to appear in court with witnesses on the 30th inst when, he says, he will be able to show that he is unjustly accused and that Miss Curtis was at fault in bringing about the collision. Busch admitted that he saw the Curtis machine in Connecticut avenue, which is at right angles to the street where the smash occurred, some 50 feet away from the scene of the collision. Miss Curtis declared that her machine was struck on the side while Busch represents that his car was hit from the rear. So the testimony resolved itself into accusation and denial.

Traffic ordinance violations appear regularly in the court. There were several prosecutions this morning. One of them was fined $5 because he has three or four times been an offender. The others were discharged with a suspended judgment. A couple of drunks were allowed to get out of town.

Summer travel has had a bad setback because of the unseasonable weather. The beaches have felt the effect of the wet and cold days and nights and concession holders are about discouraged. Still travel on trains and boats has been up to normal, and freights are running as heavy as at any time in many months.

AUTOMOBILES COLLIDE IN NOANK; DRIVER ESCAPES

(Special to the Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, June 23—An automobile owned by Mrs. Norin I. Gaytor, 416 Travel road and driven by John Booth, 97 Brookline street, Boston, was struck by an unidentified automobile near Noank early this morning and overturned. In the machine with Booth was a male companion and both escaped with minor bruises and contusions. The automobile was extensively damaged.

Booth was driving a Ford sedan from Miami, Fla., to Boston and about 2 o'clock, when in the vicinity of Fort Hill, Poquonoc, a Buick car, driven at a high rate of speed, attempted to pass the Ford. Instead of driving the car to the left hand side of the Ford, the driver of the former automobile operated his car to the right side and in cutting in on the Ford auto, the left front wheel of the Ford was struck with sufficient force to cause the smaller auto to overturn, not only one but three times. Booth and his companion succeeded in extricating themselves from their auto, but by that time the driver of the colliding machine was out of sight, the driver not even stopping to ascertain whether the occupants of the Ford had suffered injury. The Ford was towed to a garge this morning. Booth and his companion came to New London in another auto and reported the accident at the police station. As the crash occured outside the jurisdiction of the New London police the matter was turned over to the state police, Groton barracks. No trace of the driver of the colliding automobile was found.

The estate of Noyes B. Crandall has sold a house and lot on Colt street to Henry R. Griswold.

George T. Dickinson and Antoinette R. Dickinson have sold a house and lot on Lee avenue to Cosimo Porcaro.

Benjamin Roberts has sold a house and lot on Crescent street to Gustaf Adolf Bjork.

Mrs. Josephine H. Ryan, Golden street, has been called to Portchester, N. Y., because of the death yesterday of her mother, Mrs. Catherine Hurley.

The funeral of Simon Hess was held this afternoon at 2 o'clock at his former residence, 1138 Ocean avenue and was attended by an immense throng of mourners, among whom were a majority of employes of The Bee Hive, of which establishment Mr. Hess was manager many years. The services were conducted by Rabbi Wise, Hartford. The honorary bearers were Isadore Wise, Hartford; Charles Hutzler and Rutherford Plaut, Norwich; Herman Joh, Groton and Ludwig and Hugo Mann, this city. The active bearers were Bert Sanger, Rochester, N. Y., and Peter F. Huber, James T. Potter, Dr. Emanuel A. Henkle, John Barats and Thomas McGarry, this city. Burial was in Cedar Grove cemetery.

An automobile owned and driven by Dr. Carlisle F. Ferrin, Huntington street, in turning Connecticut avenue to Broad street this morning crashed against the massive traffic signal at the intersection of the two streets, the signal being moved several feet. The automobile escaped damage other than the bumper being broken.

Commissioner of Motor Vehicles Robbins B. Stoeckel today ordered the driver's license suspended of Lewis Montague, 65 Federal street. Montague was recently fined $100 in the police court for taking the automobile of Clarence Brockett without the permission of the owner.

Mrs. Fred Van Hoff and infant daughter, 95 Pequot avenue; Miss Matilda Harold, Gales Ferry; Mrs. Fannie Griswold, Waterford; William Hannon, Stonington; Ralph Lawton, Westerly; Mrs. John Marold, Gales Ferry, and Hugh Kenyon, Westerly, patients at Lawrence-Memorial Associated hospital were discharged today.

Hundreds of fire department officials from all sections of New England were in Manchester for the opening of the annual convention of the New England association of fire chiefs.

Breed Theatre

Here's an interesting question—Could or would you kill your sweetheart to save your native country from crushing defeat in time of war?

This is the dilemma that confronts Jetta Goudal in the thrilling dramatic climax of "Three Faces East," a thrilling war-time mystery drama of the secret service, which will be shown at the Breed theatre for three days beginning Thursday. Jetta plays a dual part in this picture, which was adapted by C. Gardner Sullivan from the stage success. She is deep in the confidence of rival powers, apparently giving valuable information to both sides, and it is not until the last few feet of film that her true identity is revealed.

In the development of the story Miss Goudal, as Miss Hawtree, presumably a German spy, falls in love with Valdar, a German spy. When he is about to send a message to Berlin that all is in readiness for an air raid on London which, if consummated, means the death of thousands if not the destruction of the city itself, she covers him with her revolver and threatens to kill him if he sends the message. A revolver battle ensues with the result that Valdar is mortally wounded, but by whom, only the final scenes reveal.

Maytag Washer Now on Broadway

One would ordinarily think of at least 15,000 places to look for washing machines before thinking of Times Square. Broadway. Yet the fact is that the Maytag, the world's largest and greatest washing machine is now to be found in the very heart of America's night life center.

Over forty feet high and thirty-five feet wide, this giant among washing machines towers above the nightly Broadway throng—a million strong.

Crowds pause on their way to the theatre, cataret or movie, to watch its fascinating action. Beside the steady-burning Maytag name, in itself about forty-five feet long, the electric light reproduction of the latest Maytag Aluminum Washer model flashes on. The motor revolves. Bursts of light flash to all parts of the sign giving vivid suggestion of the gyroscopic action within the washer, while the clothes are being washed. The lid goes up. One by one, through the revolving wringer, come dainty "undies" hose, towels, baby things, each detail in electric outline. As if by magic, they pass to the seventy-foot aerial clothes line and there string themselves across the Manhattan sky line, all the while swaying to and fro as if stirred by the blowing breeze.

As an accompaniment to the absorbing action of this display, in sequence there appear burning in the sky, three of the outstanding Maytag sales messages. First, Washes Faster and Cleaner; then, Clean the Clothes in 3 to 7 minutes; and third, World's Fastest Selling Washer.

Some conception of the immence amount of material and the skill and amount of labor involved in creating this masterpiece of electric display construction is gained from the details of the various units of the display.

In the washer, which is 40 ft. by 35 ft. there are some 2,000 twenty-five watt white lamps. On the clothes-line, the large garments are 9 ft. high and contain about 60 twenty-five watt colored lamps while the smaller garments average 4 1-2 ft. each and contain from thirty to fifty bulbs each. To reproduce the clothes line, with the garments and the swaying action, requires nearly one thousand lamps.

The name "Maytag" is in ten-foot letters, and contains 500 fifty-watt lamps, while it takes 236 twenty-five watt lamps to spell out "Aluminum Washer." Each of the three message-flashes requires approximately 600 twenty-five watt lamps.

The whole action of the display brings into play the brilliance of some 5500 lamps—a volume of light which would provide illumination for every household in a whole city the size of Logansport, Ind., or Lawrence, Mass.

It is fitting, indeed, that the spectacular rise of The Maytag Company from a position of obscurity to dominance in the industry, in the brief period of five years, should be climaxed by this spectacular display at the "Cross Roads of the World," as Times Square is so often called.

There, to banker and baker, buyer and bride; to housewife and to movie star, to representative citizens from nearly every community in the U. S.; to distinguished visitors from the Old World and awe-stricken arrivals in the New World; to thirty million pairs of eyes each month, the Maytag name shines forth in effulgent glory and the Maytag washer blinks its way to immortality.

Through government taboos and the pressure of public opinion, Turkey's national costumes are disappearing from use. The minister of education has sent an order to the governor of each province, requiring specimens of the costumes peculiar to each section and class of people to be preserved. A sign of the changing times is an order at the request of the Denizli Woman's club that forbids women to appear in the streets in the customary mashlak (a sort of kimono) and towel-like head covering.

MARKET WAS REACTIONARY

NEW YORK, June 23—(AP)—Stock prices turned reactionary today under a wave of heavy selling orders for both accounts. Closing quotations disclosed a long list of net losses ranging from 1 to 7 points. Trading showed a moderate decrease in volume, the day's sales aggregating 1,738,200 shares, compared with 1,855,700 yesterday and 1,547,200 the day before.

The decline was generally regarded as a natural correction of a weakened technical position resulting from the sustained advance of the past few weeks. Money rates continued relatively firm, but Wall street was again flooded with unconfirmed rumors that another cut in the New York Federal Reserve bank rediscount rate would be made tomorrow.

The day's business and trade news was largely favorable. Weekly steel trade reviews pointed out that demand for steel was being maintained in large volume, with prices holding relatively firm. The American Petroleum Institute reported a small decrease in the daily average of gross crude oil production last week.

Rails offered better resistance to selling pressure than the industrials. The strong undertone in that group is being attributed to the fine showing being made in most of the May earnings reports that have been published. Special buying of Chicago & Eastern Illinois preferred sent that stock up 3 5-8 points to 46, but it slipped back to 46 at the close. "Nickel Plate" common, on the other hand, dropped back over 3 points to 175 on a few sales.

Union Oil of California broke 5 points to on the denial of rumors regarding that company with Marland and Atlantic Refining. The selling originated largely from far western points, but the stock made partial recovery in later trading. Marland, Atlantic Refining, Pan-American B, Phillips, Mid-Continent and Lago also yielded a point or so.

Selling of the motors was accompanied by talk that recent price cuts would materially reduce earnings in the last half of the year. General Motors and Hudson each fell over 2 points while Jordan, Dodge, Mack Trucks, White, Pierce Arrow and a few others yielded a point or more.

U. S. Steel common fell back over a point to 137 5-8. Baldwin yielded over 2 points to 114. General Electric dropping 4 1-4 to 356 3-4 and DuPont as low 9 to 228 and then rallied above 230.

Bullish demonstrations were successfully conducted in a few issues. National Biscuit was bid up over 2 points to a new high for the year at 94 1-2 and Collins and Aikman touched a new top at 41 1-2. Good buying also was noted in Westinghouse Air Brake and Wright Aeronautical.

Commodity prices were again irregular. Active wheat futures closed unchanged. Cotton closed 5 points net lower to 5 points higher on selling attributed to favorable crop reports. Raw sugar was unchanged but the futures were slightly easier. Coffee rallied 7 to 15 points on covering buying by houses with European and South American connections.

Call money renewed at 4 1-4 per cent and terminated at that figure all day. Time money and commercial paper rates were unchanged.

Foreign exchanges ruled steady in moderate trading. Sterling ruled around 3-16 and French francs were quoted just below 3.56 cents while lire changes were nominal.

BOND MARKET

NEW YORK, June 23—(AP)—Realizing sales impeded the upward movement of bond prices today but the market displayed a fairly firm undertone. Buying interest was kept alive in several leading railroad and public utility issues and was transferred to new quarters of the foreign list.

Advancing tendencies were best sustained in foreign government obligations, which because of their relatively higher yields have been able to attract investment funds from both American and European sources. Some of the minor issues, such as Serbian 8s, Czechoslovakian 8s, Mexican 5s, Uruguay 8s and Poland 6s, made the best showing. More confident demands also is shown in French bonds following the announcement that a new Briand cabinet had been formed with Joseph Caillaux as finance minister. Brazilian issues were sold in the face of an announcement that a $20,000,000 loan, originally scheduled for flotation in London, would be placed in the American market.

With reactionary tendencies gaining headway in the stock market, railroad liens were unable to make much progress although bargain orders were distributed for a few issues. New York, Susquehanna and Western refunding 5s and second 4 1-2s advanced 2 points or more and moderate gains were recorded by Atchison convertible 4s, Canadian Pacific 4s, Frisco adjustment 6s, Minneapolis and St. Louis 5s, Des Moines and Fort Dodge 4s and Union Pacific convertible 4s.

Merger rumors involving the Skelly Oil company prompted a rise in its 6 1-2 per cent bonds to a new top price at 102 7-8, a net gain of more than 3 points. Other oils moved irregularly. The best comparative strength was shown by West Penn Power 5s, Wabash 5s, Gould Coupler 6s and Beech Fisheries 6s.

LEE & OSGOOD OLD STORE BUILDING

LEE & OSGOOD CO. IS OBSERVING 84TH ANNIVERSARY, FOUNDED 1842

Eighty-four years is a long time ago. In those days men entered business to make a living without too much thought of gaining riches, though many acquired wealth and merited [illegible] efforts to [illegible] St. [illegible] the condition was not unusual. A small drug firm of Lee & Osgood was established in Norwich. The earliest men joined together with small capital in 1842 to [illegible] a business which has grown [illegible] of the largest concerns of [illegible] eastern Connecticut.

The business was begun in a small building on Main street on a lot running through to Water street. It has remained on the same location ever since, but is now housed in the fine modern five story brick building, [illegible] feet, covering the whole [illegible] and running through from 121-123 Main street to 150-152 Water street and the company is [illegible] at the present time.

Charles Lee, Founder

Charles Lee was born in Windham, Conn., in 1789. He created and patented Lee's antibilious pills, one of the first, if not the first, medicinal compound to be patented in the United States. These he made in a room in his barn in Windham and continued there until he became associated with H. H. Osgood as Lee & Osgood in 1842. These pills had a wide distribution in this country, Europe and Asia. Among Lee's pills of more easily days were well known. When Lee & Osgood opened the drug shop it was the work of the clerks at night after other duties were finished, to roll out and make these pills (some of this old machinery is stored in the attic now).

CHARLES LEE

In 1842 Mr. Lee came to Norwich and with Hugh H. Osgood, his nephew, he established Lee & Osgood drug store, in an old building where the present building now stands. Here the business was conducted under the firm name until his death in 1895—a sturdy, ingenious Yankee business man.

Hugh H. Osgood, Founder

Hugh H. Osgood was born in Southbridge, Mass., in 1821. He later moved with his parents to Pomfret and later came to Norwich and served his apprenticeship in the store of Samuel Tyler & Son, druggists. In 1842 he associated himself with Charles Lee in forming the drug firm of Lee & Osgood with only $1,000. On the death of his uncle in 1865, he purchased this business outright and increased it to a point where it was considered the largest drug and chemical business in Eastern Connecticut. Mr. Osgood was the first president of the New England Wholesale Druggist association. He was a good business man and a keen judge of other men whom he selected for his assistants. These he trained to carry on the work while he devoted his energy and ability to create and develop many new industries in eastern Connecticut. Mr. Osgood was mayor of Norwich, 1875 to 1876 and again mayor for a period that ran continuously from 1877 to 1886. The wide scope of his business activities is indicated by the enterprises with which he was connected. He was president of the Uncas Paper Co., Goodwin Cork Co., Worcester Thread Co., Sterling Dyeing and Finishing Co., Glasgow Yarn Co., Dime Savings bank and Kitemang association. He was one of the early promoters of The Bulletin Co., for a long period president of the Norwich Bleaching Dyeing and Printing Co., and when merged into the United States Finishing Co. of New York he was made its vice president. He was a director of the Thames and First National banks of Norwich, Ashland Cotton Co. of Jewett City, Norwich Gas and Electric Co., Yantic Woolen Co. and Richmond Stove Co. He was a trustee of Norwich Free Academy and treasurer for 40 years of the central school district.

HUGH H. OSGOOD

Col. Osgood as he was called was a bulwark of strength to all his friends who came to him for support and advice. He died in 1899, leaving a host of loyal friends.

His work was left to be carried on by his faithful assistants, and in 1900 the business was incorporated under the name of The Lee & Osgood company by his estate and William B. Young was selected to be the president and general manager.

William B. Young, President

William B. Young was born in Coventry, Tolland county, on November 21, 1846. He was educated in the public schools of Windham, where his parents moved in early childhood. Later he attended Windham academy. When he was 15 years old he was called to enter the employ of Lee & Osgood in this city where he learned the retail drug business thoroughly and was promoted to be a salesman. Among other things that the firm sold at that time was kerosene oil. He was responsible for the distribution of thousands of barrels of oil in this section, traveling over the roads, when traveling meant anything but comfort. It was in 1867 that Mr. Young entered the employ of Lee & Osgood and only two clerks were employed. Today 21 are kept busy. Mr. Young holds a record for being longer in business than any other merchant as this year count his early experiences of traveling.

The drug business is carried on by this company varied, selling to the retail drug trade in eastern Connecticut, southern Massachusetts, chemicals, drugs, patents, paints and oils, soda fountains and supplies, drug store fixtures, [illegible] etc.

The retail department has been carried on [illegible] the business was started. [illegible] goods being sold on the [illegible] establishment where prescriptions have been filled [illegible] probably one and one-half mil[illegible] scriptions have been filled.

Long Term Employes

Many of the older inhabitants will remember some of the men who were employed by The Lee & Osgood company among whom were W. A. Thompson, J. G. Barnett who worked for over 50 years as treasurer, Charles S. Holbrook, the present town clerk worked there for 26 years, George Follette, Latham Eastman, E. A. Ripley and many others, are familiar names.

This firm has graduated several men to be druggists in Norwich, Utley and Jones, H. B. Smith and W. D Ricker. The Lee & Osgood company has been fortunate in retaining its serving more than 30 years, many others having been connected with the employes for long periods, several concern from five to 37 years.

MERCHANTS HEAR DISCUSSION ON INSTALLMENT SELLING

Creighton J. Hill of Babson's Statistical Organization took the negative side of a discussion on Installment Selling before the merchants luncheon at noon Wednesday in conjunction with the 27th annual convention of the Connecticut Chamber of Commerce held at the Griswold, Eastern Point. In part, Mr. Hill spoke as follows: "Business has invaded purchasing power—the future earnings of the country not yet in existence—to the extent of 5 billion dollars and this insidious undermining of our economic structure is increasing daily. Now if that isn't flat money in all its viciousness, I don't know what is. The automobiles and hundreds of other commodities thus lying unpaid for in the hands of the consumers constitute hidden inventories which dealers are blindly ignoring. Until the last payment has been made, these goods might still be in the showrooms or on the shelves or back in the factory so far as representing actual sales.

"When large industries, desperately trying to break down sales resistance, will vie with each other for larger sales by educating the consumer to buy credit at a high cost, we must expect some time a showdown. When so much energy is put forth to induce people to buy beyond their means, to mortgage their financial future, at interest rates that run as high as 20 or 30 per cent, increasing distribution costs at a time when the public is seriously demanding that they be lowered, one cannot escape the fear of a serious outcome. And too it becomes increasingly difficult to increase the volume of sales when so large a slice of the consumers dollar is absorbed in the purchase of the time payment privilege.

"Installment selling is a symptom more than it is a disease. It is a reflection of an age which is too much given to jazz economics, quick Florida clean-ups, 'Red Grange' fortunes, and 'keeping-up-with-the-Joneses' psychology. The national prosperity of the last few years has gone to our heads. We have lost our sense of values. We have become to believe that prosperity will go on indefinitely; that increased production will eternally mean larger wages, which will again be reflected in greater purchasing power, which in turn will bring greater production. This is a lovely arrangement—just so long as it works. And when it ceases to work it won't be so lovely."

The Affirmative Side

P. W. Haberman, vice-president of the Commercial Investment Trust of New York, took the affirmative side of the discussion. In substance, he said: "The wage earner is entitled to have commodities which make for better living conditions and which conserve profits, by increasing leisure, promote efficiency. Such commodities are not 'luxuries,' and it is not true that the American public is essentially given an orgy of inexcusable extravagance. That this is so is seen from the increase of savings deposits and from the reports of the federal trade commission which show that the national wealth is increasing at a tremendous rate.

"No apprehension need be felt with regard to the liquidation of credits in the event of a depression. Artificial conditions, as in the instance of speculation in securities, do not exist in the field of installment credits, which are generally short time credits. Unsound practices in credit extension will not commend themselves to the great conservators of credit which include the banking interests and the interests of the finance companies which guide the field of installment selling. The continued application of sound methods of installment merchandising, and the uninterrupted employment of this useful economic vehicle without any danger of the credit structure of the country being impaired, are assured."

EXPECT 200 ENGINEERS FOR CONVENTION HERE

The Norwich Association of Stationary Engineers is to be the host for the state convention of stationary engineers which will be held in Norwich on Friday and Saturday, June 25th and 26th. On Friday evening, June 25th the session is open and the public is cordially invited to attend. H. D. Larrabee, manager of Eastern Connecticut Power company will speak on "Conservation of Fuel Brought About by Increased Power Plant Efficiency" H. N. Heinrich, assistant superintendent of the engineering division of the Travelers' Insurance company will speak on engineering subjects. He will also discuss and explain Indemnity Insurance and answer any questions that manufacturers or engineers wish to ask. In the basement of the Community house there will be an exhibit of appliances and accessories that are of interest to engineers. This exhibit is free and the general public is cordially invited to visit the exhibition. The convention will close Saturday noon, followed by a visit to the submarine base.

This state convention was brought to Norwich by the local association of engineers and the chamber of commerce requests the general public to show their appreciation of this convention by extending every courtesy and respect to the visiting delegates. Chambers of commerce always endeavor to have conventions meet in their respective cities. In the larger civic organizations a special department of the chamber of commerce is constantly at work in their efforts to bring conventions to their communities. Conventions are regarded as excellent methods of community advertising and help very materially to bring added business to the cities in which they are held. For the second time this season, Norwich is requested by the local chamber to give a hospitable welcome to a state convention which will be attended by nearly 200 delegates, coming from all sections of the state. The convention is in charge of the following local committee: John A. Holland, Otto Heebner, John E. Casey, William Throop, George Thomas and F. A. Dolbeare, Elmer L. Bassett of Hartford, state president, will preside at the convention.

NORWICH ROQUE PLAYERS INVITED TO PHILADELPHIA

Arthur L. Peale, for years secretary of the old roque association, has received notification that the roque tournament will start this year July 12 at the Quaker City Boat club's courts in Fairmount park, Philadelphia. W. C. Rodman, writing to Mr. Peale states that a welcome awaits the Norwich players at the tournament, now known as the Eastern Division tournament. Mr. Rodman states that three of the six courts at Fairmount park have been lighted.

Among those who will take part in the tournament is Samuel B. Prentice of Providence, who often played in the nations' tournaments in this city. It is not definitely known whether any of the Norwich players will make trip to Philadelphia this year.

ADVANCE INSURANCE RATE ON UNPROTECTED DWELLINGS

Local insurance agencies have just received the latest New England insurance rate sheet. The new rates apply to summer and other property outside hydrant protection. The fire insurance rate on dwellings, heretofore $1.12 has been raised to $1.50 for a three year period. In class E, known as substandard protection, where the rate for buildings with combustible roofs was 80 cents, is now $1.12 for buildings and contents for three year's protection.

A change has also been made in class F, unprotected property. The old rate, $1.00 has been increased to $1.50.

700,000 AT FINAL CONGRESS OF CATHOLICS IN CHICAGO

Vast Throng Gathered on the Grounds of the Seminary of St. Mary of the Lake—Twenty Minutes of Torrential Rain and Hail Failed to Disperse the Multitudes—The Official Program Continued as Solemnly and Orderly as It Had Begun—The Procession in the Morning Was the Most Stupendous of Its Kind Ever Witnessed in America.

MUNDELEIN, Ills., June 24—(AP)—Despite a deluge of rain and hail in the midst of the final ceremonies, the [illegible] international eucharistic [illegible] carried to a magnificent [illegible] on the grounds of the [illegible] of St. Mary of the Lake today [illegible] hundreds of Catholic clergy, [illegible] twelve cardinals, before a [illegible] throng of more than 700,000 [illegible].

[illegible] sunshine supplanted the [illegible] the last scene of the spectacle [illegible] army of pilgrims from [illegible] corners of the earth preparing [illegible] for Chicago. It had taken [illegible] and a night for the address [illegible] Mundelein to hear [illegible] blessing of Pope Pius [illegible] only that the last pilgrim [illegible] the largest religious [illegible] in history would [illegible] away before tomorrow.

Most Cardinal Bonzano, the papal [illegible] and denounced the golden [illegible] on the altar of the outdoor [illegible], he turned to the acres of [illegible] upturned faces in the vast [illegible] amphitheatre, before the [illegible] and behind the [illegible] and did not [illegible] defection marred [illegible] the five-day [illegible].

[illegible] announced that between [illegible] person had passed [illegible] gates of the seminary [illegible] during the morning.

[illegible] gathered additionally soon [illegible] the procession began to file out [illegible] the sanctuary shortly after noon [illegible] at 2 o'clock the first light rain [illegible].

An hour later a torrential rain and [illegible] upon the multitudes for twenty minutes. Thousands on the circle [illegible] assemblage dashed for shelter [illegible] few widely separated sections [illegible] two square miles the [illegible] a momentary condition [illegible] but the official program continued [illegible] as solemn and as orderly as [illegible] began.

[illegible] the rain comes of the [illegible] over the continuity of the [illegible] and before the [illegible] closed, the seminary [illegible] a resounding Latin hymn from the [illegible].

Bishop Thomas L. Heylen, of Namur, Belgium, president of the permanent committee on eucharistic congresses, issued a statement tonight lauding the success of the congress and thanking the citizens of Chicago and the United States for their cooperation and generous hospitality in the reception of the congress pilgrims.

An expression of appreciation not only to Catholics, but to non-Catholics for their "generous cooperation" in caring for the congress guests from all over the world was issued by the Rev. Monsignor C. J. Quille, general secretary of the congress.

"The cardinals of the principal countries of the world are returning to their native lands carrying a message telling not only of the wonderful faith of the Catholics they met at the congress, but also of the wonderful spirit of fraternal charity of all those with whom they came in contact," he said.

Promptly at ten a. m., the legate and eleven cardinals with their retinues ascended the scarlet thrones at the altar and the mass began.

A 500 voiced choir of St. Mary's seminary students, accompanied by the Chicago symphony orchestra, sang the hymns and chanted the responses to the mass.

When the mass was finished, Cardinal Bonzano divested himself of his ecclesiastical robes and replacing the red robe of his princely rank left the sanctuary under a canopy of gold carried by four acolytes.

The procession began with altar boys and seminarians, and ended in the person of the legate who carried the ever golden ostensorium containing the sacrament.

As the sacrament passed along the four mile route of the procession the devout throngs dropped to their knees to honor the living god of the sacred host.

The procession itself was perhaps the most stupendous of its kind ever witnessed in America. Churchmen and laymen from every land made the journey together with representatives of virtually every order and society known to the Catholic faith.

WOMAN FINANCIAL "WIZARD" SENT TO AUBURN PRISON

NEW YORK, June 24—(AP)—The $500,000 dream of a young woman who thought wealth and social prestige could be secured by financial "wizardry" was shattered by the clang of prison gates today.

Mrs. Grace Ott Bange, 25-year-old telephone employe, was sentenced to two and one-half to five years at Auburn prison, on her plea of guilty to a gigantic stock swindle. Her husband, Charles, 26, whose innocence she had protested, but who pleaded guilty to receiving stolen property, received two to four years in Sing Sing.

Mrs. Bange was employed by the New York Telephone company, when in 1922 she received her schooling. First she convinced friends that she could buy stock below its market value, as an employe, and in a short time turned money over to her for investment. Her husband also interested his friends, one of his employers at the Standard Oil company giving him $64,000.

Mrs. Bange confessed that her operations totalled more than a quarter of a million dollars. She never purchased or delivered the stock, but speculated in the hopes of large profits, and paid "dividends" to old customers from the contributions of new victims.

With her arrest, she was thrown into bankruptcy, where it was found that the assets, except for expensive furniture in a luxurious apartment, were negligible.

SEEKS ANNULMENT OF A CHILDISH WHIM MARRIAGE

BRIDGEPORT, June 24—(AP)—More of a childish whim than in impulsive act of high romance, a runaway marriage that had its inception in "good times" at Bell Island, a summer resort on Long Island sound at South Norwalk and which was not consummated, was detailed in superior court this afternoon when Annie Higgins Stevens of Elmhurst, L. I., a recent graduate from the Teachers' college of New York city, petitioned of Judge Alfred C. Baldwin that he grant a decree annulling her marriage to Edwin Stevens, of Norwalk.

Each was 20 when, on August 19 1924, they went to Port Chester with two other eloping couples and were married by a justice of the peace Judge Baldwin, condemning the unpremeditated steps taken without parental knowledge or consent, refused to grant the decree because necessary elements of evidence were lacking. JEALOUSY WAS CAUSE OF THE BREWSTER TRAGEDY

His decision ended with dramatic suddenness the inquest into the death Tuesday night of the socially prominent young couple after servants had testified the Brewsters had been happy and relatives had attributed the tragedy to Brewster's mental turmoil resulting from his war experiences. District Attorney Edwards of Nassau county said he was convinced that Mrs. Brewster had not encouraged the writer of the letter and was deeply in love with her husband.

The letter found by the coroner in Brewster's wallet, had been torn to bits, and later was patched together by investigators.

Addressing Mrs. Brewster as "Tweet, dearest" the writer of the letter, who signed himself "Red," or "Rod," called the dead woman "your dear stray girl whose names sings in the trees and whose face lingers in the dusk of twilight that clouds these old nooks."

The letter opened with a reference to a letter received by the writer from Mrs. Brewster and said "I am lonely and miserable, as can be and yet have one thought and that is to get away where I can get you, even for a spell."

Previously, after two of the Brewsters' servants had testified, Tracy Lyon, Mrs. Brewster's father, said his daughter had telephoned him on the evening of the tragedy and said her husband had beaten her.

He said Brewster, while he was not wounded in the war, "could not forget what he had seen," and had not recovered from his experiences.

Pittsburgh Police Chief in Inquiry

WASHINGTON, June 24.—(AP)—Produced as a surprise witness, Police Chief Peter Paul Walsh, of Pittsburgh, kept the senate campaign funds committee in an almost constant state of surprise today during the hour Senator Reed, of Missouri, and other members plied him with questions.

The first stir came as Walsh denied that his written instructions to city detectives that a large majority for the Pepper-Fisher ticket in the recent $3,000,000 republican primary in Pennsylvania was expected in their respective districts constituted an order for them to get out and work for that ticket.

He also told the committee that he knew of no "dives" in Pittsburgh and informed Senator Goff, republican, West Virginia, that he couldn't tell him the difference between a saloon and a club. Previously he had testified that he was not a drinking man and consequently had no occasion to visit clubs.

Besides Walsh, the committee at another abbreviated session, heard Justice Thomas B. Boyle, president of the American bank at Philadelphia. Neither threw any additional light on the campaign and Chairman Reed apologized to the justice for calling on him.

After Boyle had testified that he made no contributions to the campaign and that his bank had discounted no political notes, Senator Reed explained to him that he had been called as the result of certain information furnished the committee.

"All like most of it, it is misleading," Reed added.

Before the committee began today's hearing, it held another private conference with Wayne B. Wheeler at his request. At its conclusion, Senator Reed said neither of the conferences yesterday nor today had related to Mr. Wheeler's testimony and that their purpose would be divulged in due time.

The general counsel of the Anti-Saloon league has charged that the liquor interests spent large sums in the Pennsylvania primary campaign and it is understood that he is gathering and submitting leads to the committee for investigation.

Police Chief Walsh insisted that no one had asked him to support the Pepper-Fisher coalition and that he made no effort to "line up the force" for the renomination of Senator Pepper and the selection of John S. Fisher for governor.

Then Senator Reed produced a letter, addressed to Inspector C. S. Eberburn, division of detectives, under date of May 17, the day before the primary. It said:

"With reference to the attached list of employes under your command you will instruct them that we expect a large majority in their respective districts for the Pepper-Fisher ticket tomorrow.

"You will also instruct them to bring you a list of the returns cast in their districts on Wednesday, May 19th, showing the number of votes cast for all candidates."

Walsh acknowledged the letter but contended that the communication merely carried an instruction to the detectives to turn in a list of votes for all candidates in their district.

First Senator Reed, then Senator King, democrat, Utah, and finally Senator Goff took a hand at trying to examine the police chief but his letter was an instruction to the detectives to get a large majority for Pepper and Disher was called up on the carpet. But he stubbornly declined to explain it.

WASHINGTON NAVAL AGREEMENT DISREGARDED

GENEVA, June 24.—(AP)—The underlying principle of the Washington naval agreement was knocked overboard today at the conference of the naval experts on disarmament and was helped to a quick fall by the nations of Continental Europe, who practically acted as a bloc under the leadership of France and Italy.

This principle is known as a comparison of the naval strength of the various nations by taking into account the total tonnage of the various types of warships, as for example battleships.

At the forenoon session of the naval experts who have under discussion naval problems in preparation for the eventual international disarmament conference, it was decided that this was not a possible standard for comparing navies. The vote was 11 to 6, and at the afternoon meeting 12 nations, all European, registered the opinion that the Washington principle was not fair or acceptable to all nations.

All the big naval powers, except France and Italy, backed up the American contention that class tonnage should be regarded as the one standard of comparison of the strength of navies.

PROHIBITIONISTS TO HAVE TICKET IN NEW YORK STATE

NEW YORK, June 24—(AP)—The Empire state prohibition party today flung a hat in the political ring for the firs time since 1922.

Those nominated were: Charles E. Mahaffie, New York, for governor; Mrs. Ella McCarthy, Syracuse, for lieutenant governor; David A. Howell, Brooklyn, for attorney general, and Nell Dowell Cranman, Elmira, comptroller.

The convention endorsed the candidacy of Franklin W. Cristman Herkimer, for United States senator on an independent republican ticket.

House of Lords in Fear of Feminism

Lord Banbury's Appeal, "Let the Males Have One Place in the Country Where They Can Live in Peace."

LONDON, June 24.—(AP)—The house of lords still stands a stunch bulwark against the rising tide of feminism that has threatened its historic threshold.

Stalwart peers, who are determined to keep the upper house of parliament as a last stronghold against the entrance of women, gathered in force today and by an unexpectedly large majority defeated Lord Astor's third attempt to enable peeresses in their own right to sit and vote in the house of lords.

The bill had been defeated last year by a majority of only two and it had been generally anticipated that Lord Astor would succeed in his crusade this year. The feminists, however, had failed to take into account the stalwarts who have long regarded the house of lords as a first rate men's club. Lord Banbury of Southam, leader of the bill's opponents, succeeded in defeating the measure 123 to 80.

Lord Astor, whose wife is one of the best known of the feminine contingent in the house of commons, argued that it was only by an accident of birth that the holders of the peerages under debate were women and not men. He argued that most of the members of the upper house sat there because they happened to be the sons of their fathers and without the slightest inquiry as to their qualifications as legislators.

"For heaven's sake, let the males have one place in the country where they can live in peace," responded Lord Banbury.

Lord Cecil, who supported the bill, said that the reason the government itself had not introduced the measure was because the ministers were divided on the question. Answering the contention that women lack the physical strength to become legislators, Lord Cecil said that it would be a very weak woman who could not withstand the physical demands made upon members of the upper house.

Lord Birkenhead, opposing the bill, said that every member of the house knew that not one of the peeresses proposed for admission would be nominated by any competent tribunal to any legislative body at all. He contended that the entire method of constituting the house of lords should be changed and that when the reform was ripe women members of it ought to be selected from the whole population of the country.

Lord Newton said with all respect that he did not think that the middle-aged ladies eligible for seats under the bill would prove a great attraction. If the proponents of the measure desired to entice reluctant young bloods to attend the debates, he thought it would me more efficacious to introduce a number of chorus ladies.

Among the peers who voted in favor of the bill were the Earl of Reading, the Earl of Selborne, Viscount Chelmsford, Baron Harding and several bishops.

$43,372,000 DEFICIENCY BILL REPORTED IN THE HOUSE

WASHINGTON, June 24—(AP)—The second deficiency bill, last of the supply measures expected this session, was reported to the house today by its appropriations committees affording an insight into the condition of the many government agencies on the verge of a new fiscal year.

It carries a total of $43,372,000 of which $14,136,000 is for new public buildings throughout the country, $875,000 for repairs to the white house, and $2,860,750 for strengthening the land and sea forces of the prohibition unit.

It is planned to have the house begin consideration of the bill tomorrow, and at the outset it is expected that no effort will be made to limit debate.

Of the bill's total, $9,200,000 would go to meet deficiencies incurred before the close of the fiscal year June 30 and the remainder to supplement appropriations already made for the next fiscal year.

The bill allots $2,656,760 for prohibition enforcement to supplement a previous appropriation of $10,635,695 for next year, the committee report explaining this would permit an addition of 906 employes and bring the total personnel of the government's dry force to 4,503 exclusive of agents engaged in narcotic work. Besides $1,000,000 is provided to start construction of the ten new coast guard cutters authorized for use against rum smugglers and customs law violators.

LEAGUE OF NATIONS NOW CONCERNED ABOUT ITALY

GENEVA, June 24.—(AP)—Swiftly the league of nations' attention and apprehension have passed from Brazil and Spain to Italy, from which come persistent rumors that Premier Mussolini, incensed over alleged new German agitation in southern Tyrol is reflecting as to whether Italy should hasten the entry of Germany into the league. Italy's vote, like Brazil's last year, can keep Germany out.

Mussolini is pictured as fearful of a possible union between Austria and Germany by reason of later revision of the Versailles treaty. Germany, it is believed is certain to fight for such revision once she is a member of the league. A union of this kind would put Italy in a position similar to that of France, for Italy then, like France, would have a common frontier with Germany. Other reports reaching the league headquarters allege growing discontent in Italy with the Locarno agreement, whereby Itay, like Great Britain, guarantees the inviolability of the Rhine region, with a movement starting to induce the Italian government to withdraw as guarantor.

SENATE REJECTED M'NARY FARM RELIEF BILL 45 TO 39

Coalition of Western and Southern Senators Was Overcome By a Combination of Eastern and Other Southern Members—Battle Over Substitute Measures Will Be Renewed in the Senate Today.

WASHINGTON, June 24—(AP)—By a vote of 45 to 39 the McNary farm bill went down to defeat in the senate today after a long and dramatic struggle.

A coalition of western and southern senators failed to overcome a combination of eastern and other southern members, as in the house recently when the Haugen proposal, patterned on similar lines, was rejected.

Undaunted by defeat advocates of farm relief legislation embodying the controversial equalization fee feature immediately proposed a series of substitutes but after turning one down the senate, tired and weary, recessed with the other pending.

The battle over substitutes will be resumed tomorrow with supporters of the McNary measure striving to save something from the wreckage, and opponents, pressing their advantage, determined to pass the house cooperative marketing bill and nothing else. The McNary proposal was attached to it as a rider, and the cooperative marketing bill is still to be voted upon.

Until the roll call on the McNary rider the outcome was uncertain, several senators switching their position at the last minute. On the vote the republicans were almost evenly divided, 23 voting for the bill and 24 against. Six more democrats lined up against than for it, 21 opposing and 15 favoring the measure along with the one farmer labor member.

The roll call:

Republicans — Cameron, Capper, Cummins, Curtis, Deneen, Gooding, Harald, Howell, Johnson, Jones of Washington, LaFollette, McMaster, McNary, Means, Norbeck, Morris, Oddie, Pine, Robinson of Indiana, Scholl, Stanfield, Watson and Williams—23.

Democrats—Ashurst, Bratton, Caraway Copeland, Dill, Heflin, Jones of New Mexico, Kendrick, McKeelar, Mayfield, Neely, Simmons, Steck, Tyson and Wheeler—15.

Total 39.

Republicans—Bingham, Borah, Butler, Couzens, Dale, Edge, Ernst, Fernlroot, Metcalf, Moses, Pepper, Reid, Fess, Gillett, Goff, Hale, Keyes, Phipps, Reed of Pennsylvania, Sackett, Shortridge, Wadsworth, Weller, and Willis—24.

Pairs were announced as follows:

Farris, democrat for with Fletcher, democrat, against; Frazier, republican for with Dupont, republican, against; McKinley, republican, for with Greene, republican, against; Nye, republican, for with McLean, republican, against; Overman, democrat, for with Warren, republican, against. The roll call, with pairs, accounted for the entire senate membership except Senators Smoot, republican, Utah, and Pittman, democrat, Nevada who were listed as absent and not paired.

Immediately after the vote the coalition in support of the bill crumbled when Senator Norris, republican, Nebraska, reoffered the measure with an amendment providing for the immediate operation of the equalization fee against cotton instead of deferring it three years as originally proposed.

The amended measure was rejected, 52 to 24, with the southern democrats standing to a man against it.

The senate also had rejected a substitute by Senator Robinson, of Arkansas, the democratic leader proposing the creation of a $200,000,000 export corporation to loan money to farmers. The vote on this substitute, which carried no provision for an equalization fee, was 50 to 34.

As a preliminary to the final showdown on the bill, however, the senate reaffirmed by a formal vote of 50 to 34 the amendment, sponsored by Senator McNary, republican, Oregon, in charge of the measure, to increase the use of $75,000,000 carried in the bill for the benefit of cotton. Southern senators supported this amendment while many from the east and west opposed it.

Before the vote on the McNary amendment, Senator George, democrat, Georgia, appealed to the democrats to reject the proposal as he was convinced that the deferred provision inserted in the original bill solely as a bait to southern senators.

Senator Norris explained his proposal only would place cotton on an equal basis with wheat, corn and hogs and he wanted to know if the democrats were serious in their efforts to relieve the farmers.

With the Norris proposal out of the way the senate turned to other substitutes, Senators Ieproot, republican, Wisconsin, and Norbeck, republican, South Dakota, each seeking the attention of the senate to proposals they sponsored.

As the debate grew in intensity Senator McNary moved that the senate recess.

He was greeted by shouts of disapproval and Senator Ashurst, democrat, Arizona raised his voice above the din with implorations to senators to stay and complete the business. Finally was decided to remain in session, the vote on the question being 46 to 38.

The senate took a change of heart, however [illegible] accepted without protest, a motion by Senator Curtis, of Kansas, republican leader for an executive session to consider nominations. At [illegible] adjournment was taken until tomorrow.

SECOND ATTEMPT TO SET THE STATE PRISON AFIRE

HARTFORD, June 24—(AP)—What may be the second attempt to set fire to the state prison at Wethersfield was being investigated by prison officials today.

This latest supposed incendiary effort was detected by a guard making his rounds at 1:25 o'clock yesterday afternoon, when he found a bundle of shirts in the south end of the factory building smouldering and about ready to break into flame. Extinguishers were quickly brought into play and all fire danger was eliminated before any damage was done.

The prisoners who work in the shirt shop had been removed from that building to their cells a short time before the fire was discovered.

In practically every respect, the fire attempt of Wednesday afternoon was similar to that of last February. On this former occasion, shirts were also found ablaze in the factory building.

Owing to the minor nature of Wednesday's affair, few of the inmates knew of it, and there was no confusion of any sort.

WET or DRY?

The new Texaco is a "dry gas." Petroleum engineers have been trying for years to perfect a motor gasoline which would vaporize to a dry gas under engine conditions and overcome the bad effects of a wet mixture. The new Texaco forms a dry gas at a temperature much lower than others on the market.

A wet gas, as it would appear in the engine manifold, is a mixture of gasoline vapor and fine drops of liquid gasoline. It is the cause of unequal cylinder distribution and excessive crankcase dilution, and the result of high "end point" and low volatility. A wet gas chokes power. Liquid drops separate from the mixture at every bend of the manifold, and following the straightest path, concentrate at the end cylinders. That is why the spark plugs of the end cylinders are fouled more frequently than the others.

A dry gas, no matter how greatly magnified, is absolutely invisible—a perfect mixture of vapor and air. Dry gas conserves power. It equalizes cylinder distribution and reduces crankcase dilution to a minimum, and is the result of low end point and high volatility.

The new and better Texaco, with its new low boiling point and low end point, its higher volatility and balanced distillation range, now provides an entirely new motor fuel—a dry gas of unequalled qualities.

The result is a far better manifold distribution, which permits a leaner carburetor setting, and means no flooded cylinders, less crankcase dilution, easier starting, maximum acceleration and more mileage.

Start today with a stop at the pump displaying the Texaco Red Star and Green T. You don't have to ask for the new Texaco—it's there at the regular place from the regular pump. And there, too, you can get the clean, clear, golden Texaco Motor Oil, famed for its lubricating value and freedom from carbon formation.

The Texaco Pump has a new meaning. Better motor results—unmistakably better.

With the closing of school [illegible] the need arises for providing [illegible] that will give [illegible] a wholesome and [illegible] In this [illegible] the [illegible] opening of [illegible] next week the situation should be well taken care of. There were the days when children roamed the streets, [illegible] and many an [illegible] the fun [illegible] ball. But that was [illegible] hicles had only been dreamed of. Today it is a [illegible] caution. Even [illegible] such that [illegible] the streets [illegible] in them.

JUST A POLITICAL [illegible]

Of course [illegible] [illegible] [illegible] immediate [illegible] tax reduction [illegible] demand [illegible] by the [illegible] for that a [illegible] this fiscal [illegible] a chance to [illegible] worry the [illegible] the impression [illegible] ing to public [illegible]

Without a doubt the [illegible] members are right in their contention that nothing in the way of further tax reduction can be expected at this session. In the presentation [illegible] all they have not seriously [illegible] to have it get anywhere. They see a chance to put the administration [illegible] the wrong light among [illegible] might be carried out these [illegible] such wind talk, but they [illegible] the lack of a good argument for their move under existing conditions. Recklessness is poor bait even in a political effort.

COAL LEGISLATION

Even though the session [illegible] ress is not going to end [illegible] there is no prospect that there will be anything done at this session in regard to coal legislation. The attitude frequently displayed of being unwilling to do anything until there is an emergency and when there is an emergency of holding aloof until calmer judgment may prevail still exists.

A few days ago it was declared by Representative Jacobstein of New York that legislation regulating the coal industry was being blocked by the powerful interests representing the operators, dealers and miners. In other words all those concerned about coal with the exception of the consumers are getting the careful attention of congress but the consumers are being ignored by congress quite as much as they are being preyed upon by the others.

As the situation stands at the present time the consumer is being taxed a higher price for coal even though no higher wages are being paid. This is true to the extent that lower freight rates for the bringing of bituminous coal into New England are being urged upon the interstate commerce commission on the ground that this fuel is needed as a competitor for anthracite in order to obtain a fair price.

While the new agreement gives reasonable assurance of an adequate coal supply, the fact remains that the government is powerless to act in the case of another strike [illegible] such an emergency suddenly arises. In the bituminous fields there's no telling what the next year will produce. There the agreement will have to be renewed on some basis but the hands of the federal authorities are quite as effectually tied as they always have been.

This explanation has been offered [illegible] not believed this is the favorable time for congress to act, but so far as carrying out the recommendations of the coal commission and the president there doesn't appear to be any such thing as a favorable time. And in the meantime the coal consumer, as long as he remains such, is subjected to the same old holding back from which congress continues to refuse to remove him.

TIME TO GET BUSY

By a vote of its members congress has shown that it is not ready to go [illegible] is that certain legislation desired has not been [illegible] but it is believed that by sticking in Washington action can be forced.

[illegible] no matter before congress [illegible] and not have been disposed [illegible] fore this if there had been [illegible] attitude taken by congress [illegible] ing toward getting down to business. Time has been wasted, delays have been forced and the hope has [illegible] instances [illegible] no action [illegible] would be prevented. [illegible] ing to mean that the same [illegible] the extra [illegible] during the [illegible] weeks of the session [illegible] ing seems to lay out [illegible] the streets [illegible] in them.

[illegible] just as much out of the [illegible] ble if they are [illegible] peril which is [illegible] In addition [illegible] idea of providing [illegible] children to do [illegible] but of mischief [illegible]

With proper [illegible] grounds, with [illegible] instruct and with [illegible] test the young [illegible] for something [illegible] serves a present [illegible] mirable manner. PARTICULAR PEOPLE

"I'll say the public is getting doggone fussy these days," declared the man who went everywhere. "It used to take what was handed it thankfully and now it sits up and gives orders.

"When we first got grand opera in this town we were delirious with joy listening to a lady weighing 225 and 5 feet 1 inch tall warble the part of the languid, melting heroine! She had a voice and the avoirdupois must be overlooked. Now we work the poor things to death and distraction trying to reduce to the proper sylph-like figure that our taste demands! The unfortunate girls slave over do-re-mi till they're black in the face and ravenous with hunger and instead of spaghetti, sausages, a pound of butter and a loaf of bread all they dare nibble is a lettuce leaf and a glass of water!

"They may get $5,000 a performance, but they'd swap it all for a full meal any day. I met a grand opera star out at supper once and it would have made your heart ache to see the fragile creature gaze after the dishes of gooey things that were passed to her and refused. While the rest of us devoured cream puffs and buttered rolls and baked ham and ice cream all she dared touch was a cracker and a cup of coffee.

"But when she sings Juliet, by heck, she's got to look like Juliet or we'll know the reason why. There may be nightingales in her throat but there can't be bulges on her frame it she's going to keep her job.

"The gentlemen who are cast for heroes are having an equally hard time. Time was when a stout, massive individual whose cheeks hung down upon his chest and who needed two chorus men on each side to hoist him up a pair of steps would as a matter of course sing Romeo or the airy duke in 'Rigoletto' or one of the gay heroes in 'La Boheme,' but he'd last about two seconds these days. The girls like their heroes svelte and agile and they get on some way. It's thumbs down for the bulky personage and no manager in his senses will hire a tenor with poundage. Even the office boy knows better than to let him in.

"The movie girls have it even more brutally. The average woman just loves going to the movies and groaning with envy over the sylphs on the screen.

"'Look at her!' they will hiss in agony to the plump friend with them. 'That thing ever in your life see anyone looking so thin! My dear, how does she do it?' I'd like to know. It wasn't a bit bigger than she is when Jim and I were married. My waist was only 17 inches, really. Not that I am so fat now and I am sure I could be as thin as that was if I would diet for just a few weeks and I think I'll begin tomorrow. Pass the box of chocolates, dear.'

"So she continues to haunt pictures with starved Little Flossy Fridums in them to watch her and envy and hope that she'll see the aggravating thing put on weight. The minute Flossy does she's all over it. A man never loves a [illegible] to Mars but not to want would ask him to dinner if he didn't [illegible] to cooking so that at least and must allow [illegible] with the [illegible] ... programmed.

IN THE PUBLIC EYE

John Dillon, who is 75 years old today, was long one of the most conspicuous figures in Irish politics. He is called "Honest John" in Ireland and is one of the most widely-loved of that island's sons. He entered parliament in the early '70s and in 1896 succeeded Justin McCarthy as leader of the anti-Parnellites. During his active career in politics he was in frequent trouble with the British government and served several prison sentences for seditious utterances. He helped Parnell and Michael Davitt found the Land league in the United States and after the death of Parnell he became the acknowledged leader. In 1918 he succeeded John Redmond as chairman of the nationalist party. Mr. Dillon is not only an able politician and parliamentarian, but a qualified physician and surgeon, having graduated from the Royal college of Surgeons of Ireland.

From Small Beginnings

Nathanael Greene, the Great American General

Some years before the American revolution, a Quaker blacksmith set up a forge and shop in Rhode Island and there tended to the wants of the colonists. In this work he was aided by his young son, Nathanael, who had every expectation of succeeding his father in the work of the forge. This son was a bright, eagerfaced boy with a keen liking for books and study. He asked questions of every one who came his way and did all he could to add to his stock of knowledge. As a result of this inquiring habit of mind he soon became a well-informed man.

When the Quaker blacksmith was 28 he had so earned the admiration of his neighbors that they made him a member of the legislative body of Rhode Island. In that body he served several terms and added to his already high reputation for sound wisdom. Foreseeing the coming of the war with Great Britain, the Quaker put aside his Quaker principles and began to study books concerning the management of troops. He was first of all an American and he believed intensely that the rights of the American colonists should be respected. He was prepared to fight for his liberty if need be.

His immediate friends and relatives were shocked at beliefs that did not coincide with their principles. When, just before the outbreak of the war, Nathanael Green actually began the drilling of troops, the Quakers expelled him from their membership. Nevertheless, his patriotism did not waver and he decided to throw all his fortunes with the struggling colonies.

When the Revolution broke out Nathanael Greene was the one man in Rhode Island well fitted to command the respect of his fellowmen in military life. He became a brigadier general, held command at Boston, built Fort Greene on Brooklyn Heights, gave service at Brandywine, Valley Forge and Monmouth and as commander of the American forces operating in the south, he showed such skill in military movements that he led to the surrender of Cornwallis and the end of the American revolution. He was only 44 when he died suddenly on a plantation in Georgia, given him by a grateful country.

The Quaker blacksmith, believing intensely in loyalty to country, became one of the greatest generals in a war that established a new nation, dedicated to the principle that all men are free.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Fair Play Endorsed.

Mr. Editor: When it comes to pass that fair play needs to get information from the chamber of commerce or any of our self-constituted city organizations, he will find it is easier to ask questions than to get intelligent answers.

He will find that these clubs are more concerned about, what they call, "having a good time" than studying matters of accounting, certified or uncertified. This writer does not claim to be up in figures enough to tell how any business, individual or municipal, can make a profit of $121,003.28 in a year's time and still be short $150,000. Our late state treasurer, Mr. Gilpatric, or perhaps our own Mr. Fenn, might straighten this out and show a fair balance besides.

A citizen with half an eye can see the inconsistency of a business wholly owned by the inhabitants making a profit at all; for, off of whom, can a profit be derived except from the same people who are supposed to own the plant?

Possibly himself one, not only a tax payer but running an unequal game in competition. Only recently one electrical house has gone out of business. Of course no legitimate plumbing or electric house, such as our city represents, can afford to put out such advertising attractions, give free cooking lessons and occupy palatial premises in which to attract trade.

Much of their compensation property comes from frugal living, earnest labor of their hands, and intelligent management of their business. These are the only means of success within the reach of the citizen taxpayer, and he cannot fall back on the city treasury if he fails to get by.

Was He Or Wasn't He?

In one of the recent week end speed tournaments between reckless motorists and reasonably careful motormen the race was what might be called a dead heat. That is to say, they both arrived at a given point at full speed simultaneously. The car hit the flivver a broadside blow and threw it into a roadside shelter shed hard enough to move the building three feet off its foundation. From out of the tangled mass of iron and timbers scrambled the driver of the automobile unhurt but badly peeved. One of the car crew rushed to him and said, "Good heaven, man, you sure are lucky."

"Lucky, h——," said the flivver driver, "I don't see how you figure it. Just take a look at my car!"

"TELL HIM NOW"

If with pleasure you are viewing
Any work a man is doing,
  If you like him or you love him, tell him now;
Don't withhold your approbation
Till the parson makes oration
  And he lies with snowy lilies o'er his brow,
For no matter how you shout it,
He won't really care about it;
  He won't know how many teardrops you have shed;
If you think some praise is due him
Now's the time to slip it to him,
  For he cannot read his tombstone when he's dead.

More than fame and more than money
Is the comment kind and sunny,
  And the hearty, warm approval of a friend;
For it gives to life a savor,
And it makes him stronger, braver,
  And it gives him heart and spirit to the end;
If he earns your praise, bestow it;
If you like him, let him know it;
  Let the words of true encouragement be said;
Do not wait till life is over
And he's underneath the clover,
  For he cannot read his tombstone when he's dead.

IN DAY'S NEWS

TRISTAN DMA CUNHA

Famine threatens the inhabitants of Tristan da Cunha, because of a potato crop shortage according to a dispatch from London.

"'Famine again threatens' the dispatch should read," says a bulletin of the National Geographic society on the lonely British possession in the South Atlantic. "Because a poor potato crop brought the 95 islanders to the verge of starvation 20 years ago.

"Tristan da Cunha, lying as it does, between Cape of Good Hope and the Straits of Magellan, is a good example of relativity. There is nothing wrong with the island's longitude and its latitude is perfectly respectable. Many residents of San Francisco, Richmond, Virginia and Wichita, Kansas can be found who will declare that 37 degrees-plus north is the best latitude in the world. Thirty-seven degrees-plus south, which is Tristan de Cunha's latitude, happens to be another story. If this volcanic island, two-thirds as large as Manhattan, were moved into the northern hemisphere along its longitude it would make a good port of call between Gibraltar and the Azores.

"But Tristan da Cunha is so far away from everywhere that the British government, in the interests of economy, has had to cancel the annual warship visit. The place is a trial to the foreign office in Whitehall, London. The foreign office would like to surrender the place to nature and the rats, move the inhabitants bag and baggage to a Cape town reservation and be done with famine worries. But the inhabitants will have none of it. They love their home. Of course they have seen little of the world.

"Tristao da Cunha, a famous Portuguese navigator, started out in 1506 on the trail of his predecessor Vasco da Gama to conquer more of the East Indies. But he was blown off his course rounding Cape of Good Hope and found himself 2,000 miles west of that corner of Africa. There he discovered the island which now takes his name. Alfonso Albuquerque Tristan da Cunha. Two small rock islands associated with Tristan da Cunha go by the names of Inaccessible Island and Inhabited only by penguins and other sea birds.

"At one time the Tristan da Cunha islanders grew corn and then there was less danger from a famine. A shipwreck ended that happy prosperity in a curious fashion. When the unfortunate ship was thrown against the island's rocky cliffs rats deserted the sinking vessel. The rats were better colonizers than the British and it is a moot question whether man or rodent owns the island. Certain it is that the rats put a stop to the growing of grain and have caused no end of damage. What Tristan da Cunha needs worse than anything is a Pied Piper. He could not charm away the children since, according to the islanders, the lures of Cape Town do that already.

"Nor has a great margin has the state department in Washington, D. C., missed having the worry of helpless Tristan da Cunha on its shoulders. An American once claimed the island. Tristan da Cunha had a measure of prosperity in the early years of the 19th century when the whale enticed men and wooden ships into the Roaring Forties. It was a haven for sailing ships from Salem Gloucester and Boston. A Salem man named Lambert and a companion took up their residence on Tristan da Cunha and Lambert declared himself sovereign and sole possessor of the island, 'on the rational and sure ground of absolute occupancy.' He renamed the group, The Islands of Refreshment. His hope was to develop what might be called a 'filling station' for whaling ships. But Lambert and his partner were drowned two years later in the tempestuous seas for which the island is infamous.

"Still Tristan da Cunha has some things to recommend it. There are no laws. Once it was proposed to give the people a constitution, but they regarded such a document superfluous. The islanders manage their affairs without the complications of any written covenants."

SONORA SOLONS MOVE STATE CAPITAL TO COOLER CLIMES

HERMOSILLO, Sonora, Mexico, June 24 (AP)—Sonora solons have packed their bags. The state capital again is being moved, part and parcel, to the cooler and more comfortable capitol building at Magdalena, approximately 100 miles north of here.

The moving action is taken following the unanimous decision of Sonora's law-makers to make the annual pilgrimage to Magdelena, which for the summer will be the capital city of the state.

ACADEMY TEAM BEATS WESTERLY HIGH FOR INTERSCHOLASTIC CROWN

The Norwich Free Academy baseball team annexed the championship of the Interscholastic league for 1926 when they defeated Westerly high at Morgan park, New London, Thursday afternoon by the score of 3 to 0. The game was the play-off contest to decide the winner of the pennant race, both Westerly and Norwich being tied in the league standing at the end of the regular schedule.

Lloyd Jarvis, the southpaw ace of the local squad was in fine form, allowing the losers but two scattered hits and these two men were the only Westerly players to reach the initial sack throughout the entire game.

Henderson, on the mound for the losers, was touched up for nine hingles, most of which came at opportune times and resulted in the three runs that meant victory.

The Academy threatened to score in the first inning when after Chmielewski had been retired Sadinsky got a safe on Henderson's error and Jarvis followed with a scorching single, Sadinsky stopping at second. However the next two batters were retired on infield flies.

The ice was broken in the second when Jarvis crossed the plate for the Academy. Washington, first batter in this inning, singled, and after George had been retired, Goldblatt followed with another single which, coupled with an error by Turco, sent Washington to the plate with the first run. Chmielewski scored the second run on Hamel's single and another error by Turco. This ended the scoring for the inning although both Chmielewski and Harris received their bases on being hit by the pitcher and being passed respectively.

The third and last run came in the fifth inning when George, first batter, tripled in deep left and scored on Goldblatt's third hit of the afternoon, a single over second.

(Special to the Bulletin)

WESTERLY, R. I., June 24—Narragansett commandery, No. 27, K. T., of Westerly, with Em. Sir John A. Hogg, commander; Arthur J. T. The Westerly knights templar made the pilgrimage to Springfield by autos on the windshields of which appeared the legend, "Narragansett commandery, No. 27, K. T., Westerly, R. I." the majority going by way of Norwich or New London to Colchester and then to East Hartford to Springfield.

Accompanying the knights were some 30 of their ladies and headquarters were made at the Hotel Worthy, corner of Main and Worthington Sts. Formation for the parade was made by Narragansett commandery at 10.45 o'clock and headed by the Worcester City band of 25 pieces, John F. McGrath, leader, marched to their place in line. Following the line of march, the sir knights returned to the Hotel Worthy to be joined by the ladies, when a full course dinner was served in the main dining room of the hotel which had been reserved for their exclusive use. The return to Westerly was made by auto later in the day after attendance upon the exhibition drills and other special features of this St. John's day outing.

HOPED THAT GAS WILL LAST MANY ADDITIONAL MILES

WESTERLY, R. I., June 24—No less than eight east-bound automobiles, bearing Delaware auto plates, each with a passenger list of from eight to a dozen sypsies and carrying miscellaneous camping outfits, passed over the Pawcatuck river bridge on Thursday noon. It is needless to say that Westerly police authorities were pleased to have the band pass clear through the town of Westerly without stop.

The Hudson sedan, 67,079 R. I., of John W. Neild, Jr., of Westerly and Norwich, while being driven up Beach street early Thursday morning skidded off the wet surface of the highway. The car smashed into the wooden fence on the James Gardiner place on the Watch Hill road and two stone posts were broken off. No one was injured but damages were sustained to the rear of the car, which was towed to the Rhode Island garage.

Tag Day for the Salvation Army will be observed in Westerly on Saturday next. In the records of the office of the Westerly town clerk appears the following transfers:

June 22. William A. Wilcox, commissioner of the Estate of Peleg Clark to Howard E. Thorp, a lot or parcel of land with dwelling house on the south side of Clarke street.

Regular session of Third district court this (Friday) morning before Judge Oliver H. Williams in Westerly is expected to be a busy one for besides the usual list of cases on the criminal and civil dockets, it is expected that many will be drawn to the court to hear the liquor cases called in which intoxicants were seized in the raids staged last Friday evening and Saturday morning by the members of the Westerly police department.

As a result of recommendations made by Westerly Fire Chief and Building Inspector George E. Egger, a number of public assemblage places in and about Westerly will be equipped in the near future with modern and up-to-date fire escapes. Among fire escapes which will be renewed will be one on the north side of the Barber Memorial building on High street. On the third floor of the building is the lodge room and other rooms occupied by Franklin lodge, No. 20, F. and A. M. and other Masonic bodies. The trustees of the lodge will be asked to pass upon the opening of an automatic emergency exit to be located in the north wall of the large lodge room which will lead out upon an iron or steel balcony or platform upon which also will open the exit from the armory banquet room as in the present fire escape system. An iron stairway will lead down to the second story platform and another ladder with a 250 lb. counter weight will hold the ladder from the ground until stepped upon from above. Other buildings to be re-equipped with fire escapes are the New Park hotel on High street and the Pleasant View House at Pleasant View Beach.

In a superior court case for Washington county which has been on trial for several days during the past week in Providence, the ownership of a granite cutting business in Westerly involving litigation between Mrs. Maude E. Freestone and her two brothers, Herbert LeRoy Pellett and Earl H. Pellett, was decided Wednesday by Judge Hugh B. Baker to rest in a partnership as conducted by the two brothers when the court denied and dismissed a bill of complaint brought by Mrs. Freestone, seeking to have the court declare she is the owner.

Mrs. Freestone sought to have her brothers enjoined from interfering with the operation of the business by her. She claimed ownership under a bill of sale or indenture from her father to her back in 1918. The testimony showed, the court declared, that the father started the business in 1902 and the question was raised whether the son Herbert LeRoy Pellett was a partner with his father during the father's lifetime. The court ruled that he was a partner. Since the father's death in 1922, the other brother was taken into the concern as a partner and Judge Baker held that Mrs. Freestone took "little or nothing" under the bill of sale, for which no consideration was given.

Although Mrs. Freestone was administratrix of her father's estate, she brought the suit as an individual. Judge Baker characterized the case as one of those unfortunate affairs coming out of family troubles.

It has been estimated that fully 90 per cent of the graduating class this year of the Elm street school, Westerly, will enter high school, according to Herman F. Driggs, the principal. The exercises will be held next Wednesday.

The medals are given for competition in athletic contests of the Playground and Recreational association of America. Carl Tute has the highest average among the boys and Asunda Matarese among the girls.

CHILDREN NEXT DOOR HAD RAIDED FAMILY PRESERVES

(Special to the Bulletin)

JEWETT CITY, June 24—Officer Henry Vegiard was called to the home of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Muscaluk on Lincoln square Wednesday evening to investigate the loss of canned goods and jellies from the cellar. They were absent from home over Sunday and found the articles missing on their return. The family in the other part of the house had just recently moved there, and as the children were the ones who stole the articles from the schoolhouse a short time ago, the officer questioned them. A large stone jar, chili sauce, and a number of jar covers belonging to Mrs. Muscaluk were found in the house. The jelly was not recovered, but the glasses had been thrown in the river. Officer Vegiard told the children that another theft would send them to the reform school, as this was the second offense within a few weeks.

DANIELSON

For the 51st time on a June day a class of graduates of Killingly high school today received their diplomas, tokens of having completed a course of study better fitting them to take their places in the world and to better serve in whatever parts life may cast them than would have been possible without the special qualifications they now possess.

Class day exercises in the afternoon preceded the graduation exercises of the evening. Both functions were held in th town hall, made attractive with pretty arrangements of banked laurel, cut flowers, national and class colors and other aids to a beautifying plan.

The capacity of the hall was tested at both the class day and the graduation exercises, the class day exercises being an invitation affair, while the evening exercises were open to the public.

A number by the high school orchestra opened the class day exercises and then the prayer was given by Rev. H. H. Conkson. A school chorus, My Heart at Thy Dear Voice, preceded the delivering of the address of welcome by Denton Twomey Gallup.

An honor essay, The Making of a Newspaper, was read by Miss Rose Milone, and the next number was a vocal solo by Miss Helen Louise Keech. The Creed of A Good American was the subject of another honor essay, by Miss Zpilpha Nichols Codding, who maintained an average of over 90 per cent. during her four years course of study at the high school.

The class history was presented by Walter Alfred LaPierre and this was followed by a vocal solo by Miss Gladys May Cooke.

A street scene in New York was made the setting for the class prophecy, presented by Miss Elizabeth Cecilia McGorty and Henry Clarke Stoddard. A violin selection by Miss Thelma Reed Cogan was a pleasing number. Success Through Handicaps was the subject of an essay by Miss Flora Frazer Keech.

The school chorus sang again, presenting Valentine's Farewell, prior to the reading of the class will by Miss Ruth Margaret Litch. Presentation of the class gift was made by Robert Theodore Fulton and accepted for the school by Richard Wardsworth Barrett. The exercises closed with the singing of The Star Spangled Banner by the chorus and audience and the giving of benediction.

Rev. Alexander Howes Abbott of Norwich delivered the address at the graduation exercises in the evening, when the program of exercises was as follows, with an appended list of the graduates:

Music, high school orchestra; prayer; music, a. The Angel, Rubinstein, b. The Serenade, Moszkowski, Girls' Glee club; address, "The Next Grade," Rev. Alexander Howes Abbott, Norwich; music, a. The Lotus Flower, Schumann, b. The Forest Dance, Brahms, Girls' Glee club; presentation of diplomas, Miss Emma F. Pilling; music, "America"; benediction.

A mark of honor to one who had been a resident here for 55 years and engaged as a merchant for 30 years, business in Danielson was generally suspended from one to two o'clock Thursday afternoon during the funeral services for Julius F. Winkelman.

Services were at the home in Main street at one o'clock and Rev. Harding W. Gaylord of the Westfield Congregational church was the officiating clergyman. Burial was in Westfield cemetery. The bearers were John W. Gallup, William J. Craig, George P. Berris and Michael Dascoli. A. F. Wood was in charge of the funeral arrangements.

Removal of rails from Furnace street between Main and Cottage streets and in Cottage street from Furnace to Water street leaves the affected sections of strange appearance. The trolley rails have been there for about a quarter of a century. It so happens, however, that the streets look better and will be even more so when the work of smoothing them up is completed. The rails being taken are temporarily stored on Paco company property off Cottage street.

Co-incident with the commencement exercises of Thursday appeared the annual issue of the Killonian, the Killingly high school publication. This year's annual edition is probably the finest of any of the series. In any event, one may think long without recalling a better one. It contains the history of the class of 1926, various other information pertaining to the class and its graduation and is printed on very fine paper and has a handsome cover with silk tie. As a souvenir it will be highly prized by all interested in the school and will be treasured by members of the class.

It was not indicated up to Thursday afternoon that the injuries sustained Wednesday afternoon by Izraeh Conrad of Elmville were more serious than first appeared. The convention is to be held in Grange hall. Another speaker at the convention will be Mrs. Lida C. Clark, vice president of the Connecticut League of Women Voters. Carl Barnett also will address the convention. The Brooklyn league will entertain the visitors and their guests at lunch.

Tonight brings the final event of commencement week, the Alumni association reception and dance in honor of the class of Killingly high school graduated Thursday. (Written Specially for The Bulletin)

Once in a while some farmer-man, afflicted with weeds as Job was with boils, dumbly wonders what the pesky things were made for, anyway.

Pussley and shepherd's purse and sorrel and quack-grass and pigweed and amaranth and creeping bent and thistles,—what were they and the rest of their tribe intended for?

The farmer who has to lame his back and begrime his hands and loosen his finger-nails and lacerate his temper fighting the things is often inclined to look on them as deliberately malicious inventions of the devil.

Per contra, I remember having heard, in the old days when the current orthodoxy of the time assured that God made the world and the sun and the comets and the milky way and all the infinite hosts of illimitable space just for the sake of a few men on this little pin-head of an earth,—I remember that various old women of both sexes used to maintain that all "herbs" were provided expressly to cure various human ills. Every one, they said, was "good for" some sickness or other. The only thing was to find out which was which, so as to be able to tell a sick man's symptoms called for mullein tea or swamp-root infusion or mandrake pills.

As men come to know more of the tremendous universe wherein distances can no longer be measured by miles or leagues, but can only be suggested by "light-years," the comparative unimportance of this wabbly globe has been both to suspicion that, as it can no longer be regarded as the center of the universe, so its two-legged parasites may not after all have been the world's purpose and excuse for the whole creation.

This suspicion tends to a whole-some humility, to say the least. If man and the supreme and unimprovable last work of all creation, the fact as to all said creation having been devised for his behoof leads observers to take a somewhat different view of his neighbors and backgrounds.

If wheat and potatoes were expressly devised and contrived to give man something to eat; if cows gave milk solely to supply him with butter and cheese; if fish swam the seas and birds winnowed the air entirely in behalf of him; if tides rolled and stars shone merely to help him—why, then it was but a logical step to assume that snakes and rattlesnakes and mosquitoes and weeds were also invented with some abstruse reference to him. The fact that no one appreciated them was evidence of his ignorance and heterodoxy, not of their inappropriateness.

If, on the other hand, the worlds and the universes weren't made just to serve as roosting places for feathered lords, but for some remoter and, so us, thus far unknown end, then, perhaps weeds weren't made solely to bother us.

The more pebbles we pick up along the shores of life's awful mystery, the more we appreciate the abysmal depths of our ignorance of that all-encompassing ocean. And the more difficult we find it to make adequate explanations for many things which a benighted generation thought it must, at least make a bluff at understanding.

Weeds for one thing.

What is a weed, anyway?

We sow clover-seed in our mead-ows and use every trick we know to make it grow. The bigger and lusher the better we're pleased. It's a valuable forage-plant. But, when we find a young clover starting in our onion-bed, we pull it up. It's a weed.

Last April when I was putting in a few carrot and onion and lettuce seeds in my small garden, it seems that I did it entirely from the seeder of one row before putting another in the hopper. As a result of this laches, I have two rows of lettuce, four rows of carrots with quite a few lettuces among them, and four rows of onions with quite a few carrots in them. Now the lettuce is all right, where I sowed it. But it's a "weed" in the carrot rows. Similarly the carrots are plants in their rows, but "weeds" which have come up among the onions.

There are I don't know how many thousand species of plants listed in the botanies. We men have found out selfish uses for some score or two. Shall we, therefore, assert that these few are useful "plants" while the thousands of others are useless "weeds?"

It isn't beyond the bounds of possibility that, when we grow a trifle more intelligent, we may discover uses to which we can profitably put many growths we now regard with hostility.

Take, for instance, pigweed and pussley. They surely are nuisances in a seed-bed. But they both make edible and nutritious "greens." Gather 'em young, cook 'em with a "hunk" of home-cured salt pork, and they'll satisfy hunger and supply nourishment. Or sorrel. At least one variety is an improving ingredient in a salad. And my soil-doctor, when he sees it spreading over an arid knoll, jerks his thumb over in its direction and says, sharply, "Lime." It is for him a sympton, clearly disclosing the sort of soil medicine called for.

Or thistles. Picking them out of your smarting fingers you are inclined to deny that they're good for anything. But Johnny Jackass, browsing them off as fast as he can swallow, thinks differently. They taste pretty good to him. At least, he acts as if they did.

Or quack-grass. "What in thunder can you make out that's good for?" Well, I had a hummock of poor land in my old gardens. It was so barren that it wouldn't even grow good beans. And it was infested with quack. I never seeded it down. What was the use? Neither clover nor timothy nor red-top nor blue-grass would grow on it. Yet it has produced for three years and in this year promising a generous growth of two-tons-to-the-acre hay, which I find is gloriously clean and dustless, and which both cow and horse eat as greedily as the best timothy. It's another case of the stone which the builders rejected eventually turning out the best corner-stone in the quarry.

Nevertheless, when we've gone all over the weeds,—on paper,—we have to go over them with the hoe in the garden and field. And, no matter how we excuse them,—on paper—they're pernickety pests in those gardens and fields.

A Pennsylvania farmer has been counting up the cost of the lossed things in his state. He finds that it costs the farmers of Pennsylvania about $24,000,000 a year to fight weeds. And the fight never ceases in complete victory. It all has to be done over again, next year and each following year. It costs an average of $3 and acre for every acre which is tilled. Which exceeds the school-tax on that acre. In other words, the Pennsylvania farmer pays a bigger tax to the weeds than he pays for child education.

It is presumable that what is true in Pennsylvania is also true in New York and Connecticut and Massachusetts and the other states. Adding the estimates for the whole country together, and they run into the hundreds of millions. From which it appears that weeds are not only nuisances but actually bloodsuckers, draining the lifeblood from an occupation which is already almost anemic.

In which connection two stories of farm triumph over weeds recur to me. One is that of Clarke's famous Higganum hay field, which used to produce, annually, from three to six tons to the acre of weedless hay. He accomplished this result by giving his land an intensive and persistent cultivation, before seeding, that the weed-seeds were practically all killed before they had a chance to sprout. He used to say that every grain of dirt in that field had to be turned over at least 48 times before he'd put a timothy seed into it. If a very few survived this drastic treatment, he had them weeded out, as if from an onion bed. But such survivals were few and scattering. And Clarke made this system of weedless hay-growing pay in dollars and cents.

The other case is that of a big onion grower out in Illinois. He puts in at least 40 acres, every year. But he takes fully five years, beforehand, to get that patch fit for onions. His plows and fertilizers, raises clover to turn under, plows and fertilizes and harrows and weeds, till he gets every square foot of his proposed onion-bed as fine and mellow as ashes for a foot deep. He keeps the starting weeds under by this persistent tillage till he has torn and smothered the life out of them. Then he drills his onion-seed with a special drill which drops just one seed very two inches, thus obviating the necessity of thinning. And his preparation so reduces the output of weeds that he finds two men are able to keep a 40 acre onion-bed clean as a whistle the season through, and do all the tillage and mulching needed, as well.—He also makes this are less farming pay in dollars and cents.

In my own records are those of a garden patch, so given up to quack that no attempt had even been made to plow it for years. The felted quack roots made plowing a herculean task and their growth made all attempts at raising useful crops hopeless. One early spring I tore it up on April 10. From that day till June 16 I never allowed a quack-leaf to show above the surface. I was on it with plow or harrow at least every third day. I left the quack-roots unremoved. They might doubtless, continue to suck in food. But they couldn't breathe, for I didn't permit a leaf to show. And they smothered. June 16 I put in white beans. The fall was an onen one and the beans matured. From that day to this not a vestige of quack has shown on that patch, except where a root may have been dragged in from the ends by harrow or plow. And I made the decaying quack-roots help feed onion crops on it for 20 years.

From which I deduce the opinion that weeds CAN be conquered. If you're the time and strength to go at 'em right.—And the patience.

THE FARMER.

Rainbow Chasers
never find the gold

YEAR by year as the motor car registration in Soconyland leaps by bounds, Socony Gasoline and Socony Motor Oil continue to find favor with millions of experienced motorists.

There is nothing unusual in the spectacle. Socony Gasoline and Socony Motor Oil are backed by a company with over 52 years of refining experience. "Gasolines" may come—just as "gasolines" have disappeared from the market, but Socony is always—"Uniform in Quality—Best in Results." Experienced motorists know it and choose it.

"There will always be a certain number of people in the world who go chasing rainbows, hoping to find a pot of gold at the foot—and return sadder and wiser—without the treasure. Likewise, there are some motorists who waste their time and money in searching for something better than the old reliable Socony Gasoline and Socony Motor Oil.

"Incidentally, I hope you'll use the Socony Touring Service, Room 1211, 26 Broadway, New York City. Free Socony maps and touring information for the asking."

NORWICH DOINGS 75 YEARS AGO

In Norwich 75 years ago, two of the banks, the Norwich bank and the Norwich Savings Society, had just elected officers. The Norwich Courier of this week contained accounts of the terrible San Francisco fire in which the loss was estimated up to $12,000,000.

Tuesday, June 17, 1851—At the annual meeting of the stockholders of the Norwich bank held at their banking house Monday June 16, the following gentlemen were re-elected directors for the ensuing year: J. G. W. Trumbull, Nathaniel Shipman, Jedediah Huntington, John Isham, Jacob W. Kinney, Joseph Williams, George Hoss, Patrick Fanning, Henry Strong, Joseph Otis, Russell Hubbard, Charles Johnson, John Dunham.

At a subsequent meeting of the directors Charles Johnson was re-elected president and Frank Johnson, cashier for the ensuing year.

The New London Chronicle states that the bill chartering the Norwich and Westbrook railroad passed the senate by a majority of only one. This is a mistake: the majority for the road was three as the Chronicle may easily satisfy itself by reference to the yeas and nays.

Thursday, June 19, 1851—The principal part of the time of the house yesterday afternoon was occupied in balloting for a U. S. senator without success. On the first ballot with six candidates, the two leaders were R. S. Baldwin, whig, 104, T. H. Seymour, democrat, 99. On the fourth ballot the result was; Baldwin, 105; Seymour, 103; scattering 13; necessary to a choice, 111. Having thus balloted four times without success a motion was made indefinitely to postpone any further action on the subject. After debate the proposition was defeated and by a vote of 112 to 108 Wednesday next was fixed upon as the time for another trial.

Five hundred shares of the Hartford and New Haven railroad stock were bought last Saturday by Cornelius Vanderbilt, Esq., at $130 a share, cash. He was previously owner of about 1500 shares of the same stock.

The steamship Aria sailed from New York yesterday with 110 passengers and $1,115,000 in specie.

San Francisco papers of May 12th contain the account of a terrible conflagration in that city with estimated loss of $12,000,000 and great loss of life. Ten or 12 individuals have lost their lives. The fire commenced in the upholstery establishment of Baker and Meserve.

We are glad to learn by a letter to the postmaster in this city that Mr. William H. Colt who went to California some 12 or 13 months since and is doing business in San Francisco as a commission merchant came out of the fire with comparatively slight loss. In the letter alluded to it he says, "I am happy to say that, by the utmost effort, we, by the blessing of a kind providence, saved all our change but about $1,500."

The Panama railroad is progressing steadily and it is now supposed that the cars will commence running from Aspinwall bay to Gatun in July.

GALES FERRY

At a special meeting of the Ladies Aid society of the Gales Ferry M. E. church the president, Miss Alice Sandlee announced that the society had received $700 from an unknown friend, near the hands of Noyes B. Allen, trustee and collector for the permanent fund of this church. This amount was given to clear the society the indebtedness incurred in remodeling the M. E. parsonage. The secretary, Mrs. D. G. Perkins was instructed to extend a vote of thanks to the gift.

Queen Esther circle of girls and their leader, Mrs. R. Irving Hurlbut met Friday afternoon at the home of one of the members, Miss Marjorie Bates in the Long Cove district.

At the business meeting it was voted to discontinue the meetings as the Queen Esther society are to give an entertainment early in June. It was also voted to give $5.25 toward the church budget, and $5.00 for some missionary course. The Misses Gertrude D. Allen, Helen L. Culver, Matilda Harold and Mrs. R. Irving Hurlbut, the leader, were named as a committee in charge of the entertainment, the Misses Maurice Comun, Elizabeth Bennett, Dorothy Bandre and Margaret Barker, advertising. Ethel Main, Lucy Spellman and Rose Norcross, candy, Marjorie Gates and Lucile Bennett, tickets.

Jerry Jaffa of Philadelphia joined his mother and sister at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Nelson Packer on Saturday and spent the week end.

Mrs. George W. Green and daughter, Ann, of Panama, motored over from Hartford Monday with Mrs. Greene's cousin, Mrs. William H. Brooks, to the home of Mrs. Brooks' mother, Mrs. Delphine Fish. Mrs. Brooks will remain until after the Yale-Harvard regatta and Mrs. Green will spend July and August with Mrs. Fish, where she will be joined later by her sister, Miss Marion Rogers, also of Panama.

Mrs. Delia Nash and her son Dr. William G. Nash, and Mrs. Nash with their sons, William and George G. of Newark, N. J., were guests of Nathan A. Gibbs and Mrs. Gibbs for the Yale-Harvard races.

The Long Cove auxiliary of the Ladies' Aid society held its regular meeting Wednesday at the home of Mrs. Carl B. Lawson.

Norman Wilcox of Hasbrouck Heights, N. J., is spending some time at the home of his uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. Fred W. Turner of Long Cove.

Mrs. F. W. Jones of Mt. Vernon N. H. entertained at her summer cottage on the Bluff, Miss Caroline B. Freeman, and Mrs. Fanny A. Metcalf, to meet her house guest, Miss W. Jones also of Mt. Vernon.

Mr. and Mrs. Randolph Mathewson and Mrs. Mathewson's sister, Miss Millie Wood of Chicopee, Mass., motored here Saturday to visit Mr. Mathewson and Miss Susan Mathewson.

Recent guests of Mr. and Mrs. Myron Moxley were Mr. and Mrs. Albert Lamb of Mystic, and Chief Earl W. Greenard Mrs. Green of the Submarine Base.

The more noise a theory makes when it explodes the less dangerous it is.

BURGESS BEDTIME STORIES

The Little Muskrats See a Great Swimmer

By observation you may learn,
And pass the knowledge on in turn.
—Old Mother Nature.

Knowledge is made up of a great many observations, the observations of a great many people. If people didn't observe, which you know, means to see things with understanding, there would be very little knowledge. Much of the training of the little people of the Green Meadows and the Green Forest, the Laughing Brook and the Smiling Pool is through observation of father and mother and what they do, and of other things.

Jerry Muskrat's children took to swimming as naturally as most little [illegible]. They didn't [illegible] to [illegible] to learn to [illegible] the water. They did have to learn to paddle, but to do this well. Mother Muskrat was very particular about this swimming. Many times when they thought they were just swimming about for fun they really were being trained how to swim rapidly and well.

"Watch your father swim across the Smiling Pool," Mother Muskrat would say. Then Jerry Muskrat would dive from the Big Rock and swim clear across the Smiling Pool under water, while the seven little Muskrats looked on admiringly.

"I suppose Father is the best swimmer in all the Great World," said one of the little Muskrats.

Mother Muskrat shook her head. "No-o," said she slowly, "he is a very good swimmer, but he isn't the best swimmer in all the Great World."

"Who is the better swimmer?" demanded another little Muskrat.

"Well, I think that probably Billy

"Who is a better swimmer!" demanded another little Muskrat

Mink is a better swimmer, though I am sure your father is a better diver," declared Mrs. Muskrat.

"I should like to see him swim," said another little Muskrat.

"You probably will have a chance, my dear," replied Mother Muskrat. "But I warn you right now to keep out of sight. I am afraid that Billy Mink might be tempted to try tender young Muskrat for dinner. He is a wonderful swimmer, but there is another swimmer who is better."

"Who?" cried all the little Muskrats together.

Mother Muskrat opened her mouth and suddenly closed it again without saying anything. She made a sign for them to keep perfectly still, which they all did. Out of the Laughing Brook into the Smiling Pool came a round, brown head, moving swiftly. Suddenly it disappeared. All the little Muskrats held their breath. Then out in the middle of the Smiling Pool appeared that head again, and in the mouth was a fish. Straight to the Big Rock swam the fisherman and climbed out on it.

The seven little Muskrats, with their little eyes seeming to pop right out of their little heads, stared at this brown-coated fisherman. Never had they seen any one like him. His body was long, his legs were short and his tail was of good length tapering and covered with hair. They noticed this right away, because, you know, their own tails are almost bare.

Breathlessly the little Muskrats watched the brown fisherman as he sat on the Big Rock eating the best portions of that fish. He didn't eat the whole fish, but only the very best part. Then he dived into the water smoothly and easily and shot across Smiling Pool and down the Laughing Brook where it leaves the Smiling Pool on its way to the Big River.

"Who was it?" inquired all the little Muskrats together.

"It was the greatest swimmer; it was Little Joe Otter," replied Mother Muskrat. "He can swim faster than a fish. A Muskrat is slow beside him. When you see him, just keep out of his way."

"Yes m'm," said all the little Muskrats.

Prescription Department

As we trace back the history of this department during its 84 years of existence and note the steady yearly increase since its inception in 1842, we have a justifiable pride that its policy has been so strictly adhered to. Conservative in many ways, but more progressive than the ordinary, where it affected its patrons most, as illustrated by the fact that we have had the services of graduates of recognized colleges of Pharmacy for many years before the law compelled college education.

All prescriptions are prepared by pharmacists duly registered and are double checked before leaving the department. They are prepared strictly according to the written instructions of your physician and none but standard drugs and chemicals are used.

UNIDENTIFIED BODY OF SAILOR FOUND IN WATER

(Special to the Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, June 24.—The unidentified body of a United States coast guard sailor was discovered floating in the Thames river this morning and all attempts to determine the identity of the body have failed, but with the arrival in port of the United States coast guard destroyer Cassin, scheduled for tomorrow, it is probable that the body will be identified through means of the ship's records. It is believed that the victim was a fireman aboard the Cassin. On the man's left shoulder is a tattoo of a battleship and the inscription, "U. S. S. Cassin." The clothing also shows that the man was a fireman. The physician who did the tattoo work on the victim's shoulder, remembers doing the tattooing, but does not recal, who the sailor was that received it.

Shortly after 9 o'clock when two destroyers departed from the pier to perform patrol duty along Long Island sound members of the crew of the destroyer Medali, tied up at the state pier observed the body floating about twenty feet from the pier. Picketboat 2323 was sent to recover the body and this was done. Medical Examiner Charles Kauffman viewed the body, the features of which were not recognizable and stated that in his opinion, the body had been in the water at least two weeks. It is believed that the victim came to his death while attempting to board the destroyer in the recent season, falling between the pier and the destroyer and the splash of the body entering the water not being heard by the crews of the several boats usually tied up there.

MOTOR YACHT DEDELIA WAS DESTROYED BY FIRE

(Special to the Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, June 24.—The motor yacht Dedelia, owned by Allen L. Lindley, 77 Broadway, New York, was completely destroyed by fire early yesterday last midnight and today the hull of the 65-foot pleasure craft was moored on the beach north of the state pier, to which place the vessel was towed this morning by United States coast guardsmen.

The yacht was discovered ablaze about 1:30 o'clock and at a time when Lindley and two other men were aboard. An explosion is believed occurred for the flames appeared suddenly and in volume. The burning craft, which was at anchor off the point of the New London Ship & Engine company, was sighted at the United States coast guard section base and patrol boat 230, in command of Chief Boatswain's Mate Marion Mitchell, was dispatched to the yacht. When the patrol boat reached the burning yacht the craft was doomed to destruction and a half hour later the flames had burned to the water's edge. A hawser was made fast to the hull and she was towed to the beach.

MOTOR LAUNCH TENDER DAMAGED BY EXPLOSION

(Special to the Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, June 24. — The handsome 40-foot motor launch tender to the steam yacht Halcyon, owned by Dutee Flint, Newport, R. I., was extensively damaged this morning when an explosion occurred aboard the craft while it was at the public landing. A section of the flywheel was hurled through the hull of the boat, which became partially submerged at the pier. Aboard the boat at the time of the explosion was Mr. Flint, Capt. A. W. Greene, Davis Condon and local United States Steamboat Inspector John A. McDonald.

The launch had but arrived at the wharf when Inspector McDonald boarded the craft to go to the yacht to make an inspection. Capt. Greene experienced a little difficulty in starting the engine and to accomplish this he pulled the choker. Doing so caused the engine to become flooded with gasoline and when another attempt was made to start the engine the flow of gasoline became ignited and caused the explosion. The boat was close enough to the wharf to permit all of the occupants to scramble to the wharf before the boat started to sink and some of the furnishings of the boat were saved by being thrown to the pier by Capt. Greene.

The body of Rev. John F. McDonald, late rector of Church of Immaculate Conception, Norwalk, whose death occurred several days ago, was brought to New London this afternoon following services being held at Norwalk and was buried in St. Mary's cemetery, Rev. Mr. McDonald was born in Noank and was graduated from Bulkeley high school in the class of 1881.

Louis Petrini, a barber, and Carlina, his wife, are at odds to a degree that there seems nd chance whatever of a reconciliation being effected. Mrs. Petrini accused Louis in the police court this morning of being a brutal husband and father. She also said he was addicted to the use of liquor, but this and the other accusations Louis denied in two languages though he was not readily understood at times. His daughter, a girl about 17 years of age, declared that her father became so threatening that she grabbed her little brother and slid down a water pipe from the second floor of her home to get away from him. Mrs. Petrini declared that Louis had threatened to kill her and that when he had invited friends to dine with him he upset the table. This brought from Louis a statement that the story was false, though he admitted that he leaned on a table and caused it to give indications of tumbling over. Mrs. Petrini told the court that she would not continue to live with her husband, so there was no possibility that she could be reconciled. Still the court has faith in what Dickie Mansfield can accomplish so after a fine was imposed Judge Prince suspended the execution of the judgment and placed the husband in the custody of Mr. Mansfield. Then Mr. Mansfield began a task that he was not convinced would succeed.

Miss Catherine Crowley of Norwich was to have appeared to answer a complaint of so operating her automobile that the vehicle interfered with traffic on Main street. Miss Crowley could not be in court today so the case was continued till the 1st of July.

Byron C. Vine was fined $5 for passing a silent policeman on the left side.

Mrs. Edward Ahearn and family of Hartford have arrived at Ocean Beach and are occupying one of the Linden cottages for the remainder of the summer.

Joseph G. Mondelci has sold to Patrick J. and Ellen Cosgrove a house and lot on Ashcraft road extension.

William H., and Lillian Lincoln have sold a house and lot on Hempstead street to Hyman and Anne Lelatisky.

John Gately, formerly of New London, died Tuesday at his home in Detroit. He is survived by his wife, a daughter, Miss Fannie Gately, Detroit and a brother, Michael Gately, 42 Belden street, this city. Mr. Gately was of advanced years and had resided in Detroit about five years. Prior to his removal to that city he was employed by the city of New London as janitor of Saltonstall school.

Tony Gentile, 32, a New York laborer, who has been employed on construction work at Ocean Beach several days, was arrested this morning charged with indecent exposure. He is being held a prisoner at the police station in default of bail of $200 and will be presented in the police court tomorrow morning.

Included among the batch of violators of the city's parking laws who were tagged by the police this afternoon was Hyman Schwartz, Norwich. Mr. Schwartz's auto was tagged because it was parked on State street longer than is permitted, 30 minutes, by Traffic Officer John Courtney. Mr. Schwartz, however, will not be presented in the police court tomorrow morning for he was allowed his freedom with a warning to adhere to the parking ordinances in the future. Several other violators of the parking laws were treated in a similar manner.

The vanguard of followers of the Yale-Harvard race and who will witness the season's greatest aquatic event tomorrow, began arriving in New London this afternoon and this evening. The major portion of the men and women came to New London by automobile, but hundreds arrived by rail early this evening, while many others came to New London by yacht. As a result of the influx of race attendants all of the hotels were crowded to capacity this evening, while at Eastern Point the Hotel Griswold was filled to overflowing. At the Hotels Mohican and Griswold special officers were on duty throughout the night. This morning five army airplanes arrived in New London, coming here from Hampton Roads, Va. During the afternoon and until dusk one or more of the planes made flights over the city and over the course where the crack college crews will battle for supremacy tomorrow. The number of yachts in the harbor was greatly increased this evening when many of the smaller types of boats came to an anchor. Conspicuous among the arrivals was the motor yacht Teaser, which arrived in New London harbor from New York, making the trip in two hours and fifteen minutes. Captain of Police Charles Pinney has arranged for every available officer being on duty tomorrow afternoon and evening in order to handle the immense throng that will jam the city streets immediately preceding and following the race. Extra special agents of the New York, New Haven & Hartford railroad will be on duty at the Union station and the state police will be on duty both this side and across the river.

PROHIBITION OFFICERS GATHERING IN NEW LONDON

(Special to the Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, June 24—The police sprung a surprise this afternoon when they conducted raids on two places of business that have been suspected of dispensing liquor illegally for some time. Evidence of the sale of liquor was obtained in each place visited. The proprietors of the establishment, Peter Jordano, 84 Golden street, who conducts a grocery store, and Frank Parsnetsky, corner of North Bank and John streets, where he is proprietor of a restaurant, were arrested charged with violation of the liquor law and will be presented in the police court tomorrow morning.

Both Jordano and Parsnetsky obtained their freedom by securing a surety on their respective bonds of $1,000.

A large force of prohibition enforcement agents appeared in the city this afternoon and because of their number their presence was conspicuous, especially to proprietors of places that dispense liquor. Every boat race day prohibition enforcement agents make it a practice of stopping cars that are suspicious for the purpose of determining whether the automobiles are being used to transport liquor.

Rosie and Lena Eroe, 22 and 20, respectively, and gypsies, were presented in the Groton town court this morning charged with theft of $70 from Norman Lappen, Tuckahoe, N. Y., and Irving Doyne, New York. Through counsel the girls entered a demurrer, which was overruled by Judge Cornelius C. Costello and each was fined $50 and costs. Following the imposition of the fine, Judge Costello ordered the girls and the remainder of the gang to leave the town.

TRAFFIC JAM STRUCK NEW LONDON ON THURSDAY

(Special to the Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, June 24—It was indeed fortunate that the one-way traffic rule on Bank street was changed so that the rush of cars came the other way last night or there would have been a serious jam on State street that would have brought accidents. As it was the lower end of State street was a maze of autos that kept operators busy and traffic officers alert every minute. Under the one way rule all autos came from Bank street into the narrow passage on State street. Near the car terminal and the monument which space was by no means sufficient to accommodate the cars. And the congestion this evening is in no way comparable to what it will be midnight and in the rush hours of Friday. The upper part of State street was choked up so that motorists had difficulty in getting out of the jam.

PRESIDENT'S SUMMER NEIGHBORS HARDY FOLK

PAUL SMITH'S, N. Y., June 24 (AP) —President Coolidge's neighbors at White Pine camp on Lake Osgood this summer will represent the extremes of the social scale.

Contrasted with the millionaires whose cottages and camps dot the shores of the many lakes in this section of the Adirondacks are the mountain people who for generations have been wresting a living from a reluctant wilderness.

These hardy North Country folk are New York state likes to call them, are the descendants of the pioneers who blazed their own trails into the hills many decades ago, contesting every step of the way with a stubborn nature. Years of toil in a country where winter sits in the saddle for nearly eight months of every year have made them rugged in body and spirit fearless yet God-fearing, silent and retiring.

The advance of civilization's practices, more evident each year as the state highways penetrate heretofore inaccessible parts of the hills, has brought to this country comforts and the simpler luxuries which the last generation never knew. There are still, however, many reclaims of magnificent views and beautiful waters where modern life has not yet been introduced. As President and Mrs. Coolidge motor among the mountains they will find folk who live in rude log cabins, farmers whose horses shy at automobiles and youngsters who run when they see a stranger.

Time has taken its toll among our picturesque group in the native population. The mountain guide grandpa is passing away, leaving his wilderness in the possession of those who are finding other uses for it. There are new to take his place, for the young man of the mountains today finds other callings more to his liking.

For years the guide has been one of the real treasures of the woods. Clothed by the famous Deerslayer tradition, he has held the fancy and the hearts of the many to whom he was philosopher and friend as well as cook and pilot along the trails whose calling only he knew.

But the coming of new customs and new instruments of life has far from [illegible] pioneer spirit. As [illegible] best asset, next to a [illegible] wife and a [illegible] was his neighbor [illegible] knows the [illegible] Cooperative effort [illegible] here. INDIAN TRIBES STILL PLAY OWN BALL GAME

OKLAHOMA CITY, June 24 —(AP)— [illegible] game requiring almost [illegible] white man's baseball [illegible] in Oklahoma before [illegible] man found his way here to [illegible] government, build his cities [illegible] wells. It resembles [illegible] sport of lacrosse.

[illegible] the game, for many years [illegible] the Indian, are now [illegible] a favorite player—W. A. Durant, [illegible] the Oklahoma school [illegible] department—and himself a Choctaw [illegible]

[illegible] game is played [illegible] two tribes of eastern [illegible] four players are [illegible] in. Two poles, usually [illegible] and of small circumference [illegible] are set about 100 yards apart. [illegible] players of each team stand [illegible] end of the 'court' while four [illegible] up on each side.

[illegible] the ball is tossed [illegible] two sticks. [illegible] feet in length with pockets [illegible] ends formed with buckskin. [illegible] ball soars into the air the eight [illegible] leap to grasp it with their sticks. The player who succeeds throws the ball, by aid of the sticks, [illegible] should he strike [illegible] given one point [illegible]

Many times an efficient guard will [illegible] [illegible] seeking the post [illegible] catches the ball [illegible] side, where it is [illegible] [illegible] who runs with [illegible] enough to the pole [illegible] [illegible] it again. Should [illegible] the opposing team catch the ball, it is thrown to his post. The team scoring eight points first, wins the game.

Rules governing the game are not so strict as in the whiteman's game of baseball, says Durant. When a player on has the ball between his two sticks, an opponent may run against him throwing him off balance [illegible] possible may trip him or may throw one of his sticks between the two by which the player is holding the ball, thus causing it to drop to the ground. A player is not allowed to touch the ball with his hand. There is no "out of bounds" to the court. The ball used is smaller than the baseball. It usually has a center of lead upon which twine is wound. The cover is of buckskin.

"The game is a rough one," says Durant. "With all the tripping, striking and jostling, a player leaves the game with bruises. Many times he is struck on the head by a stick, or his knuckles are cracked by the club of an opponent. Orders were finally issued that the clubs must not weigh over a certain number of ounces."

HIRE TEACHER BY WEIGHT IN THIS CALIFORNIA SCHOOL

ETNA, Cal., June 11 (AP)—Weight—rather, the lack of it—is one of the qualifications for teaching in the Salmon river school of Northern California.

On several occasions it has been the governing factor in the choice or a teacher. Applicants must give the figure at which they tip the scales and too much avoirdupois automatically stamps the application "unsatisfactory."

MARKET WAS STRONG

NEW YORK, June 24—(AP)—Establishment of the highest level in several years by the average of 20 leading railroad shares featured the resumption of the upward movement of prices in today's stock market. The advance was not uniform because of a continuation of heavy profit taking which unsettled the market somewhat the opening, but net gains of 1 to 5 points were scattered over a broad list at the close. Trading showed another marked falling off in volume, the day's sales aggregating only 1,342,100 shares, compared with 1,723,200 yesterday and 2,426,100 last Thursday.

The day's business news, which consisted largely of earnings and sales reports, was constructive in character. Freight traffic in the week ended June 12 again exceeded the million mark and an increase of $2 a ton in steel beams was reported from the Pittsburgh district. The New York Federal Reserve bank rate was unchanged, setting at rest rumors that another cut would be made this week.

Strength of the Van Sweringen issues on a revival of rumors that the new "Nickel Plate" merger plan was about ready for submission to the Interstate Commerce commission featured the railroad group. "Nickel Plate" common jumped 5 points to 130, or only 1 3-4 below the high established earlier in the year, and Chesapeake and Ohio common, Erie common and second preferred and Pere Marquette each advanced a point or more.

A steady investment demand also was noted for Atchison, New York Central, Atlantic Coast Line, Canadian Pacific and Pittsburgh & West Virginia all of which advanced 1 to nearly 3 points.

Revival of speculative interest in a selected group of oil shares, based on favorable merger and earnings reports, was another outstanding development of the day's trading. America corporation and General Petroleum, which have not participated extensively in recent bullish demonstrations, each advanced over two points to new high records for the year at 31 3-8 and 68 1-4 respectively. Other outstanding industrial strong spots included Du Pont, Case Threshing Machine, General Refractories, Kinney & Co., Standard Milling, United Cigar Stores, U. S. Cast Iron Pipe and United Drug. Texas & Pacific Land Trust soared 90 points to $2,400 a share on a few odd lot sales.

Local tractions were heavy, Interborough Rapid Transit falling back more than two points and the others a point or more.

Further irregularity developed in the commodity markets. Cotton futures opened net advances of 16 to 27 points after an early period of heaviness. Wheat futures closed slightly higher in sympathy with stronger foreign markets. Raw sugar was unchanged but futures were slightly easier. Coffee prices were practically unchanged.

Call money renewed at 4 1-4 per cent, and remained at that rate all day. Time money and commercial paper rates were unchanged.

Foreign exchanges displayed a strong undertone. Demand sterling was firm around 4.85 3-16 and French francs improved nearly 10 points to above 2.90 cents in reflection of the completion of Premier Briand's tenth cabinet. Norwegian kroner dropped 12 points to 17.61 but the other continental rates showed moderate gains.

Pile Sufferers

Can You Answer These Questions?

Do you know why ointments do not give you quick and lasting relief?

Why cutting and operations fail?

Do you know the cause of piles is internal?

That there is a stagnation of blood in the lower bowel?

Do you know that there is a harmless internal remedy discovered by Dr. Leonhardt and known as HEM-ROID, now sold by Lee & Osgood Co. and druggists everywhere, that is guaranteed?

HEM-ROID banishes piles by removing the cause, by freeing blood circulation in the lower bowel. This simple home treatment has an almost unbelievable record for sure, safe and lasting relief to thousands of pile sufferers, and saves the needless pain and expense of an operation. Don't delay. Try HEM-ROID today. It will do the same for you.

POWERFUL YALE VARSITY CREW WON FROM HARVARD BY FULLY TWO LENGTHS IN ANNUAL REGATTA ON THAMES RIVER

Stalwart Sons of Eli Led the Courageous Harvard Oarsman Over the Entire Four Mile Course—Yale Covered the Course in 20:14 2-5, Harvard 20:21 3-5—It Was the Sixth Consecutive Victory For Yale Varsity Crews—Harvard Won Both Preliminary Races in the Morning—Yale Varsity Created a New Upstream Record.

NEW LONDON, June 25.—(AP)—The [illegible] power of Yale's varsity crew [illegible] Harvard's gallant challenge this [illegible] and repulsed the Crimson's [illegible] bid for rowing glory in four [illegible].

Taking the lead soon after the start and setting the pace from then on to the finish, the brilliant Eli eight stood off every threat of the Cambridge oarsmen and crossed the finish line of the four mile pull fully two lengths to the front. There seemed scarcely any doubt of the final outcome at any time of the race, in spite of Harvard's courageous efforts throughout the length of the picturesque Thames river course.

Yale's triumph in the struggle that became the 25th regatta to a climax came after Harvard had broken the Crimson-Blue-Red supremacy by winning both preliminary races in the morning for the first time since 1922.

Harvard Freshmen Win

The Crimson husky freshmen downed Yale's make-shift yearlings by one or three lengths in the first race of the day, after which the junior varsity eight from Cambridge outgained and outraced their Eli rivals to win by two lengths, both victories coming in two mile tests.

Yale's triumphant reign thus was at stake as the crews paddled in the gathering dusk to the starting marks of the varsity classic, but the convincing manner of the Eli's closing victory was characteristic of the tradition of supremacy they have set up under the coaching guidance of Ed Leader.

That Blue victory not only saved the day but marked the sixth straight time Harvard has been vanquished in the varsity race here, an achievement which equals the best previous record in the long history of the regatta, once before, from 1900 to 1905, Yale enjoyed a six year stretch of triumph while Harvard, from 1908 to 1913, duplicated this feat.

Yale, too, celebrated tonight her fourth straight year of unbroken triumph in varsity competition under Leader's guidance, a record which has no parallel in modern college rowing annals and few rivals anywhere in the ancient history of the sport. In that span of time the Eli varsity combinations have rolled up 15 victories over opponents at home and abroad.

Result Never In Doubt

Yale left no doubt of her superiority this evening over a Harvard crew which had come into the race with its morale and hopes higher than in years, buoyed by victories earlier in the day and bent upon a conquering finish in spite of the handicap of a late season start in coaches. But at no stage of the race except for a brief advantage at the start and a thrilling spurt in the last mile, did the Crimson dispute the polished oarsmanship, the driving power or the resourcefulness of the Blue crew.

Threatened, it seemed, by Harvard's last desperate spurt with the finish in sight, Yale's coxswain, P. H. Stewart of New Orleans, hauled out and waved a red flag, the danger signal, in the faces of his crew. It was the same token that had inspired Yale to her first victory of the season over Pennsylvania, but it hardly seemed needed as much today as it was on that occasion two months ago. Then Yale's supremacy was really threatened, but this evening the flaming bit of bunting merely served to add a final savageness to the Eli drive, stroked by Tommy Laughlin, of Providence, as Harvard struggled in the rear, tired and decisively whipped.

Yale actually settled the race, as it turned out, in the first half mile, for it was in this short space that the Blue-tipped oars overcame Harvard's initial lead and pulled their shell out into a lead of a length and a half. Desperately as Harvard tried thereafter, the best she could do was to cut this margin to a bare length. From the mile to the three mile mark, Yale, rowing a smooth, space devouring stroke of 32 beats to the minute, increased its margin from one to two and a half lengths. Here Harvard made its final bid and did succeed in cutting down some of the Eli margin but the pace setters had something in reserve and in the last dash it was Yale that had the strongest finishing punch.

Moments of Glory For Harvard

Harvard had her moments of glory in the morning, however. The Crimson's freshman victory was expected to be decisive and it was for Yale's combination, reorganized this week after six of the original yearling oarsmen had been forced out through an examination "cribbing" scandal, never was able to match the superior oarsmanship and drive of the Cambridge "cubs."

The junior varsity race, however, furnished a stirring battle most of the day, Yale holding a lead at the half way mark which the Crimson, with a spirited rally, wiped out, then went on to win in smashingly decisive fashion in the last quarter mile.

The setting for Yale's victory seldom has been more colorful or spectacular. Down through the narrow racing lanes, the needle like shells sped between an almost solid array of craft of every description, palatial yachts, steamers and myriad small boats, all decked out in gay colors and all furnishing a shrill blast of whistles to accompany the victorious Yale drive. Thousands of spectators, in addition, saw the races from observation trains on both sides of the river while thousands collected about points of vantage on both shores.

New Upstream Record

Yale's winning time of 20 minutes, 14 2-5 seconds tonight was proclaimed a new upstream record for the Thames course. It eclipsed the previous mark of 20:26 set by Yale last year, but is considerably short of the course record of 20:02 set in a downstream race by Harvard in 1916.

PLEDGE PEACE ON SCENE OF THE CUSTER MASSACRE

CROW AGENCY, Mont., June 25—(AP)—On the historic battleground here, where on June 25, 1876, General George A. Custer and five companies of the Seventh Cavalry were cut to pieces by an overwhelming force of Indians, white men and red today clasped hands in a renewal of the pledge of friendship which has endured for two score years.

As a large crowd gathered for the semi-centennial observance of the battle of the Little Big Horn looked on, five troops of the new Seventh Cavalry appeared on the ridge to the south, the direction from which Custer, at the head of his column, came half century ago. Led by General E. S. Godfrey, who, during the battle of the Little Big Horn commanded Company K, under Major Benteen, the troops marched toward the national cemetery to the serial notes of a funeral dirge played by the regimental band.

From the great Indian village came hundreds of red men, among them nearly 300 Sioux and Crow survivors of the battle, led by Chief White Bull who, as a youth, headed a band of Sioux under Rain-In-the-Face.

Near the obelisk which marks the historic battle ground the troopers and Indians met. White Bull made the sign of peace by raising the right hand. General Godfrey responded by depositing the unsheathed sword into its scabbard.

As they met, they clasped hands and to cement the friendship, White Bull presented the officer with a prized blanket while General Godfrey gave the chief an American flag. Then the roar of gunfire again sounded through the Little Big Horn valley from a volley fired over the graves of Custer's men and the plaintive notes of "taps" echoed against the bluffs.

SUICIDE OF AN INFANTRY OFFICER IN NEW YORK

NEW YORK, June 26.—(AP)—Captain Everett Sandwaldt of the 71st infantry shot and killed himself in the 71st Regiment armory at Park avenue and 34th street today. Brother officers announced the shooting was a suicide.

Captain Sandwaldt left a note addressed to his sister saying there was "good dreason" for his act and giving directions for the disposition of his property. The note failed to state what the reason was, now could brother officers throw light on the case. Captain Sandwaldt was unmarried. He enlisted in the regiment, a national guard organization, as a private nearly eight years ago and won rapid promotion.

DEATHS AND DEVASTATION BY FLOODS IN GERMANY

BERLIN, June 25—(AP)—Fifteen are dead, estimated damage of $30,000,000 to crops and property, and 100,000 acres of cultivated land under water throughout Germany was the toll of the floods tonight. The country is suffering from the worst catastrophe of this nature in 100 years.

Twenty thousand members, or one-fifth, of Germany's regular army have been drafted into the relief service. Along the Elbe and Oder rivers for hundreds of miles, every able-bodied citizen has been called out to prevent further breaks in levees by the raging waters. Near alle, several villages are entirely surrounded by water, and arplanes are dropping food by means of parachutes.

Four persons were drowned today, two farmers near Perleberg and a man and girl near Essen, whose canoe was caught in the swirling current of the Ruhr.

Near Frankfort, on the Oder river a dike was broken through by the torrent today, flooding more than 9,000 acres of farm land and ruining the harvest

Saxony is hardest hit. Damage estimated at $18,000,000 has been caused there, and the farmers are panic-stricken. The state and federal governments are organizing food relief expeditions and plans are under way for affording financial relief. The national railways have hired 6,000 additional strikebreakers to prevent wrecks. Extra guards have been stationed at the railway bridges.

ANOTHER OVATION FOR NORTH POLE AVIATORS

NEW YORK, June 25—(AP)—Lieutenant-Commander Richard E. Byrd and Floyd Bennett, his pilot in the north polar flight, were given a tremendous ovation tonight by a crowd which filled Carnegie hall to hear the first of a series of lectures by Commander Byrd.

The audience rose and cheered as Byrd and Bennett came onto the platform, and it was several minutes before Douglas Robinson, assistant secretary of the navy, could proceed with a tribute to Byrd's leadership and Bennett's resourcefulness by way of preface to his introduction of Commander Byrd.

Mrs. Martha Howard of Glenbrook Then Attempted to Take Her Own Life and That of Another Son.

MANASQUIAN, N. J., June 25—(AP)—Mrs. Martha Howard, a summer resident, whose home is in Glenbrook, Conn., today took the life of her son, Lawrence, aged 8, by causing him to inhale the fumes of an anaesthetic while he slept. She then attempted to take her own life and that of another son, George, Jr., aged 12.

The latter suffered no serious consequences but the mother had not regained consciousness at Anne May Memorial hospital, Spring Lake, tonight.

The elder son told police he was awakened this morning by a strong odor in the house and that his mother told him to swallow some of the anaesthetic. When he refused she sent him out with the instructions "not to tell."

Several hours later he informed neighbors his brother had a strange look. Police found Lawrence dead in bed and the mother on the floor her face covered with rags saturated with the anaesthetic.

George Howard the husband, spent today in Newark making purchases preparatory to sending the two boys to a summer camp on Monday.

He told police his wife has been despondent over the death of a relative for nearly a year and that although he had no knowledge of previous suicidal attempt, this was the first time he had left her alone. Two letters in her hand writing substantiated his statement.

Police found two small cans, one empty and several bottles containing various kinds of anaesthetic in the house. It was said at the hospital tonight that Mrs. Howard has a fair chance for recovery.

Jack Smith, chief of Monmouth county detectives, assigned to the case said a sanity hearing would be ordered and that charges of murder and attempted suicide would be preferred if the woman was adjudged sane.

THRONGS DEPARTING FROM EUCHARISTIC CONGRESS

CHICAGO, June 25—(AP)—Five days of spiritual pageantry concluded, thousands of the hosts of pilgrims who came here to attend the 29th international eucharistic congress were departing on special trains for their homes tonight while Chicago, which entertained upward of one million visitors during the week returned to normal.

Several of the church dignitaries will remain here for a few days but most of the visitors had left the city tonight or will have gone by the end of the week.

After a complete checkup today it was announced that "not a single serious transportation accident had occurred in the transfer yesterday of upward to 40,000 pilgrims from Chicago to Mundelein, Ill., and back. Nor aside from minor injuries, in the crush of the crowds eager to get back to Chicago, were any of the pilgrims seriously hurt. Such a record, congress officials said, had never been approached.

Cardinal Bonzano, papal legate to the congress, returned to the home of Cardinal Mundelein from the Mundelein ceremonies today. He will go to St. Louis next week and return here for a short visit before going to sail for Rome.

A Little Thing.

The power called habit is a little thing . . . . but it can pull your eyes open at a certain hour every morning, determine whether you dress the right or left foot first, drop a fixed amount of sugar into your breakfast coffee—free your mind from thoughts that demand actual choice.

The little habit of glancing over the advertising columns of The Bulletin daily, checking this and that which appeal to you, frees your mind from any guesswork about the merits of a product, helps you choose wisely when you buy. If you are familiar with advertisements you can discriminate merits, weigh one product against another, these truths against those. Caillaux Converted To Debt Ratification

New French Finance Minister Would Postpone Action Until the Atmosphere Has Cleared.

PARIS, June 25.—(AP)—Ratification of the debt settlement with the United States, which has become one of the outstanding questions connected with the financial policy of the government, was discussed this afternoon by the new cabinet, the subject was merged in the general financial problem, which, says a communique, was set forth to the cabinet by M. Caillaux, the finance minister.

M. Caillaux is understood to have told his colleagues the best policy was to ratify the accord if possible, although certain clauses made approval by parliament extremely difficult. He is represented by close friends as favoring postponement of consideration of the debt settlement until the atmosphere can be cleared.

Publication by the newspapers of letters exchanged at the time the debt was incurred, has made considerable impression, since they show that Article 7 of the Washington agreement simply confirms the terms on which the money was advanced to France by the United States.

La Liberte is one of the newspapers that point out that the French public is just being informed concerning the exact conditions under which the loans were made on the American treasury and inquire why the man in the street has been kept so long in ignorance of the facts.

For the past few days Finance Minister Caillaux has conferred at length with members of the committee of experts, appointed by the former finance minister, M. Peret. This committee will incorporate in its report a recommendation that the debt agreement be ratified as soon as possible as an essential preliminary to stabilization of the franc.

The finance minister now is represented as converted to ratification as a part of the complete financial renovation scheme, though still hoping that during the parliamentary vacation it may be possible to reopen negotiations to obtain elimination of Article 7, which stipulates that the American government may demand that France issue war debt bonds in such formes to be saleable on the stock market. M. Caillaux also hopes that negotiations might also make it possible to secure the incorporation of a safeguard clause, protecting France in the event Germany defaults in her reparations obligations.

Parliamentary groups which are discussing the question dwell on the fact that as the United States senate has postponed ratification, there consequently is no hurry for action by parliament. The radical group, which held a conference today on the agreement, appeared to be maintaining its hostility to ratification of the agreement unless a safeguard clause is inserted.

FOREIGN SEAMEN OBJECT TO THE "DISROBE EXAMINATION"

NEW YORK, June 25—(AP)—The desire to get ashore got the better of the modesty of ten English members of the band of the Cunard liner Mauretania today.

After refusing earlier in the day to disrobe for physical examination as required by a recently revived rule of the immigration authorities, two of the musicians who had been to New York before changed their minds, and their colleagues followed suit.

The "modesty strikes" among seamen of incoming vessels began several weeks ago when the crew of the French liner Paris remained aboard ship throughout the vessel's stay in port rather than disrobe for examination by American officials.

COOLIDGE GIVES APPROVAL TO FESS FARM RELIEF BILL

President Urges Legislation For Co-operative Farmers' Marketing Associations—Would Assist Such Organizations Through Loans From a $100,000,000 Appropriation—Declares That Legislation to Bring These Results is of Great Importance to the Country.

WASHINGTON, June 25.— (AP) — President Coolidge in a formal statement today urged legislation for co-operative farmers' marketing associations and gave his approval to the bill of Senator Fess, republican, Ohio, for assisting such organizations through loans from a $100,000,000 appropriation.

The Fess bill now pending the senate, follows the lines of the Tincher bill, laid aside some time ago in the house.

The president's statement said:

"One of the perplexing questions before the congress is to determine what will be most helpful in relieving agricultural distress. The congress has already rejected certain definite proposals. But that does not relieve us of the desirability of attempting to secure constructive legislation.

"Since the war the congress and the administration have devoted painstaking effort to strengthening the agriculture situation. During the past war slump a great disparity arose between prices of agriculture commodities and those of industrial commodities which the farmer must buy. This is still true in certain sections and certain commodities. Much legislation has been enacted and much administration action has been taken which has already resulted in improving the farm purchasing power.

"But all these actions, helpful though they have been, are not sufficient to cover all branches of the industry. The farmer has suffered greatly and no doubt disproportionately from the effects of deflation. He is entitled to relief if it can possibly be given on a sound basis by the government. I know the committees of agriculture and the congress and the president have all given the most careful thought and spent much time in seeking remedies to afford relief. I want the best method adopted which promises relief along these lines. Certainly no one can charge that the problem has been neglected.

"Constructive action has been repeatedly proposed from various sections of the agriculture communities. These proposals provide for the creation of a farm marketing board whose duty is to secure a better adjustment of agriculture production; the larger development and consolidation of farmers' marketing associations under their own control; and embrace the placing of one hundred millions of dollars of public money for working capital at the disposal of such farmers' controlled marketing associations, through such farm board, for the purpose of better stabilizing their markets, improving their marketing machinery and the eliminating of waste in distribution. This form of legislation would support the whole of the agricultural industry—in the north, the south, the east and the west—both large and small—not any particular section or segment.

"I am in favor of this type of legislation and I am convinced that immediate action along such lines will profoundly assist the farmers. I believe that the farmers should be provided with these advantages. It seems to me that such a proposal is embodied in the bill, S. 4462, offered by Senator Fess on June 16, and which he has proposed to offer as an amendment to the pending co-operative bill which has passed the house and is now before the senate.

"I have advised the congress from time to time of the necessity of further assistance in order that the farmers' position may be finally and fully restored upon a permanent and sound basis, and I sincerely believe that legislation making possible this important and effective further step in better organization in marketing in the control of the farmers themselves will bring these results which we all desire. Such legislation is of great importance to the country."

SENATE IN QUANDARY OVER FARM RELIEF BILL

WASHINGTON, June 25—(AP)—The senate was thrown into a quandary today over what to do about farm relief after President Coolidge had formally endorsed the Tincher credit bill and supporters of the defeated McNary measure moved to lay side all agricultural legislation and proceed to other business.

At the same time the democrats began an agitation for a reduction in tariff rates, which they charged were responsible for the farmers' condition.

The outcome of this triangular controversy was problematical when the senate recessed tonight with the leaders of the three factions determined to press their issues.

The situation offers a threat even to the house cooperative marketing bill, to which there had been scant opposition. After conferences today the western proponents of the rejected McNary equalization fee measure lined up in opposition to the cooperative marketing proposal which has Secretary Jardine's endorsement, on the ground that it was a "make-shift plan" and would be charged to the account of farm legislation.

Developments came thick and fast during the day. They started with a breakfast conference at the white house with senate leaders who urged President Coolidge to declare publicly for the Tincher plan which has been offered in the senate by Senator Fess, republican, Ohio.

Later the president called in Secretaries Jardine and Hoover for advice and sent his secretary, Everett Sanders, twice to the capitol to confer with administration leaders in the senate.

Soon after the president began his conferences, the various senate factions started caucuses in ante-rooms that continued throughout the day.

The result was that almost simultaneously with the issuance by the president of a formal statement urging passage of the Tincher bill, Senator Watson, republican, Indiana, offered a motion to lay aside all farm legislation and Senator Robinson, of Arkansas, the democratic leader, pressed his proposal to have the tariff reduced.

This was a signal for an outburst of oratory, Senator McNary, republican, Oregon, supported the Watson motion; Senator Reed democrat, Missouri, spoke in support of Robinson's tariff proposal and Senator Fess argued for his plan. A vote on the Watson motion finally was blocked when Senator Willis, republican, Ohio, got the floor and held it until 5:30 o'clock when the senate recessed under a previous agreement.

EXCAVATION FAILED IN EVIDENCE OF CRIME

SARATOGA SPRINGS, N. Y., June 25.—(AP)—Excavation on Fred Lapoint's mountain farm today failed to disclose evidence to substantiate a story told by Mrs. Julia Orton that Lapoint had slain her husband with an axe and burned the body seven years ago. Digging will continue tomorrow. Lapoint is held on an open charge in the Saratoga county jail.

Mrs. Orton, a woman of 52 living at Schaghticoke, told the police that she and her husband, Adrian Orton, separated in 1899 and that until two years ago she had lived with Lapoint and was the mother of his six children.

After an absence of 20 years, Mrs Orton explained, her husband returned to the lonely farm in the northwestern part of Saratoga county and quarrelled with Lapoint. The quarrel ended in Orton's death, she said, after the murder. Mrs. Orton said Lapoint carried the body on a wheelbarrow about 600 yards from the farmhouse and there buried it. Then, she said, she and Lapoint went back to the house where they continued to live until two years ago.

SENATE INVESTIGATION OF PENNSYLVANIA PRIMARY

WASHINGTON, June 25 (AP)—Odds and ends or financing in Pennsylvania's three million dollar primary campaign were gathered up today by the senate campaign funds committee in the first session devoid of the spectacular since the inquiry began more than two weeks ago.

One bit of information which appeared to interest the investigators was that William B. Wilson, secretary of labor under President Wilson, had been offered a place on the newly created railroad mediation board after he had been nominated without opposition as the democratic senatorial candidate in the keystone state.

Explaining the entire matter was confidential, Mr. Wilson told the committee he could not divulge from whom the offer had come and would not have accepted it had he not been under oath and had the direct question not been asked.

"Well it was the best offer that I have heard of recently from that source," observed Senator Reed of Missouri, the chairman, referring to President Coolidge who made the appointments to the board.

Mr. Wilson, called because he was a candidate, testified his personal expenditures had been $88.81 and that the campaign committee for the coalition ticket he formed with William E. Porter, one of the defeated candidates for the gubernatorial nomination had spent approximately $10,000 of that sum something like $4,000 was raised in cash he added and Vance McCormick of Harrisburg, former chairman of the democratic national committee, had guaranteed the remainder.

MAY DISCONTINUE THE SOUTH COVENTRY TROLLEY

(Special to the Bulletin)

WILLIMANTIC, June 25.—Another trolley line, that conducted by the Connecticut company between Willimantic and South Coventry is soon expected to give way to the increased use of the automobile and motor bus. While investigating the possibilities of tearing up the tracks, officials of the eastern Connecticut branch of the trolley company have been in this city of late and found the patronage very poor. Samuel G. Anderson, division manager, said that the officials were not at all pleased with conditions. The line ran up a deficit for some time and then the schedule and operating force were curtailed. This measure brought about subsequent announcements that the line was paying its own way but it has not been a money making endeavor for some time.

Rumors of proposed steps by the company to discontinue the service and remove the tracks have been current in the city for some time and the street committees of the past few aldermanic administrations of the city have always held this project in consideration when planning for permanent street improvements on West Main street. It is expected that a motor bus service will replace the trolley. No definite plans have been announced however. Manager Anderson's statement was to the effect that the branch line was undergoing a period of "adjustment."

Confronted with the apparent plans of the company in removing the line, Mayor John C. Tracy assumed a "watchful waiting" attitude Friday afternoon. A resolution adopted by the common council will bring before the voters at the next special city meeting the request for $30000 to make permanent improvements on several of the city streets including West Main street over which the tracks run. Should the appropriation be voted the plan in view is to have the trolley tracks torn up before the street is paved so that the work will be uniform and perpetual in construction. The South Coventry branch line is about eight miles in length.

FINED FOR FAILURE TO SIGNAL WHEN STOPPING

WILLIMANTIC, June 25.—A double rear end collision resulting in little damage, but a determined disagreement as to who was to blame, was aired in police court Friday morning and Leo Turcotte of 48 Ives street, this city, driver of car No. 1 was found guilty of reckless driving. Deputy Judge Russell A. Andrews imposed the minimum fine of $25 and costs, remitting $13 of the fine. Turcotte paid $16.95. The accident took place on Union street Thursday evening. Turcotte driving a Jordan touring car brought his car to a sudden stop and according to complaining testimony failed to give any signal of this intention. Directly in the rear was a Ford car operated by Fioscentino Zanlundo of 48 School street, South Manchester. Zanlundo was forced to stop his machine very suddenly. The third car in the string, an Oldsmobile coach, owned by H. A. Gillette and operated by Ernest LaFleur of Jackson street, this city, bumped into the rear of the Ford, pushing it into the rear of the Jordan. The damage was made up of a bent fender and broken spare-tire carrier. Traffic Officer Peter Marcotte and Patrolman Albert Montie put a stop to arguments and notified all three to appear in court. The two pleaded not guilty. Henry Flynn, riding with LaFleur, Fred Duprey, a bystander and Jerry Delino, of South Manchester and owner of the Ford driven by Zanlundo, all testified that Turcotte did not give any warning when he stopped. After hearing the evidence Assistant Prosecuting Attorney Frank P. Fenton asked for a nolleiment of the cases of Zanlundo and LaFleur. This was done and Turcotte was then found guilty.

Leaving a trail of raided places from New London to Andover, Eastern Connecticut Federal Prohibition Enforcement Chief Stanton L. Briggs with a squad of officers concluded a busy week Thursday with a visit to the Wayside restaurant and filling station conducted by Mrs. Laura Fuchs in Andover. While searching a lush patch near the house Chief Briggs with Officers Harry Avery of South Windham, Keene of Norwalk and Manion of Danbury, came upon a two-gallon jug of alcohol, a bottle of whiskey coloring liquid and several empty bottles. Mrs. Fuchs was notified to present herself before U. S. Commissioner Earl Mathewson at Norwich Monday to answer to a charge of violation of the prohibition law.

Previous to the raid at the Fuchs place the officers had been working in Norwich. They entered the restaurant conducted by Mike Bizwisky at 434 North aMin street Norwich and saw the man trying to make off with a bottle in his hand. He was balked and standing at bay began to fortify the officers. The outcome was quick and final. Bizwisky was struck on the nose during the mixup. The bottle was seized and found to contain a half-pint of liquor. In the restaurant kitchen a five gallon can of alcohol was found and the owner notified to appear before Commissioner Mathewson this Saturday.

In New London earlier in the afternoon the officers raided at 16 John street, but failed to find contraband liquor. A second raid, however, at the home of Victor Fredericks, 33 Wellback street, New London disclosed a room outfitted into a fully equipped barroom in which were found 83 cases of home-brew beer, 11 bottles of wine, one five-gallon can of alcohol, one bottle of flavoring extract, five gallons of malt syrup, four capping machines and about 1000 empty whiskey and beer bottles. Fredericks will also appear before U. S. Commissioner Mathewson this Saturday. Included in the raiding squad were officers Doolan of Bridgeport, Fitzpatrick of New London and Kiernan of Hartford.

A case scheduled for hearing at the session of police court Friday morning was cancelled when the drivers of automobiles which collided agreed to arrange for the settlement of damages. The drivers were Abraham Heller, operating a car owned by his mother, Mrs. Sarah Heller of Main street, this city, and Alfred Doubleday, driving a Ford car owned by his father, R. Doubleday of Windham. The machines came together on a curve some two hundred yards east of the crossing of the New Haven railroad at South Windham on the road to Windham Center about 11 o'clock Thursday night. The Ford was considerably damaged, the two front wheels crumbling under the impact, but the occupants of both machines escaped injury. In Heller's car was a party of young people enjoying a little ride following the high school graduation exercises. Constable Arthur F. Abbe investigated the accident and held Heller responsible on the assertion that he was on the wrong side of the road. Heller claimed that the facts on the Ford hood of him, and secured counsel to fight the case but arranged for a settlement before entering court in the morning.

KILLINGLY HIGH ALUMNI DANCE BRILLIANT AFFAIR

(Special to the Bulletin)

DANIELSON, June 25—In a particularly picturesque setting and with a silver moon vieing with a blaze of electric lights and unusually pretty decorations for special attention, the Killingly High School Alumni association reception and dance in honor of the class of 1926, graduated Thursday evening, was held Friday evening at the enclosed dance pavilion at Wildwood park. Never before had this annual social event been held under more delightful conditions.

The stuffiness of the halls and the armory where this commencement week feature has been held in the past was absent at the side of beautiful Alexander's lake. The great throng that came appeared to enjoy in special measure all the events of the evening and to delight in the surrounds, bathed in the light of a moon nearing fullness.

Motor coaches of the Connecticut company furnished service to the lake from Danielson for those who did not make their way there in private cars and the number of the latter was legion.

Pink blue and yellow rosettes of crepe paper and myriad Japanese lanterns figured in the decoration of the pavilion and palms and potted flowers, the latter largely in the class colors of garnet and gold were used to abundance. A novelty was a huge dance order fashioned in the style of the class pin of 1925 suspended from the lattice work of the pavilion.

Miss Marjorie I. Griffin and Arthur Hughes, respectively vice-president and correspondent of the Alumni association, Principal Ernest H. Warren and Mrs. Warren were at the head of the reception line when the graduates were greeting congratulations.

Benton Twomey Co., jazz purveyors to the class of 1926 and Miss Mildred Hughes, vice-president of the Alumni association, Principal Ernest H. Warren and Mrs. Warren were at the head of the reception line when the graduates were greeting congratulations.

THE FARM BILL

It took the senate a long time to give expression to its views in regard to the farm bill but it has done so and it is believed that the action was the one consistent with the views of the bill.

The measure was not defeated as a whole but some of the provisions are indicated but it represented the majority as recognizing the serious conditions of the soil and endeavoring to suggest them though needs to do was not be done in a sound manner to give assistance to agriculture.

It was a desperate effort to make some comparison of the cost when provisions were included in the bill concerning cotton. That was done to embarrass the southern senators and to force them to give the assistance rather than be made to stand in the position of opposing and of the cotton planters. The ruse was well see but it didn't work.

There was opposition to the bill from the east and the south but there was also opposition from the west and certainly Senators Walsh, Reed, Borah, Pepe, Lenroot and Wadsworth were not standing out in opposition for political purposes. The decision was made with party lines disregarded. It was a case of displaying judgment after a careful study of the bill's efforts to the contrary notwithstanding.

It has taken the senate a long time to get down to brass tacks in regard to this matter, but contrary to efforts it is not to be regarded as a slap at agriculture. There is a problem to deal with which needs to be met in a sound manner and that was not provided for in the McNary-Haugen bill. There is no objection to giving agriculture such help as it needs within the bounds of reason but the idea of handing out a subsidy is as much repugnant as ever.

The plan or putting the objectionable bill up to the president to be vetoed has come in naught. Something of a different character may be enacted but it is not impossible that the measure itself may be used as a means of handing out a subsidy to agriculture.

AIDING AND ABETTING CRIME

According to a Boston news item, petitions are being circulated to be presented to the governor of that state asking for the commutation of sentence in the case of three men who have been give a fair trial found guilty and sentenced to death. They were convicted of killing a watchman who had dared to interrupt their part of roosters. They were prepared for such an encounter. The wife read to cause death if necessary to accomplish their purpose and she did. They not only shot the old man but they brutally beat him, and now because they have received the penalty attached to such crimes there are some who think there ought to be clemency. Perhaps the petitioners think the watchman ought to have been killed and that the public ought to be subjected to the attacks of just such murderers whenever they feel like going on a rampage.

Boston and vicinity has been experiencing a series of similar cases where the efforts to get by robbery the property of others has resulted in death, some have been punished for it. Others have not. Some have seen the desirability of setting the sob sisters to work for such convicted persons but not much has been done in behalf of the families of those who have been killed.

The stiffening of sentences imposed upon convicted lawbreakers about Boston has probably had its good effect but it has not put a stop to the unjustified use of firearms. The news of the day containing reference to the shooting of persons in the street and to the employment of revolvers in the holding up of places of business. Those responsible for such situations have no claim for favoritism and leniency. Their acts are deliberate. They have prepared for them. They have undertaken robbery with the idea that anyone who attempted to interfere with them would be shot. There were no preliminary arrangements for kind treatment for those who because of duty stood in their way. It was a case of submit or die.

The ability of the criminal to escape his just deserts and his ability to arouse so much sympathy from among those who might be his next victims has its encouraging influence on the present day crime, whereas just the opposite result is what is needed.

PENNSYLVANIA OBJECTS

In the effort which is being made by the fuel commission, named by the New England governors, before the interstate commerce commission for a low all rail coal transportation rate from West Virginia, opposition is being offered from the coal producers of Pennsylvania. The producers of that state are claiming that they would be deprived of the advantage which exists in their case today, the new rates would mean the opening up of the West Virginia field to New England for domestic and industrial purposes and that Pennsylvania would suffer. They believe that New England is endeavoring to do something that would aid its industries.

Without a doubt the governors' commission is looking to the welfare of New England. It is no more than right that its industries should get all they are entitled to and that its coal consumers should have a chance to buy elsewhere than in the state of Pennsylvania.

It is known of course that Pennsylvania has a monopoly on the anthracite coal, that that state is working that monopoly for all it is worth, that it is not only telling the consumer whether it can have coal or not and what price he must pay for it but there is also a tax imposed upon the product which the consumer is also obliged to shoulder.

Is there any wonder under such conditions that there is a desire to get a chance through new rates which would open up additional fuel sources in New England? Of course it would be too bad to do anything to upset the grip which the coal monopoly of Pennsylvania has upon the coal consumers of New England. We have stood it so long that Pennsylvania seems to think that we have no right to object and even if we do object it gets us of that no attention ought to be paid to it to the extent of granting relief. Perhaps Pennsylvania will remain secure in its favored position but New England isn't standing for it willingly and it is certainly justified in looking out for itself.

DANGEROUS PUBLIC CONVEYANCES

Strong efforts have been made to obtain transportation privileges for the Lieut. W. Sprigg over night in competition with transportation companies of long and well known financial standing. Likewise the irresponsible and fly by night concerns have been doing their best to put electric and steam lines out of business.

What the public faces in too many instances is revealed by the investigation made by the Rhode Island bureau of public roads concerning a bus which had been given the name Mackinac after the ill fated steamer on which so many lives were lost. Only the name of the bus brought about the disclosure that the brakes on the car would not hold it at all, that there were no inside lights, no tail lights and only one headlight, and that the operator of the car had recently been held in Massachusetts following an accident for operating a bus without filing a bond. And yet this bus was being used for the transportation of passengers between Boston and Providence.

The fact that such buses are allowed to operate at all, and to use such equipment indicates the chances that the public is unknowingly taking through patronizing them. And in using them they are probably turning away from other methods of transportation where all measures are not only taken but are forced upon such carriers.

There are enough dangers on the highways today without the existence or toleration of any such menace to motor traffic and passengers and the Rhode Island authorities acted most promptly in relieving the situation. The surprise is that such a bus should be allowed on the highways a single day.

MUSCLE SHOALS

From all indications Muscle Shoals will continue to remain on the list of unfinished business when congress adjourns. That is where it has been for years and there is nothing that promises any change at the present time.

Even though a commission was appointed to determine upon a lease of the project, and that commission has made its recommendations, nothing has been done about it. The situation is quite the same as if nothing had been done. There is the costly plant standing idle and congress showing no interest in putting it to use.

It makes a difference or opinion as to what should be done with it is fully recognized. But that has existed as long as the plant and from all indications no headway is being made in getting a decision. There are enough in the opposition to prevent the matter from coming to a vote and the result is that time, money and effort are going to waste.

While it may never be advisable to rush into a hurried disposition of such a big and important matter, it can hardly be said that haste has in any way characterized the matter, thus far with four congresses having deliberated upon it and failing to get anywhere.

Opposition is bound to be encountered relative to the terms of the lease, the recompense to the government and the use that is made of the plant. They are inevitable even under the most favorable conditions, but by the time congress does get down to the business of deciding what it wants to do it will be time to rebuild the plant because of deterioration and no one will be interested in taking it on a lease. It is time that something constructive was done about utilizing the investment that exists there.

EDITORIAL NOTES

It was a red morning but a blue afternoon at Gales Ferry.

It was necessary for Yale to redeem itself on the water for what it lost on the diamond.

The man on the corner says: Yale had to win or a lot of blue flags would have been useless.

Chile hasn't warmed up to any Tacna-Arica adjustment that would not give it the whole say in the matter.

Perhaps an individual values his life more than anything else but it doesn't always seem so at railroad crossings.

Just because we have been having October weather thousands didn't forget that Friday was the day of the big race on the Thames.

THE MAN WHO TALKS

After a long period of drought, when garden vegetables—such as have had courage to come up—look as if attacked with jaundice, how refreshing it is to have a soaking rain. When foliage of all descriptions begins to have the edges curl up, how refreshing to have the shower! When the copperas of the United States seems to be parched—on its lawn and in its senate—by congressmen working over time to secure their re-election, and after it is secured being probed by committees as to how they got back, how refreshing to have some turn in direction of constructive legislation! When holy men of God from the leading denominations have been pulling hair over the abstruse questions of dogmatic theology concerning questions mostly beyond human ken, how refreshing to have no mans baccalaureate sermons preached telling the young graduates about such strange things as living in right relations with God and man!

One had supposed that Mother's day was an observance hardly open to criticism, yet a distinguished mother writes to a religious paper stating some objections that are really worth considering. Among other pertinent things she says: "I do not need a day set apart on which to remember my own mother, and it is distressing to sit in the pew with my six children and be preached at and about every year. Last year I stayed home from church and should have done so this year had it not been for a guest who would also have been kept away from church service." The average mother realizes the honor and glory of motherhood and why should she be praised for being what duty tells her she ought to be. It is the rewarding a boy for being honest, when it is dishonorable to be dishonest. Just how far are we justified for praising people for being what they ought to be?

Sir John Lubbock in one of his addresses to English working men has this to say about religion: "Religion should be a strength, guide, and comfort, not a source of intellectual anxiety, or angry argument. To persecute for religion's sake implies belief in a jealous, cruel, and unjust Deity. If we have done our best to arrive at the truth, to torment ourselves over the result is to doubt the goodness of God and in the words of Bacon, 'to bring down the Holy Ghost instead of the likeness of a dove, in the shape of a raven. 'The letter killeth, but the spirit giveth life,' and it is a primary duty to form the highest possible conception of God." The above is sound reasoning and why should we on entering active life render ourselves miserable over theological doubts and difficulties? Why can't we return to the simplicity of the Master and let dogma take care of itself?

One indication of the intellectual strength of any people is seen in their differences of opinions. Those races whose people all look alike, dress alike, think alike and act alike are always of inferior grade. And conversely the higher we rise in civilization the wider will be the general differences. Years ago Sir John Lubbock—whom I have just quoted—because of his extensive reading, was interested in the question of the greatest books ever produced. It aroused a storm of controversy—and in some instances it is not dead yet. Among those suggested was the Analects of Confucius. The majority of the Nordic race had never heard of this book but Lubbock regarded it a work that for centuries had influenced 400,000,000 people must contain elements of greatness. Probably no two men in England, Germany, France or America would agree upon a list.

There is no justification whatever in glaring small and inconspicuous capitals in the above to send a message that may be misconstrued. Just how far are we justified for breaking promise to, being what they ought to be?

It is a wise provision that makes it possible for the state to grant a divorce after a separation of two years, but it is a mistake to make it possible for the state to grant a divorce after a separation of one year. Nine times out of ten the separation is the result of a quarrel and the parties are not in a position to judge whether they are acting wisely or not. Nowhere are more speedy processes of divorce sought. Manufacturing enterprises are on record that have lasted long. Several generations are necessary to make a great college or university. Money alone is unable to do it. Men are coming into public notice over a lot of undercurrents have been at work for months. No one can predict what a future may result from small beginnings. Along this line I wish to speak a good word for the cradle roll that now forms a part of every well-regulated Sunday school. To keep track of all the little ones born within parish limits is of the utmost importance. The babies on that roll today will be in the primary department tomorrow. It arouses interest in both parent and child.

In order to raise vegetables and plants satisfactorially great attention must be paid to the soil. All soils must be enriched, but the degree of the enrichment depends on what you propose to raise. Beans do not require the strength of soil that lettuce does. One ought to know the particular requirements of the things he cares to insure the highest success. It was once thought that one who had failed in many pursuits could fall back on farming and get a living. But we know now that nothing requires a wider range of specification than farming. This idea comes to me whenever I attend a school graduation. What sort of mental fertilization have they received from their studies? Has it been of the kind to fit into their individuality? Never was educational advantages so wonderful as today. We no longer put all pupils into the same hopper and turn out the same grist.

While everything consistent with honor should be done to banish war, yet some wars and some battles ought never to be forgotten. England would not be justified in forgetting Waterloo, nor America Valley Forge. It is well that the young of this country should be taught with what sacrifices the liberties which they enjoy have been bought. Nothing makes a deeper impression on the young mind than some pageant depicting some struggle of the past. Recently at Valley Forge have been made to live again what Washington and his brave soldiers went through in that awful winter 145 years ago. This historical pageant is a fitting part of the sesquicentennial now going on in Philadelphia. A the children see the noble commander pleading with his ragged, half-starved troops to hold on a little longer they will feel what liberty means.

The recent Eucharistic parade in New York made a profound impression upon the city; had it not it would have been a dismal failure, for the simple reason that all parades are for the purpose of stirring up emotions. It must have been a glorious sight to have seen the princes of the church in their splendid attire. We like to see the princes of the army ride along in their glittering regimentals. Why not the princes of the church just as well, for the church has princes as well as the state? It was spectacular, of course, but was it justified? It certainly was if the idea in mind was to magnify the King of Kings and the Prince of Peace. It was costly but some things justify cost. I have no patience with that type of mind that rants against fine churches because they cost. It is the spirit of him who scolded the grateful woman who poured costly ointment on the aching feet of her Master. Some people would project Judas Iscariot into this 20th century.

THE TACNA-ARICA SITUATION AS VIEWED BY FORMER MINISTER TO BOLIVIA

In a letter to the public press Horace G. Knowles of New York, former American minister to Bolivia, gives his views of the Tacna-Arica situation as follows:

To those who are familiar with the now famous Tacna-Arica dispute and know the underlying conditions that led to it, and have some acquaintance with the crafty methods of South American politicians, are not at all surprised by the news from Santiago, Chile has decided to dynamite the plan she was supposed to have favored and the scheme she and Peru made to submit to arbitration that age-long dispute, and asked the good offices of President Coolidge as the arbitrator.

Those who have watched the different phases of this question, know that Chile, when she entered into such an agreement with President Coolidge and our state department, considered that there was only one side to the question, and that she had everything to gain and nothing to lose. To her it was as in a game in which she would be playing with her own dice, and which she had carefully loaded. Now at the real opening of the game, and when the arbitrator pushes Chile's loaded dice back to her and rolls out upon the table dice that are fair and honest, as well as square, Chile jumps up, grabs her hat and says she will not proceed with the game.

It can be assumed that President Coolidge and our state department would not have even discussed the Tacna-Arica trouble with the two disputants had they not believed and felt sure that the proposed arbitration would result in an early and long-sought termination of it. There is a reason to believe that when Chile and Peru first proposed the arbitration plan to Washington, they were not acting in good faith, and that they had a secret understanding that the question was not to be arbitrated at all, but it was intended, at a certain stage of the pretended arbitration to hand to the arbitrator a cut and dried award which was to give to Peru Tacna and Arica to Chile and to ask President Coolidge to sign on the dotted line. Exposure of that scheme and mockery of arbitration was made in Buenos Aires very soon after those two countries had submitted the dispute to President Coolidge, and the exposure, published in the newspapers of both Chile and Peru, caused an instantaneous uprisine or the people in both countries, and who made their protest to their respective governments so vilent that the presidents and cabinet members of both countries were compelled, in order to save themselves from personal violence, to declare and some of them to swear that there was no truth in the alleged conspiracy to settle that question in any such way. The nationals of each country demanded an assurance that their government, under no circumstances, would consent to a settlement of that affair that would award any part of that territory to the other nation.

It was then that the arbitrator took up the question of the plebiscite which at the beginning was not contemplated, it was the scheme of the political leaders of those two countries was to avoid holding the plebiscite and to fasten the blame of the said award upon the president of the United States and that then the two ones asleep for the arbitration would join the mobs in their respective countries in its howl of protest and denunciation of the award when it would be made.

This background is absolutely necessary in order to have a clear understanding of the situation as it has now left it. It may be well for you to also know that for 40 years or more 90 per cent of Chile's nationaol income has been derived from the nitrate beds in the territory she wrongfully took from Bolivia. The point of exhaustion of those golden beds is now in sight and the Chileans are at their wit's end to know to what resource she can turn when that fateful point will be reached. She has nothing else that would support such a burden. For the last several years she has had her envious and rapacious eyes on the rich and exhaustless tin deposits of Bolivia, the world's future tin reserve, which are in the southeastern part of Bolivia and adjacent to that part of Bolivia which Chile forcefully took from her 46 years ago. Chile knows the great national aspiration of Bolivia is to get an "outlet to the sea"—a port on the Pacific—and she indulges the foolish hope that sooner or later she may be able to starve Bolivia into trading a part of that valuable tin-bearing territory for Tacna and Arica, which front on the Pacific, and which has always been and will continue to be only an expense and trouble to her. Very properly Chile prefers to try to get some of Bolivia's tin deposits in that way before undertaking to provoke her to war, and repeating the shameful operation of 1879.

That is why Chile intends to hold out against any arrangement whereby Bolivia will be enabled to reach the sea. It is a most discreditable attitude for her to take and I hope the cleverness of our diplomacy and public opinion of our country will induce or compel her to recede from it.

It appears that Peru, influenced largely by the expressed wishes of Washington to bring about a speedy and lasting settlement of the Tacna-Arica affair, is disposed to recognize the righteous claim of Bolivia to an "outlet to the sea," and is willing to accede to an adjustment of that question on that basis. She has indicated that she would agree either to give Bolivia a corridor to the sea through those two provinces, and which corridor would include the present Arica-La Paz railroad and probably enough more of the province of Tacna to include the city of Tacna, provided, of course, that Chile would be equally generous by giving to Bolivia as much of the province of Arica, including the city and port of Arica. Peru deserves great commendation for taking this position and evidencing her disposition to co-operate with our government in effecting such a settlement.

It is to be regretted that Chile, thinking she occupies an advantageous position, now seeks not only to hold up the only settlement of that dispute that seems possible but to greatly embarrass Washington and to cause our state department and President Coolidge to regret that they permitted themselves to be drawn into this unfortunate and disagreeable affair. The present attitude of Chile will certainly serve her no good purpose and will not soon be forgotten by those who have been both grieved and hoping for a righteous and lasting settlement of the Tacna-Arica trouble. Any disagreeable developments in the affair from now on earnestly ought to be placed at the door of Chile.

In a study of and report on the Tacna-Arica question that I made for the department of state years ago I said there can be no settlement of it without calling in the good offices of Bolivia. Without her there can be no settlement of that question without the aid and partie paton of that country. Secretary Kellogg saw that some time ago. Peru now realizes it. It is only Chile that misunderstands matters.

More than a year ago in a public address broadcasted by me from one of the leading radio stations I predicted the failure of Washington's protracted and vain attempt to settle the Tacna-Arica question, and said it was a time would surely come when our government and people would regret that we had become involved in that sore affair.

IN THE PUBLIC EYE

Frederick Wardo, who has been honored by the University of California (Southern) with the degree of Doctor of Literature, is today one of the world's greatest Shakespearian scholars, as he was for years one of the most accomplished actors in the plays of Shakespeare. Mr. Wardo is a native of England and it was there that he began his stage career, but for more than half a century America has been the scene of his professional labors. It was in 1874 that he crossed the Atlantic to become leading man of Booth's theater in New York. His association with Edwin Booth lasted many years and he was numbered among the most intimate personal friends of the great tragedian. At various times he supported Charlotte Cushman, John McCullough and other of the most eminent players of their day. At a later period he was associated for many seasons with Louis James. Since his retirement from the stage Mr. Warde has added to his fame as a Shakespearian lecturer.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

German Shepherd Dogs

Mr. Editor: I wish to challenge the sporting spirit and love of fair play of our local dog fanciers, most especially the loca, German shepherd dog men. Of late we find a great deal of discussion among the shepherd men as to the superiority of one dog over another. Most of them claim the laurels for their own pet. Many of them are overflowing with criticisms, usually unfavorable, of the other man's dog.

We may, or may not have many good shepherds in Norwich but surely there can not all be best. The shepherd we first met and always a welcome one, loyal and gallant, play a very important part in the many qualities that go to make up the working type of shepherd.

I do not claim to have the best dogs local or anywhere else. I do not claim that my dogs will win any first prizes at our New London dog show. But we all love good keen competition and a hard fair fight. So with this spirit I wish to challenge any Norwich owner of a German shepherd to show his or her dog at the New London dog show July 10, and pace ahead of my dogs in any class. Thus we can soon decide to the satisfaction of an enthusiastic public, the best German shepherd in Norwich.

This Saturday is the last day entries can be made. To make my challenge easily acceptable I have entry blanks for all who will take the trouble to phone 1604-2.

In the spirit of sport, the best dog win.

Sincerely,
STERRILL H. CHASE

Sunday Morning Talk

A Book Worth Reading.

John Bunyan wrote "Pilgrim's Progress" with no knowledge of English other than that gleaned from God's Word, and his book is studied by students of English in our schools and calls from each of the heartfelt acknowledgement of its beauty of expression and purity of diction.

Read your Bibles. John Stoughton says: "There is no other book which associates itself in the same way and to the same extent with the joys and sorrows of human life; with births, marriages and burials; with our journeys, our country walks, our conversations around the family hearth, our silence by the sick bedside—no other which, like this, would bear to be read over the coffin of the dead at the mouth of the sepulchre. Why is it that people in their troubles cleave to what is written here as they do to nothing else in this wide world?"

General Grant who wielded the sword of the nation during the closing year of that great struggle, said to the Sabbath school children in 1876: "Hold fast to the Bible as the sheet anchor of your liberties. Write its precepts in your hearts and practice them in your lives. To the influence of this book we are indebted for all progress made in true civilization, and to this we may look as our guide in the future."

The educational power of the Bible is beyond expression. Its simple Saxson style its teaching narratives, its vivid description, its personal delineation its marvel wonders will captivate minds of all both young and old and its every line and lesson serves as redemption by Christ or God's presence of the Glory of His word of death, judgment and eternity. Since it is the greatest educational force known among men.

From Small Beginnings

William Laidlaw, Sir Walter Scott's Secretary

It was love that lifted William Laidlaw, a poor Scotch farmer, a failure in his chosen work into lasting fame.

"But Willie Laidlaw! O man, how often have I thought of you!" said Sir Walter Scott. In one of the moments just before the great novelist died. "Willie" Laidlaw, Scott's chosen friend was then 52 years old. Night and day he waited upon Sir Walter Scott and stood by when Sir Walter lay dying. Love, loyalty and devotion in his eyes had watched Sir Walter yield before the huge volume of work that Sir Walter had determined to accomplish in order to pay off his debts brought on him through no fault of his own. As Lockhart says of Laidlaw: "He could not write to Scott's dictation without gradually, slowly, most reluctantly, taking home to his bosom the conviction that the mighty mind which he had worshiped through more than 30 years of intimacy had lost something more of its energy."

When Scott was 23 years old he went on many excursions to obtain literary materials. On one of these he took refuge in a farmhouse where there was a young farmer William Laidlaw 20 years old. He had been born in the house in which Scott found him and there too his father had lived for many years, engaged, like his neighbors, in keeping sheep. The boy had gone for a time to school and then had become a shepherd. Born of Good Scotch stock, young William Laidlaw kept up his reading. Essentially did he love the old Scotch music, the old Scotch songs and the legends that passed about among the simple country people. He continued to read and to study. Scott found the young man a fascinating personality, delighted to talk with him, and began a correspondence that became so intimate that he was soon addressing the shepherd boy as "dear Willie." Scott was collecting old Scotch songs and stories and he obtained many from the shepherd.

On his side William Laidlaw aspired to write poetry, and Scott gave him praise and advice. As the years went on the friendship deepened, and when Laidlaw failed utterly as a farmer, Scott then become rich and famous, made him a sort of headkeeper or manager for his great estate at Abbotsford. Meanwhile his love for Scott increased and their friendship deepened. To him the great novelist dictated most of Ivanhoe and The Bride of Lammermoor, as well as much other work.

In all literature there is no more beautiful picture than that of the worshiping Laidlaw listening to the dictation of Sir Walter Scott.

The Price of Curiosity

In curiosity's a spice
That sometimes makes it worth the price.

—Jerry Muskrat.

This is true sometimes, and sometimes it isn't true. It all depends on the price paid. It is possible to pay too high a price merely to satisfy curiosity, as one of Jerry Muskrat's children found out.

Of course, these growing children were very curious about everything they saw. They wanted to know about everything. They wanted to know why this was so, and why that was some other way. So one of Mother Muskrat's most important duties was to see that this curiosity did not get them into trouble. As she explained to them, it was all right to be curious about harmless things, but it was all wrong to be curious about things in which danger might lurk. So day by day the little Muskrats learned what it was safe to do and what it was unsafe to do, and all the time they were growing.

Once he had asked Mother Muskrat if Longlegs was asleep

Now Mother Muskrat had taught them that always they were to keep an eye out for danger from the air. There were members of the Hawk family to watch out for and members of the Owl family to watch out for. These were the feathered enemies that would enjoy a dinner of baby Muskrat.

"They are the only ones who are likely to come hunting for you," replied Mother Muskrat. "Of course, you must always look out for Longlegs the Heron. While he isn't likely to come hunting you, he might be tempted to use that big spear-like bill of his on one or you, if you came within reach. I know he has a fondness for Meadow Mice, and I fancy a little Muskrat might tempt him. You are so big now that this isn't as likely as it was a little while ago, I advise you, however, not to take any chances."

Now one of the little Muskrats had wondered a great deal about Longlegs the Heron. He had seen Longlegs at a distance and had wondered how this great bird could keep so still for so long a time. Once he had asked Mother Muskrat if Longlegs was asleep.

"No," replied Mother Muskrat, "he is fishing."

The little Muskrat said nothing, but he puzzled over it a great deal. He had seen Rattler the Kingfisher plunge into the water and come up with a little fish. He had seen little Joe Otter catch a fish in swimming. Fishing by keeping still was a new idea and he couldn't understand it at all. He grew more and more curious. Every time he saw Longlegs the Heron standing on the edge of the Smiling Pool he would watch, and the longer he watched the more his curiosity grew. Two or three times when Longlegs was at a distance he saw Longlegs strike out and down swiftly. But he couldn't see just what happened.

Finally, one evening, Longlegs came flying up the Laughing Brook and alighted only a short distance from where this little Muskrat was. There, as usual, he settled himself with his head drawn back on his shoulders; and there he stood, motionless. It was getting dark and the little Muskrat decided he would like to have a closer look at Longlegs. "There'll be no harm in swimming over near him," thought the little Muskrat. "I believe he is asleep, anyway."

So the little Muskrat swam over and presently floated in the water just in front of Longlegs and stared at him most impolitely. Longlegs didn't move. The little Muskrat slowly paddled nearer and nearer and nearer. Suddenly and without warning Longlegs came to life. The little Muskrat dived frantically, but something sharp hit him and tore along his side. It was the big spearlike bill of Longlegs. That little Muskrat had dived just in time to save his life and that was all. But he had paid the price of curiosity. He spurted and dived, and for many a day he would be a very, very sore muskrat.

LLANFAIR

Pursers, passport officers and printers were disconcerted the other day by the arrival of a steamship passenger on New York who gave her home address as:

"Llanfairpwllgwyngyllgogerychwyrndrobwllllandysiliogogogoch.

"There is such a place, though practical map makers irreverently label it briefly 'Llanfairpwllgwyngll,' or even merely 'Llanfair P. G.,'" says a communication to the National Geographic society by Ralph A. Graves.

However, the skeleton title is its abridged, honest-to-Cymric name, which means 'Church of St. Mary in a hollow of white hazel, near to a rapid whirlpool and to St. Tysilio Church, near to a red cave.'

Orthography may be one reason why so few of thousands of American tourists invade Wales in their itinerary though it is one of the most alluring regions of the British Isles.

"The average American traveler takes one glance at his guidebook or at the tourist-agency folder and decides to go to the English Lakes districts, to Scotland, to the 'Lorna Doone' country, or—Paris.

"He lacks the courage to wrestle with such place names as Bettwys-y-Coed Bodelwyddan, Dwygyfylchi, Clwyd, Llandudno, Pwllheli, and Penmaen-Mawr.

"If the traveler goes to a railway station to get his transportation, he cannot tell where he wishes to go if a ticket agent in a tourist office asks whether he would prefer to go by this route or by that with stop-over privileges here or there, the sounds convey to him no impression of any of the places he may have read about.

"He may have equipped himself in advance by studying some 'easy rule for pronouncing Welsh names,' such as 'To pronounce Ll, place the tip of the tongue back of the upper front teeth and blow through the side of the mouth.' Or 'ch is a strong guttural having no equivalent in English, but as a pronounced k (achi). W is oo, as in good.' But if ever he imagined he could remember such rules, he forgets their practical application the moment he hears gwh-diw-doo-l, meaning G'wlydfaw. It is so much simpler to go elsewhere!

"Consequently at tourist agencies the Welsh window never has a waiting line and few tourist agencies are able to give one advice as to where to go, how long to stay, and how to come back.

"It is a pity, for within this little principality, having an area considerably smaller than New Jersey one will find the loftiest peak and the finest mountain scenery of England and Wales; the loveliest waterfalls of the British Isles; beaches which rival those of Atlantic City, Beauville, or Brighton; streams that teem with trout and other fish dear to the heart of the angler; footpaths through vale and forest which cannot be surpassed in the Tyrol or the Pyrenees; and the gray ruins of tessellated towers and frowning bastions, each of which has its own tale to tell of romantic adventure and of daring in the dark or the middle ages, when English kings battled ceaselessly to curb turbulent Welsh princes whose chief end and aim in life was warfare."

STATIONARY ENGINEERS FROM NINE LOCALS IN STATE CONVENTION HERE

Attended by about 50 delegates from nine locals in the state, as well as several national officers, the 31st annual convention of the Connecticut state association of stationary engineers opened Friday evening in the social room at the Community house on Church street. It was called to order by John A. Holland, chairman of the local arrangements committee, who is a past state president.

Convention Committees

Mr. Holland turned the meeting over to President Elmer L. Bassett of Bridgeport, who appointed the following convention committees:

Auditing—L. A. Pierson, Devon; F. J. Quinlan, Bridgeport; W. H. Brown, Waterbury.

Credentials—E. N. Doyle, Devon; John Casey, Norwich; B. J. Phelps, New Haven.

Ways and means—A. C. Marsh, Bristol; H. Opffinger, Meriden; W. McGregor, Hartford.

Constitution—P. J. Grace, Bridgeport; A. Dearborn, Meriden; W. Chevolier, Waterbury; W. Hubbard, Norwich; John Swanson, Danbury.

Past State President Holland, who introduced the speakers during the evening, presented Mayor Milo R. Waters to the convention, stating that the Norwich mayor was known as a good fellow and his name was being mentioned in some of the state papers as possibility for nomination for governor.

Mayor Waters raised a laugh when he opened his brief remarks by saying that he would state for the benefit of any Harvard men present that Yale had won the varsity boat race by two lengths. He went on to welcome the convention delegates to the city and told them he hoped they would like our nice little city so well that they would want to come back when there wasn't any convention to draw them here.

History of Association

Preceding his introduction of Mayor Waters, Mr. Holland took the opportunity to give a brief history of the National Association of Stationary Engineers. He spoke as follows:

"The National Association of Stationary Engineers was organized in New York city October 25th, 1882. It now has over 350 subordinate associations in our principal cities and a membership of over 35,000. It owns and controls its official monthly magazine, "The National Engineer"; it is not affiliated with any other organization; its motto is, "Learn more to earn more". Its foundation is education.

"The stability of industry and the welfare of our people can only be brought about by a closer cooperation between employer and employe. This is one of the inevitable conditions which must be reached in the very near future. The constitution of the United States gives its people liberty and the right of free speech, but many fail to know where the former stops and the abuse of the same begins; so it is only by education and cooperation that we can bring about sensible conditions which are so necessary at this time.

"This body of operating engineers believes that the importance of their profession has never been properly presented for the consideration of their fellow-citizens. Its ranks are filled with only competent and reliable men who believe that ability and a practical knowledge of one's profession is necessary to make a man a good workman and a valuable one to his employer. This nation is the workshop of the world; it is therefore necessary to have the finest workmen. The grand work of our industries enables our rapidly growing population to be fully employed, making the United States the first amongst the producing nations of the world.

"The service which steam renders to humanity requires the closest attention. The use of steam involves danger where it is used or controlled without regard to the simple adjuncts which insure public safety. The rapid increase in the erection of steam plants and the rapid growth of our manufacturing enterprises of late years, amongst which is the universal use of electricity, refrigeration, compressed air, hydraulics, heating and ventilation and various other inventions and appliances for the benefit of mankind, has made it necessary for the man who handles the prime motor, the steam engine or steam turbine, to at once look for practical information and education.

Our Preamble

"With no other motives or intents, this order was formed by representatives from the then former engineers' societies of this country. Twelve delegates met in New York city and formed this organization, and adopted the preamble of its constitution which has stood for nearly 50 years, and to the public it is generally a surprise. It is as follows:

"This association shall at no time be used for the furtherance of strikes or in any way interfering between its members and their employers in regards to wages; recognizing the identity of interests between employer and employe; and not countenancing any project or enterprise that will interfere with perfect harmony between them; neither shall it be used for political or religious purposes. Its meetings shall be devoted to the business of the association, and at all times preference shall be given to education and to securing the enactment of engineers' license laws."

"Gentlemen, our preamble is a master-piece; it is second in importance only to the declaration of independence; it is the very essence of the golden rule. Those 12 men who met in New York city nearly 50 years ago have all passed away, but they have left a monument to their memory which will stand for all time.

"Our members are satisfied with the shorter and most certain way of increased compensation; that is, to deliver to their employer their experience and skill backed by practical facts. The use of steam and the steam engine requires on the part of the engineer, study, thought and experience, that it may be handled economically and safely, so that it will be the most useful servant to humanity. To do all this successfully, we must provide a body of operating engineers, who, when day after day, they devote their lives to their profession, may be protected and recognized as a class who deserve some consideration from the hands of their fellow-men.

"This order has no other business at its meetings, than that of educating its members. That this work is bearing fruit is shown by the steady increase of our membership, which includes the ablest operating engineers in the United States. The business of engineering is not a trade, because it is never learned on account of the great changes and improvements continually going on. The engineer who wishes to keep up to date must necessarily meet with those in a like profession and discuss the problems that daily come before him. Almost every employer pays for the superintendence and inspection, some more, some less. To know our work and do it so well that it will require no supervision, and by doing our own thinking we save the expense of hiring others to think for us.

"We believe in occupational good will. We further believe that its presence and possession forms one of the most valuable assets that can be acquired in any business. I have placed before you the man who is the keystone of the American industry, and I am proud to be at the head of an organization that has done so much for the safety and welfare of humanity in this land—the engineer.

Two Addresses Given.

Two addresses of much interest to the engineers were given, the first by H. D. Larrabee of this city, general manager of the Eastern Connecticut Power company, and H. W. Heinrich of the engineering division of the Travelers Insurance company of Hartford.

Mr. Larrabee spoke upon Conservation of Fuel Through Better Use of Power Resources, which referred particularly to tieing in New England water power with electric power systems. Our future source of energy will not be water power but steam systems, he declared.

Mr. Heinrich spoke along technical lines, referring to some of the experiences which are met with in the inspection of boilers. He said he hoped the state of Connecticut could be induced to adopt some kind of construction code.

The evening concluded with a smoker in which entertainment was furnished by Louis Sayre, Joseph McKenna and Joseph Egan.

In Attendance at Convention.

Besides the Norwich local, there are delegates from Meriden, Devon, Bristol, Bridgeport, Hartford, Danbury, New Haven and Waterbury.

Saturday Programme.

10 a. m. Opening of business session. Election and installation of officers. 2 p. m. Examination on Merit System by state board of examiners. 4 p. m. Visit to Submarine Base.

COUNTRY DANCE CLOSES S'NAI BRITH SOCIALS

The Rose of New England lodge, No. 898, Independent Order of B'nai Brith, held the final social of the season at Shiller's, Colchester road, on Thursday evening, with a country dance as the special feature. It was the culmination of a series of socials held every two weeks since September last. The organization models all its activities in harmony with American manners and precepts, placing great stress upon the social relation among its members. These semi-monthly gatherings are held in line with the belief that by bringing harmony, mutual understanding and friendly cooperation among the members of the organization and by always stimulating the civic and patriotic usefulness of each individual member, the ultimate object must tend for the good of the city, state and nation.

About 400 people attended the dance among which were many B'nai Brith members and friends from New London, Colchester and New Britain. His Honor, Mayor Waters, was the honored guest of the evening. Mayor Waters has attended the important functions of the Norwich B'nai Brith lodge since its organization in 1922 and feels very much at home with the boys. The Order of Knights of Pythias of Norwich and Colchester had a very large representation at the social. Several prominent Elks were also present. Shiller's spacious dance hall was very tastefully decorated with autumn leaves and Zimmi's orchestra furnished the music. Schiller spared no expense to make his large grounds attractive for the occasion by installing special electric lights over the entire grounds. The lunch counters were in charge of Mrs. Alex Pasnik, Mrs. Nathan Gilman, Mrs. Alex Manes and Mrs. Martin Cohn. The ladies prepared delicious sandwiches and pastry and saw that no B'nai Brith or any of the guests should suffer from lack of food. Mrs. Abraham Bruckner very ably took charge of the ice cream counter with the result that all members kept cool even though the evening was rather hot. Miss Goldie Bruckner displayed very ably qualifications at the soda counter and was very generously patronized by both young and old. Alex Pasnik and Max Hanover were in charge of the arrangements of the dance floor and grounds and Alex never worked so hard in his life. The result of his work received favorable comment by both members and guests. George Shiller the owner of the premises and a member of B'nai Brith donated his grounds and dance hall for the occasion and did not stint labor and courtesy for the benefit of the social. The entertainment committee consisted of Alex Pasnik, chairman, Joseph M. Lahn, Abraham Bruckner, Rudolph Henschel, Josiah Greenstein, Jacob Weisinger, George Schiller, Abner Schwartz, president, and Max Hanover, secretary. The ladies' committee: Mrs. Alex Pasnik, president; Mrs. Nathan Gilman, Miss Marcia Bruckner, Mrs. Abraham Bruckner, Miss Sarah Bruckner, Miss Ruth Clark, secretary.

PROSPECTS FOR SILEX MINE TO BE DEVELOPED

In the motion list session of the superior court in this city Friday morning, Judge Earnest C. Simpston granted permission to Robert W. Perkins, receiver of the Shore Line Electric railway comany, to sell certain sections of the trolley road to Archer R. Wheeler of New York. It is understood that the section to be sold is about 10 miles of track which is all that remains of the road that has not been taken up, and that the present purchaser is acquiring it because it will be useful in the development of the silex mine at Lantern Hill. The price to be obtained is $20,000, it was understood.

On the application of Receiver Perkins, Judge Simpson passed an order to have Attorney Herbert W. Rathbun receive $600 as counsel fees and expenses as counsel in Rhode Island for the receivership of the estate.

Judge Simpson passed an order for the sale of Mason Island on Aug. 28, this action being desired in the case of Mason Island Co., of New London against Thomas B. Enders and Elisabeth E. Colgrove of Stonington and others in order that the proceeds from the property may be divided.

Judge Simpson denied a motion to have judgment issued demanding execution of judgment in the suit of Jacob Solomon of New London vs. Harry M. Shalett in which the verdict was for $6,177 in favor of Solomon. Shalett has perfected an appeal to the supreme court.

Edgar B. Worthington was discharged as receiver for the Norwich Dairy and Ice Cream Co., and a final judgment in receivership was entered in the case of Soulopoulos, et al, vs. Kostopoulos. All parties are of Norwich. The affairs of the receivership estate have been settled, all claims paid, and the matter is now closed.

George A. Gorton of New London was discharged as receiver of the New London Greenhouses and Nurseries, Inc. The final account was accepted and the corporation was dissolved.

Leonard E. Otis of New London, whose wife, Lillian Tyndall Otis, has brought suit against him for divorce, was before the court to show cause why he had not complied with the court order to pay his wife alimony pendente lite of $8 from December, 1925. Judge Simpson stated that Otis would be sent to jail if he did not come to some agreement with his wife about the alimony payments.

Motion to erase the case of Elliot vs. Tourtellotte from the docket was taken under consideration by Judge Simpson.

That the defendant be held in contempt for failure to comply with order of court with respect to payment of support money in the case of Sadie Chapman Corey of New London against Alvin P. Corey of Willimantic was denied without prejudice.

Judge Simpson took the papers and reserved decision in the case of Dunlop vs. Greene, on the motion for default.

APPOINTED LIFE GUARD AT MOHEGAN PARK HERE

William J. Browne of Cliff terrace has been appointed by the board of park commissioners as the life guard at the lake in Mohegan park for the summer season. He will commence his duties on Monday, June 28th, and will be at the swimming place at the lake daily from 9 to 12 a. m. and 1:30 to 5:15 p. m., to guard the bathers against accidents, to teach the younger boys to swim and to have general supervision over the swimming activities.

Mr. Browne is a graduate of the Free Academy, class of 1922, and during his course was active in baseball, football and track, being captain of the baseball team in his senior year. PIANO PUPILS GAVE RECITAL AT TEA

Miss Esther Bixby, assistant teacher to Professor Farrel, gave a small informal tea at his studio for her class last Monday afternoon. About twenty parents and friends attended. A few of her pupils were not able to be present, but those who took part rendered their selections very creditably. Particular mention should be made of little Charlotte Disco who, though only five, played third grade work with skill.

The programme was as follows:

Duet, America, Hunting Song, Drum and Trumpet, March of Brownies, by Malcom McKear.

My Beloved (Hilger), Spring Song (Mendelssohn) by Berry Hitchon.

Nocture, Op. 27 (MacFadden), Barcarolle (Charles Gilvert Spross), Scarf Dances (Chamiade) by Elizabeth Sterrett.

By request, Miss Bixby played fifth Rhapsodie (Lisst), Les Minstrels and LaFille avec tes cheveux de liu, both by Debussy.

Economy a la Mode

"Could you let me have 23 cents," the rather young matron asked suddenly. Her husband, startled out of the evening newspaper, repeated vaguely, "23 cents?" Feeling in his pocket, he said, "I can give you a quarter."

But she shook her head. "No, a quarter won't do any good. I have to have 23 cents," and taking the pencil point out of her mouth, she figured a moment and said: "Yes, it's 23 cents I need. You see, I've just figured up my accounts and I'm 23 cents short, and if you will give it to me then I can balance—no," as he held out the quarter, "if I took that I would be over 2 cents. All I need is 23," and she pushed the quarter gravely back across the table.

"How are your finances coming on this month?" he asked and laid down his newspaper.

"Well," she answered slowly, "of course, I'm only out balance 23 cents but I seem to have more than usual this month.

"That's the trouble with an allowance. When you just have a certain sum to spend everything seems to happen, while if you merely spend, and do the best you can, you don't have to worry and feel that you are spending money which you really haven't."

"Are you much in the hole?"

"Well, I would call it being in the hole," she answered slowly. "It's that everything costs so much."

"Would $25 extra help you any?"

"Well, of course, it would help out if you were going to do it, it would be just as well to make it $30."

"It would seem that we could cut down our expenses some place," the rather young man's husband turned the pages of a magazine idly.

"That's just what I think," his wife agreed, the prospect of the extra $30 giving a new zest to life.

"Here's one thing—we take too many magazines," he offered. "I notice that the subscription on this one is out and several others are almost out."

"And another thing," suggested his wife. "We're using too much cream. I'll stop taking that extra bottle."

"I might shave myself too," the head of the house murmured.

"And that club I joined—that's $5 a year, and I wasn't nearly so crazy about it after I was in it—I think I resign when the year is out, and you could cut down on your lunches; you said you were eating too much anyway," and she looked at him with wifely interest. "And I could eat here here at home—every little helps economically. Then suddenly, "and extracts!"

"Extracts?"

"Yes. You know—lemon and vanilla. I'm just going to stop flavoring cakes and things."

The telephone rang, and the head of the house got up to answer.

"Well, no, I don't think I'm in the market for one just now," the husband of the rather young matron was saying. "Sure, I know it's a good car, but I think I'll make mine do another season. Well, perhaps I'll talk to you in the spring—m-m—I see—Oh, sure I know there are lots of advantages in the new model—sure thing! Well—mm—you would? Well, now you're talking business. Well, I'll not promise anything but drop around tomorrow and look it over—sure thing! Sure! It's in the condition—just got two new tires—I see—sure. I'll talk to you tomorrow. Good-by."

When he came back to the living room the rather young matron met him, her face glowing and her eyes sparkling. "Oh, it's a new automobile! And it is to be a closed car? Oh, I am so glad it's a closed one. You know, I wasn't going to say anything about it, really, but you know I found last winter that my coat is rather light, I wasn't going to mention it until I had to, and put off buying a new one until as late as possible, but now if we get a closed car I'm sure I can get through the winter."

Her husband sat down and fumbled among the magazines on the table. "There's a picture of the new model he was telling me about, in one of these magazines—it sure is a peach of a car—what do you think of that?" and he opened the page before her fascinated gaze.—Chicago News.

The house adjourned yesterday out of respect to Representative Charles E. Fuller, of Illinois who died yesterday at Rochester, Minnesota.

SAM WILCOX AND N. K. LANMAN MEET IN INVITATION GOLF FINALS TODAY

Sam Wilcox of Norwich will meet N. K. Lanman, of Columbus, O., a member of the Yale golf team, in the finals of the state invitation tournament for the Mrs. Charles D. Noyes trophy, this morning in the first 18 holes of the 36-hole match.

In the semi-finals played on Friday morning Lanman created a mild surprise when he defeated his Yale team mate, Capt. T. E. Wattles, 2 and 1. Wattles was the favorite to win over Lanman but the Columbus boy by virtue of his superior putting was able to eliminate Wattles. Wattles encountered some difficulty in his tee shots but his approach shots were good only to lose his advantage on the greens.

Wilcox and Willis Austin in their semi-final match played good golf Wilcox being a little ragged at the first but steadying down and playing a brilliant game in the last few holes winning the match 3 and 2. Wilcox's driving while of great distance was straight down the fairways and his iron shots were beautifully executed getting him to the green where he was strong. Austin played a nice game and was in the lead during the first half of the match but lost his advantage on the way in.

The first 18 holes of the finals will start this morning at 10 o'clock with Wilcox and Lanman about on even terms. The chances of the local boy winning the cup are somewhat better against Lanman than they would have been against Wattles as the Yale captain is considered a stronger player than Lanman. It is expected that a large gallery will follow the match today.

In the "beaten eight" play E. G. McKay will meet C. R. Bose. In the semi-final McKay defeated E. A. Harris 7 and 6 while Bose won from P. M. Grover on the thirteenth hole having Grover dormie five when Grover picked up and conceded the match to Mr. Bose. The final round in the "beaten eight" play will be at eighteen holes and will be played this afternoon.

There will also be a "kickers" tournament at the club over the week end and no little interest is being shown in this event and the entry list is large.

RIVERVIEW AND MERIDEN TEAM CLASH AT HOSPITAL TODAY

That Manager Zemke is a glutton for getting tough games for his club is evidenced by the fact that he has booked the New Departure team of Meriden as the opponents for his gang of ball hawks at the State hospital today. Zemke is not picking any set-up clubs for his team to play and the Riverview club is experiencing the toughest schedule ever encountered by the state institution team. Today's game is going to be one of the hardest games of the present season as the visitors are out for the state semi-pro honors and a defeat at the hands of the local club will be quite some set-back to their aspirations.

A glance at the Meriden lineup will convince fans that the visiting team has some mighty good ball players on its roster. Billy Dwyer, Colgate shortstop, is covering that position for Meriden while the initial sack is covered by Eddie Hart, well known in baseball and football circles in the eastern part of this state. Eddie will be remembered as the referee of the Bulkeley-Academy football at New London last fall. Zeilke and Hallbach are two other well known players while Stuhleidner has quite some reputation as a hurler.

Zemke will use his regular lineup with Lefty Dugas doing the pitching for the hospital club. Tommy Burns will play second and Myers will be in the outfield, two All-Navy men with great records as ball players. The lineups follow:

DRAGOON FIRST OVER LINE IN NEW LONDON-BERMUDA RACE

HAMILTON, Bermuda, June 25.—(AP)—Robert N. Bavier's Yacht Dragoon was the first to sweep across the finish line of the New London to Bermuda races this morning, winning the prize for the first to arrive here.

The Cygnet, owned by Paul Hammond, was the second of the 16 yachts which sailed from New London Sunday morning, to reach her haven at St. Georges. The Cygnet passed over the line at 1:22 p. m. the Dragoon having preceded her at 8:52 this morning.

Both the Dragoon and Cygnet are not eligible as winners of the race under the time allowance and the final result will not be shown until the arrival of Herbert L. Stone aboard the Jolie Brise, the time keeper.

TAFTVILLE A. A. WILL CLASH WITH ROSSIE VELVET TODAY

The Taftville A. A. will attempt to even up the series with the Rossie Velvet team of Mystic this afternoon at the Providence street grounds in Taftville. Last Sunday the Rossie team administered a sound drubbing to the Taftville club and the Taftville boys are still rankling under the bitter sting of defeat. With the memory of their defeat fresh in their minds, Taftville will be out for blood this afternoon and a battle may be expected. Manager Troland will probably use Lloyd Jarvis in the box with Eccleston doing the catching.

LUCAS WINS OWN GAME WITH SINGLE IN NINTH

PITTSBURGH, June 25.—(AP)—Lucas won his own game in the ninth inning today when he singled to score two runs and Cincinnati defeated Pittsburgh, 9 to 8 in a game marked by heavy hitting. The Pirates rallied in their half of the last inning, but the spurt fell short.

Waner, Pirate outfielder, had five hits in as many times at bat, including a double and a triple. Score:

SUZANNE AND ROYALTY TAKE COURTS AT WIMBLEDON

WIMBLEDON, England, June 25.—(AP)—While today was rather an off day in the jubilee tennis tournament so far as really important matches were concerned, it by no means lacked features of real interest.

One of them was the participation of English royalty in tournament competition for the first time in history in the person of the duke of York, second son of the king.

Mlle. Lenglen appeared on the courts for her match with the English player, Mrs. Dewhurst, seeking at rest for the moment at least, fears that her physical condition would make it necessary for her to scratch from the tournament. This match with Mrs. Dewhurst was the one which to have been played on Wednesday when Mlle. Lenglen declined to go on the courts after Queen Mary and a large gathering of enthusiasts had waited for her appearance.

The French girl came to Wimbledon today with a physician's certificate setting forth that she should not "take part in any vigorous match." Consequently she did not exert herself, and permitted Mrs. Dewhurst to take four games. Suzanne won 6-2, 6-2, but the match did not afford the gallery the kind of tennis it expects to see when Suzanne is on the court.

On the women's side of the doubles argument, Miss Elizabeth Ryan, and Miss Mary K. Browne, who yesterday defeated Mlle. Lenglen and Mlle. Didi Vlasto, were again on the winning side, against Miss I. Maltby and Mrs. H. G. Broadbridge. The score was 6-2, 2-6, 6-3. They were playing in bye.

the third round from a second round

In the first round of the same division Mrs. Mallory and Mrs. Jessup had as opponents Mrs. Bruce May and Mrs. Van Praagh. The Americans got going well and had no trouble in winning, 6-3, 6-2.

Another victory was added to the American tally in the first round of the mixed doubles when Vincent Richards and Miss Elizabeth Ryan defeated E. T. Lamb and Miss E. R. Clarke, 6-2, 6-4.

Of the crack French team, the only individual stars to appear were Mlle. Lenglen, Didi Vlasto and Jean Borotra, all of whom won their matches, as did Dorotra and M. Aslangul, who were permitted to team up in the men's doubles owing to the withdrawal of Paul Feret. They defeated H. G. Mays and J. M. Hillyard, 6-4, 8-6, 4-6, 4-6, 6-1.

MEUSEL BREAKS BONE IN FOOT WHILE SLIDING

ST. ANNE'S, England, June 25.—(AP)—Bobby Jones beloved of American amateur golfers and almost as popular in Great Britain as in his homeland, left the Royal Lytham and St. Anne's golf course tonight to catch a liner home tomorrow, the proud possessor of the world's most cherished golfing trophy—the British open championship cup.

His name will be engraved on its silver sides along with those of other famous players—Jim Braid, Harry Vardon, J. H. Taylor, Walter Hagen—and there is added lustre to his victory, for it is the first time an American amateur ever captured the coveted golfing grail symbolizing victory over both professionals and amateurs. But American professionals won the title in four of the last six years, Jock Hutchison being the victor in 1921, Walter Hagen in 1922 and 1924 and Jim Barnes in 1925. Arthur Havers in 1923 and 1924 and Jim Barnes in 1925 with Hagen second.

Jones' accomplishment never has been equalled by a British amateur playing in the American open. The young Atlantan is the first amateur to win the British since Harold Hilton scored at Hoylake in 1897. Only John Ball, Hilton and Jones have taken the crown from professionals in the event which had its beginning at Prestwick in 1860.

Bobby achieved a great personal victory but a dozen Americans—all professionals except the Californian George Von Elm—made the finish tophearty with the score of entrants from the United States. Native-born Americans took the first four places. Jones first with 291 strokes, Al Watrous, second with 293 and Hagen and Von Elm tied for third with 295.

A British pair, Abe Mitchell and Tom Barber, then entered the list tied at 299 and they were followed by an American trio, Fred McLeod with 301 and Emmett French and Bill Mehlhorn tied at 303. Archie Compston, who will make his home in the United States hereafter, should have been among the leading scorers with 299 but he played a ball from out of bounds and suffered disqualification. He played through to the finish however and attained a satisfactory 71 in his final round which tied Mitchell and Barber for low.

A dramatic three-cornered fight among Jones, Watrous and Hagen featured the last 36 holes of play today, with Hagen placed for one of his thrilling finishes, which for once failed to develop. Mehlhorn, who led with Jones yesterday, passed away with a bad round of 79 in the morning. Watrous at the same time slipped into first place to lead Jones by two strokes while Hagen was four behind the leader with 219 before the final round started.

Expert strokes should have come from the clubs of Hagen in this situation but the heavy schedule of tournament, match and exhibition play which he had carried out in this country evidently affected even his great genius and although it was not certain until the very last hole that he was beaten, a victory would have been a remarkable accomplishment. He needed an eagle two at the 349-yard eighteenth but a six decorated his card. It was evident throughout the tournament that Hagen remained unpopular following his late reporting in his recent challenge match with Abe Mitchell.

For Jones it was a case of coming to England and remaining to conquer after his elimination i nthe amateur championship at Muirfield which Jess Sweetser, a fellow American, won so bravely. Once previously, in 1921 as a raw, impetuous golfing youth, Jones invaded England and did his share to win the Walker cup but tore up his card in the third round of the open event of St. Andrews.

Britishers, however, voted the Atlantan a fine golfer, accepting his reputation in the United States, but he wanted to prove conclusively that he could "shoot par" and after caring tenderly for the stricken Sweetser during the final hours of his stay in England, Bobby went back to the golf course and prepared for the great contest from which today he emerged victor.

He started shooting par—rather shattered par—in his record qualifying round at Sunningdale last week and he kept it up right through to the finish. In his six championship rounds there were only two sixes on his cards, one this morning and one this afternoon.

Jones had to fight for every figure and tonight he complained to the associated press that for some reason he could not stir himself to the depths for the final battle. When he started weakly on his third round there was something like despair in the hearts of his admirers.

"The lad is hitting them too cautiously," said Harry Vardon, whose style is compared to the Americans.

But Bobby knew that utmost precaution was wisdom on the tight St. Anne's course with the greens slick and hard, ever ready to let a ball slip into the sand traps surrounding them. Jones and Watrous, partners in the round, had lunch together and then resumed their battle with Hagen behind them ready to take advantage of any possible slip. Both turned in 36. The amateur thus was still two strokes behind but he regained one at the tenth when Watrous took a five after visiting the rough on the hillhouse.

At the 11th Jones lost an opportunity to level his total, missing a three-foot putt after a faultless three to the edge of the green. He lost another stroke at the 13th but got it back at the next. The 15th saw him even with the professional when Watrous' putt overran six feet and he missed the return. The 16th was halved and then at the crucial 17th Jones found a shallow sandpit just off the fairway, but a spectacular midiron took him to the green 170 yards away.

That stroke won for Bobby—if single strokes can win golf championships. He took a four to Watrous' five. With Jones leading by a stroke the players wedged themselves through crowds entirely encircling the 18th fairway. Jones' drive winged straight and far down the middle while Watrous' tee shot found a bunker and his second another at the left of the green. Five was the best the professional could do while Jones obtained his par four. Then began the nerve-wracking wait for the return of Hagen.

Two under fours at the fifth hole in his last round, Walter appeared to have a fine chance of wresting the lead from the couple in front of him or at least obtaining a tie which would necessitate a playoff late in the afternoon. He turned with 35 and learned that he must make the home journey in 35 to win or 36 to tie, which necessitated even fours for the remainder of the distance.

For three holes he held firmly to the program aid lout for hmim with four, five, four, and seemed to be sailing along smoothly when he ran into disaster at the 13th when, perhaps with the championship in the balance, he missed his putt for three by inches and at the 14th and then another failure on a holeable putt at the short 15 on which he required a four and rendered his task apparently insurmountable.

But Great Britain knows that Hagen is never out until the final hole is played. However, the much needed birdies failed to materialize. At the 17th he misse dhis putt for three by inches and had to be satisfied with par. There was only one chance in a thousand that he could make the 349-yard home hole in two to tie Jones but there was a possibility that his second shot might drop and Hagen prepared for it as if he expected it would. But the ball hit the green behind the pin and bounded into a trap.

With all chance gone Walter calmly holed out in six.

Soon all other contestants had reported and T. E. Topping, trustee of the club, presented the trophy to its American winner, which has become almost a custom. Movie machines whirled and the crowds cheered lustily as Jones was lauded as "that incomparable exponent on the game of golf." The other Americans were congratulated on their fine performances.

Hagen accepted defeat with a smile, telling the throng that Americans always knew they had to beat Bobby Jones in any tournament to win.

"And the best man won," he added.

Von Elm's ability to tie with Hagen would in itself have received much more attention as a remarkable feat had not the Jones-Watrous-Hagen battle attracted all the interest. He played fine, steady golf all the way through the 72-hole test and for two American amateurs to finish among the first four of the British open is an accomplishment second in importance only to Jones' victory.

The Californian finished while the throng awaited the coming of Hagen and he could not resist employing some of the great professional's "color" with a putt of two inches to negotiate, he lifted up the ball from both sides of the green and was very deliberate about sinking it. The by-play drew laughter and applause.

Weather conditions were almost perfect for the Americans' style of play but they proved to English critics that they could master heavy winds, an art at which the British always had contended that they were unskilled. Tommy Armour was just out of the money with 305 while Joe Kirkwood reported with 310.

Ten professionals received money prizes while two amateurs were awarded the value of the finishing positions in plate.

Their scores follow:

IN NORWICH FIFTY YEARS AGO

Fifty years ago this week Charles Johnson was elected president of the Norwich Savings society at the annual meeting of the bank's trustees. The same week a horse race for Norwich horses, purse $100, was held at the local fair grounds and wages in several local manufacturing plants were cut from ten to 15 per cent. Interesting extracts taken from the files of The Norwich Bulletin of June, 1876, are as follows:

Monday, June 19, 1876—Probably the first campaign flag bearing the names of Hayes and Wheeler, that was raised in the state, was the one swung across Water and Market streets by Mr. F. L. Gardner Saturday morning. Dr. Woodmansee and Mr. Brigden followed with one across Main street early in the evening. Both of these flags were hung out in the campaign of 1872.

The annual reading at the Free academy for the Williams medal took place Friday evening in the presence of a large audience. The contest is confined to the young ladies of the institution, nine of them appearing on the stage. The reading was very good and in some instances remarkably so.

An attempt was made Saturday night to wreck the steamboat train on the New London Northern road, near the first crossing above the Norwich Town depot. A number of fence rails were piled across the track. The engineer did not see them until the train was a few feet away, too late to stop. Prompt application of the air brake however prevented a serious accident, as only the locomotive struck the obstruction and was not thrown from the track.

Secretary and treasurer, Benjamin Huntington.

Assistant secretary and treasurer, Costello Lippitt.

Major B. P. Learned was elected to fill a vacancy in the board of trustees.

A very pleasant entertainment was given in the Grand Army hall last evening by the young people of Trinity church.

A petition is in circulation calling for a city meeting to reconsider some of the votes passed at the last one, particularly to the action taken with regard to the estimate obliging a reduction in the police force.

The City Guard has begun recruiting to full number allowed by the new orders from regimental headquarters.

Wednesday, June 21, 1876—Somebody asked a man who was troubled with boils, yesterday, what he was taking for them. He said he had been taking a dollar a piece but was willing to let a friend have one for 75 cents. True friendship is far above mercenary considerations.

The race for Norwich horses for a purse of $100, will take place on the fairground track tomorrow. The entries will close tonight at nine o'clock and no horse will be admitted after that time.

The steamer City of Lawrence was crowded with passengers on her arrival yesterday morning, many of them being on their way home from Cincinnati.

Friday, June 23, 1876—A correspondent wants to know how long it would take to walk from here to the centennial grounds. Judging by the time it takes some of our country subscribers to come into town and get a receipted bill, we should think the trip might occupy somewhere in the neighborhood of nine years. POETRY

Charmian's Song

I'm glad I have but a little heart—
For my heart is very small;
It makes me free to come and go,
And no one cares at all.

I give my heart for a tender look,
For a gentle word or touch,
And the one who has it never knows,
And it does not hurt me much.

If my heart were great and I gave it away,
Then all the world would see;
But my heart is only a little thing,
And it does not trouble me.

I may give my little heart unseen,
It is so small and light,
And only very wakeful things
Can hear it cry at night.
—Aline Kilmer, in Poetry.

Lost Friendship

Why did you speak to me last night,
Leaning across the gate, when I,
Drowsy with wind and meshed moonlight,
Longed only for good-by?

My hand was cold . . . Why did you try
To clasp my fingers suddenly?
My lips were cold as frost-flowers. Why
Did you lean close to me?

All I could say was "No," and "No."
I gathered up my dewy cape.
The garden gave me shelter. So
I made a child's escape.

I wish you did not love me . . . Oh,
I wish you had been still and proud!
You are too wise to need me so,
Why did you speak aloud?

Last night I was your friend. Today
What helpless leagues we stand apart!
And I can watch—and still be gay—
The ruin of your heart.
—Fannie Stearns Gifford, in Good Housekeeping.

An exceedingly plain-faced and homely politician was once accused of deceitfulness and hypocrisy, but he rose to the occasion. They say I am two-faced. Now, gentlemen looking mournful and homelier than usual, do you believe that, if I had two faces, I would be wearing this one? This did up all his critics.—Brooklyn Central.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Stone are exceedingly proud of their three love daughters. An admirer of the comedian was talking about the family "back stage" a few days ago. "Have you nothing but girls?" the man inquired.

Bucksport, Me., has a tombstone which has attracted many tourists to the old burying ground where it stands. Tradition says that Col. Buck, who founded the town, condemned a witch to be burned at the stake. In a curse she prophesied that the outline of her foot would appear on his tombstone. A monument was erected after his death and in a few years the outline of a human foot appeared just below the family name. Although acids have been used to efface this strange marking, it is said that it always reappears.

Theater audiences can hear much better in a full house than in one with many empty seats, according to Professor F. R. Watson, authority on acoustics of the University of Illinois in his research on sound he has found that thickly carpeted floors, heavy draperies and plush seats in theaters make for better hearing conditions on account of their sound-absorbing qualities, and the clothing of the audience acts in the same way. Small theaters with their side walls broken by boxes draped with sound-absorbing material really provide the best acoustics for the spoken drama, he asserts.

Judge Williams suspended sentence requiring her to enter into recognizance in the sum of $200. COAST GUARDSMEN ARE ASSISTING TO ENFORCE LIQUOR LAW IN NEW LONDON

(Special to the Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, June 25.—The police of this city have called on the coast guard to assist in stopping the violation of the Volstead act and to enforce the 18th amendment. Sergeant Nelson Smith and Patrolman Graham sought the cooperation of Commander Frank S. Young of the coast guard and presenting a situation that could be met if the sailors of the guard would don civilian garb and land a hand. The officers were successful in securing the assistance sought. The sailors began work last Saturday, but that fact was not disclosed till this morning when cases alleging a violation of the liquor law in the sale of whiskey and wine were brought to trial. Frank Kurpiewski of North Bank street, the keeper of a "grocery" there, stepped up to the bar in the court room, not in his place of business, and said he was guilty after he had learned of the testimony that was to be offered to prove that he sold two pints of liquor at $4 a pint to the sailors and supplied them with drinks at 25 cents a swallow. Kurpiewski's place has been one in which liquor has been sold in the past rather freely and it had acquired a reputation that led the police to keep a close scrutiny of the store. That being the case the officers knew just where to direct their assistants to go. Orders were followed with the result that the seller was caught "with the goods." On the advice of his attorney, he wisely decided to plead guilty and take his "medicine." That was a fine of $200 and a suspended jail sentence of ten days.

Peter Jardino who conducts a "grocery" on Golden street, was charged by the same men who appeared against Kurpiewski with having sold them wine and cider. They produced the wine in court and declared it to be the stuff they bought from Jardino. Notwithstanding that and the fact that the sailors had dates and hours of their visit recorded Jardino almost with tears in his eyes, protested his innocence. He said he never sold the men any wine and represented that he was not in the store the day the wine is alleged to have been purchased. Then he accused the sailors of having been in the store the following Sunday and to have threatened him by making known a plan to make trouble for him when he asked one of them to pay a bill of $1.70 which was owed for food that Jardino served him in the form of sandwiches, etc. That made the sailors accuse with even more positiveness than before. Jardino persisted and appealingly declared that he was at the beach and asked to be allowed to produce witnesses to prove what he said. Of course that privilege could not be consistently denied him and the case was adjourned to let Jardino amass the testimony he claims he has.

There are other cases to come up next Wednesday, the accusers being the same as appeared in the cases today. The accused are Jane Azzi of the Home restaurant at Ocean Beach and her assistant there, Byron Noyes. Mrs. Azzi is held in bail of $750 and Noyes in $500.

A couple of drunks were arraigned today, but they were fellows who claimed they just "slopped over" and promised not to do so again, so they were released on suspended judgment.

A case against Thomas Gentile which alleged indecent conduct with a boy at Ocean Beach, was continued as the attorney for Gentile could not be in court today. He is held in $500 for appearance.

Commissioner of motor vehicles this morning ordered suspended the operators' licenses of James Cuff, 167 Huntington street; Joseph Jackson, 12 Richards street and Louis Latimore, submarine base.

Orion L. Fowler, 69, one of New London's best known contractors, died last night at his residence, 6 Beckwith street, his death ending an illness of about a month. Mr. Fowler was engaged in the masonry business many years, being associated with his brother, James Fowler. Besides James Fowler, Mr. Fowler is survived by two other brothers, Thomas and Alvin Fowler, all of this city, and by several sisters. Mr. Fowler was a member of Pequot lodge, I. O. O. F., and Jibicom club.

Complaint was made to City Manager William A. Holt because of ash and vegetable garbage cans being allowed to remain on the sidewalks indefinitely at Ocean Beach. The complaint was turned over to Captain of Police Charles A. Pinney, who ordered Patrolman George Cockell to order the owners of the various cans to cause their removal from the sidewalks. In some instances the cans were allowed to remain in the sun and thereby cause a nauseating odor to arise from them.

The body of the sailor, found yesterday morning floating off the state pier, was identified this morning as that of Howard O. Hill, fireman second class and formerly assigned to the United States coast guard destroyer Cassin. Identification of the body was made following the arrival in port during the night of the destroyer. This morning the body was buried in St. Mary's cemetery, where Rev. Timothy M. Crowley, rector of St. Mary's Star of the Sea church, conducted prayer. Hill's home was in Ohio.

Mrs. McKenna, wife of Patrolman James McKenna, suffered a painful injury this morning and one which will incapacitate her indefinitely. Mrs. McKenna was descending a flight of stairs at her home when she tripped and fell, landing in such a manner as to produce a fracture of the right leg, between the ankle and knee.

Fred Edgcomb, United States coast guard, made complaint to the police this morning that his Ford automobile had been stolen from its place of parking at the state pier. He stated that the car was stolen between the 18th and 24th inst. Edgcomb stated that he parked his car in its usual place when his boat was ordered to sea, which was on the 18th inst., and when his boat returned to port this morning he discovered his loss. It is believed by the police that the car was stolen by some of the other sailors at the pier and may have been disposed of by sale.

A New York, New Haven and Hartford railroad freight train was wrecked at Niantic last night and not until this morning were the derailed cars gotten back on the tracks and the roadbed placed in proper condition for the resumption of traffic.

The freight train, which was enroute from Worcester to New Haven was passing between the Niantic river bridge and Niantic station when a section of brake-rigging on one of the cars dropped to the tracks, causing four cars to be derailed. The derailed cars plunged along the ties for a considerable distance and when the train was finally brought to a stop, both the east and west line tracks were blocked. Wrecking trains were dispatched to the scene of the derailment from Midway and New Haven. The east bound tracks were opened to traffic shortly after midnight, but it was not until daybreak that the west bound rails and roadbed had been repaired and made ready for the resumption of traffic. After midnight but little delay was experienced in the operation of trains, for all trains were operated over the east bound tracks at the point of the wreck.

Mrs. Timothy Murphy and infant son, East Lyme; Mrs. Charles Coler, Whittlesey street; Daniel Coleman, 165 Howard street; Mrs. William Spencer, Noank, Mrs. Edward Haskell, 31 Bellevue place and Mrs. Adolph Roth and infant son, 35 Walden avenue, patients at Lawrence-Memorial Associated hospital, were discharged today.

FEWER AUTOS DRIVEN TO RACE THAN IN PAST YEARS

(Special to the Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, June 26.—The boat race crowd that witnessed the races on the Thames river this evening was one of the largest in recent years. The number of automobiles was not as great as previous years, for the majority of the race attendants came to New London either by railroad trains or by yachts. The crowd was handled excellently by the police, for Captain Charles Pinney caused day and night officers to remain on duty during the time immediately preceding the race and at its conclusion. The traffic jams were less than usual and by 10 o'clock the major portion of the autoists had departed for their homes. The hotels, both in this city and at Eastern Point, were crowded to capacity by patrons who will embark on trains tomorrow to go to their homes or go to the Poughkeepsie races.

NEW HAVEN YOUTHS HELD FOR THEFT OF AUTOMOBILE

(Special to the Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, June 25.—Edward Mullen, 18, 635 Washington street; George Winn, 19, 158 Putnam street; James Tury, 18, 26 Columbia avenue, and Alphonse Onofrio, 453 Washington street, all of New Haven, were arrested this evening, charged with the theft of an automobile owned by Samuel Friedman of Colchester, and being detained in default of bail and were locked up to await their presentation in the police court tomorrow morning. After stealing the automobile from the street, the accused drove to the vicinity of the Soldiers' and Sailors' monument where they were seen by Patrolman John Sullivan. Interrogating the youths, the officer was satisfied that the boys had stolen the automobile and placed them under arrest.

A woman who had been drinking and not using good judgment in the amount that she consumed, went to the store of Mrs. Mary Seigel, John street, this evening and created a disturbance. She was obstinate and refused to depart from the store with the result that complaint to the police brought about her arrest.

Mrs. Philip Bruno, 11 North Bank street, made complaint to the police tonight because of the actions of one of the attendants at the Yale-Harvard race with the result that a young man, who refused to reveal his identity, was locked up and will be presented in the police court tomorrow morning charged with breach of the peace. The disturbance occurred in a barber-shop connected with the residence of the complainant and consisted of an argument with Mrs. Bruno and, according to Mrs. Bruno, he applied several vile names to her. Mrs. Bruno notified Patrolman Frank Philopeno of the breach of the peace and the fellow was taken into custody.

Mrs. Charles Kaufman and daughter, Gloria, of New London, are spending several weeks in Philadelphia and Wilmington, D.

Meyer Rich, 750 Main street, made complaint to the police this afternoon that the driver of an automobile carrying Connecticut registration, V-5386, was guilty of evasion of responsibility. Rich stated that he was driving his automobile through Pequot avenue about 5 o'clock and the unidentified car struck his car, causing it to overturn. Rich escaped injury, but the automobile was damaged.

Lucius Weinstein, 94 Park street, New Haven, and a companion who was too drunk to give his name, were arrested by Traffic Officer Henry Silva this evening. Weinstein, who was driving automobile E-9440 was intoxicated, and besides a charge of operating an automobile while under the influence of liquor, he is also charged with failing to obey a traffic officer's signal. Neither of the men could furnish a surety on their bond for their appearance in the police court tomorrow morning and they were locked up. Both were said to be demonstration of the police and Weinstein desired that Judge Henry Roraback, of the criminal superior court, be notified of their arrest. Deputies so say Judge Roraback was not acquainted with the predicament of the New Haven men.

An Essex coach, Connecticut registration E-3762, owned by R. W. Guy, 193 Circle street, Hamden, was stolen this afternoon while the owner of the car and some friends witnessed the Yale-Harvard boat race. Guy drove his car to the Thames shipyard, which affords a place of vantage to witness the event and while he and his friends watched the crews the automobile was stolen. Immediately following the discovery of the theft, Guy reported it to the police. No trace of the automobile was found as the state police at Groton and Colchester were notified.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Breed Theater

Harry Langdon, First National comedy king, is due to arrive at the Breed theatre tomorrow in his first feature length comedy, Tramp, Tramp, Tramp.

With this picture the noted comedian steps into the super-comedy class of Charlie Chaplin and Harold Lloyd. Under the terms of his recent contract with First National he is to appear in a series of feature length comedies.

The story of Tramp, Tramp, Tramp, is an original with Langdon and one which he has had in mind for some time. It deals with a cross-country walking race.

One of the numerous exciting and diverting episodes in Tramp, Tramp, Tramp is a realistic cyclone scene. An entire township is blown to bits by this wind storm. During the taking of the scenes the movie cameramen had to be "anchored" to trees and posts to prevent being blown away.

Joan Crawford plays opposite the comedian. Others in the cast are Tom Murray, Alec Francis, Edwards Davis and Brooks Benedict.

A bet is like walking into a swamp—the first step is easily accomplished, but the further one goes, the deeper one sinks.

That is the discovery made by Reginald Denny when he told his wife that he had gotten a raise, when in reality he was fired. Not his real wife, of course, but his movie spouse, impersonated by sweet Laura LaPlante, in "Skinner's Dress Suit," the Universal-Jewel comedy causing mirthquakes of laughter all over the country and which will be seen at this theatre beginning Sunday, as the first feature on a big double programme.

Denny, in the role of Skinner, gives one of the best performances of his long and varied career. His mobile countenance and woebegotten smile, coupled with his inimitable lugubrity of manner, makes him ideally suited for the difficult part.

Laura LaPlante, as "Honey," the golden-haired wife of the underpaid bookkeeper, finds her way into your heart. She has that cuddly cuteness in her makeup that is a triumph of personality and male members of the audience envy her screen husband with heavy and audible sighs.

The story is well-known, being a picturization of the famous book of the same name by Henry Irving Dodge. It has run into many editions and is the favorite work of the distinguished author.

"When the Germans saw the Scotch highlanders in their kilts coming at them through the red glare of bursting bombs they called them the 'ladies from hell.'"

Sir Robin, known as Buck Evans to the cowboys, is the hero of the fast moving yarn written by Norton S. Parker, who called it "My Lord of the Double B," and filmed by Associated Exhibitors under the title, "The Lady From Hell." The picture will be the second feature at the Broadway theatre Sunday night only, with Roy Stewart and Blanche Sweet sharing the stellar honors.

Next Week at Central Baptist Church.

Monday 3-5 p. m. Cradle Roll party. Those desiring transportation are asked to call Mrs. Pecan, Tel. 676-3, before noon Monday. 6.30 p. m. Deacons meeting at Deacon James M. Young's, Rock Glen.

Tuesday, 9.30 a. m. Sunday school picnic at Gardner Lake. Autos will leave the church at 9.30 a. m. and return at 5 p. m. Transportation will be furnished members of the church and Sunday school. Willis Hill and Harold Burt are in charge of the transportation. If it should rain Tuesday the picnic will be held Wednesday. Children must be accompanied by an adult. Bring basket lunch. Coffee and chowder will be served at a nominal price. Bring your own dish and spoon. Athletic events, including two baseball games, one between the married men and the single men.

Wednesday, 2.30 p. m. Friendship Circle meets with Mrs. Robert L. Richardson, 625 Main street.

Thursday 9 a. m. Daily Vacation Bible school under the supervision of Rev. V. Panizzoli, assisted by members of the church. 7.45 p. m. Family gathering of the church. Covenant meeting. The church will take action on the offer of Charles F. Noyes of New York city. This is a very important meeting and every one is urged to attend.

Friday 9 a. m. Daily vacation Bible school. 7.45 p. m. Harmony Circle meets in the parish house.

Feature Bible Pictures at Y. M. C. A.

At 4 o'clock, Sunday afternoon the second part of the feature Bible moving picture, "The Life of Moses," will be shown at the local Young Men's Christian Association. Among other things the following will be in the picture: The Israelites pursued by the Egyptians; the pillar of cloud, crossing the Red sea, the manna, Moses, smiting the rock, the Amalekites, Moses receiving the ten commandments, worship of the golden calf, Moses breaks the tablets and destroys the calf, the sacrifice before the ark, the wilderness, the death of Aaron and the death of Moses. The whole picture is a faithful portrayal of the Bible narrative and will deeply interest all interested in religious history. To this service both men and women are cordially invited, and boys and girls 14 and over will be admitted. Music for the picture will be furnished by Hugh Kinder and a brief talk in line with the picture will be given.

Next Week at United Congregational Church.

The executive committee of the Missions department of the Guild will meet at the home of the chairman.

The church school outing will be held on Wednesday, June 30th, at Ocean Beach. Cars leave Franklin square at 9.15 (daylight time) and arrive back at 6.15. If stormy the picnic will be on Thursday.

STOCK PRICES LOWER

NEW YORK, June 25—(AP)—Stock prices drifted lower in today's market although a steady investment demand was apparent for some of the high grade railroad issues. Trading which was largely of a professional character showed a moderate falling off in volume. Total sales were 1,297,200 shares compared with 1,342,100 yesterday and 1,738,200 the day before.

The senate defeat of the McNary-Haugen farm relief bill brought about a sharp recession in active wheat futures but apparently had no influence on the movement of securities prices. The day's business news was largely fair aside one of the most interesting developments being the declaration of an extra dividend on corn products.

The weekly mercantile reviews reported that business was being maintained in good volume. While the textile, shoe, leather and furniture business continues rather dull, an improvement is noted in several of the basic industries, particularly steel.

Motor shares were subjected to heavy selling for high accounts. Hudson was hammered down 2 1-2 points to 49 3-8 but rallied a point at the close. General Motors showed a slight fractional loss at 140 7-8 after having sold down to 139 1-4 and Mark Trucks rallied from a low of 115 to 116 1-4, off 3-4 net. Reports of curtailed operations during the inventory season were a factor in the selling of these shares.

Weakness developed in a number of specialties, particularly some which had been marked up vigorously by pools. Net declines of 2 to nearly 5 points were recorded by Allied Chemical, American Agricultural Chemical preferred, American Ice, Commercial Solvents B, Dupont, Foundation Co., Goodrich preferred, Gold Dust, Gulf States Steel, Motometer A, Panhandle Producers and Refiners, Sloss-Sheffield, South Porto Rican Sugar, Standard Milling and Westinghouse Air Brake.

There were a few independent strong spots scattered through the industrial list. U. S. Cast Iron Pipe rallied over six points to 138 1-2 and then eased to 131 3-4 and United Cigar Stores, Electric Storage Battery, Hayes Wheel, Martin Parry and Union Carbide advanced a point or more while Howe Sound touched a new high at 38 1-8.

The best gains in the railroad group were recorded by Chesapeake & Ohio, Delaware & Hudson and Norfolk & Western. "Nickel Plate" common fell back 3 points on profit-taking.

Commodity markets were mixed. The July option in wheat dropped over 3 cents a bushel at $1.34 3-8 with smaller losses in the more distant contracts. The July cotton option held steady, but the new crop positions sagged 12 to 16 points on favorable weather reports. Raw sugar was unchanged and coffee closed 3 to 20 points net lower.

Call money renewed at 4 1-4 per cent, and was quoted at that rate all day. Time money and commercial paper rates were unchanged.

A decline of over 20 points in Spanish pesetas to around 16.10 cents, reflecting reports of revolutionary disturbances in that country featured the irregular foreign exchange market. Demand sterling was slightly firmer around $4.86 1-4 but French francs sagged a few points to around 2.85 cents. Most of the other continental rates showed small recessions.

BALTIC ACADEMY SENIOR PASS TESTS 100 PERCENT

Mother Francis, superior at the Academy of the Holy Family, Baltic, has recently received an official letter from Franklin Pierce, secondary school inspector for the department of education at Hartford, warmly commending the discipline, the course of study and general work done at the Academy and further stating that the department of education has listed the Holy Family Academy among the better class of public high schools of the state.

This communication came as a result of Mr. Pierce's annual visit of inspection at the Academy during May.

The faculty and senior class of the classical course of the Academy are much gratified over the reports received from the University at Washington, D. C., concerning the affiliated high school examinations taken by all the high school classes during the closing weeks of school.

Out of over 50 individual sets of examination papers submitted by a class of nine seniors, a 100 per cent passing record was reported by the examining board of the university; not a single paper had fallen below the standard set for passing. Among the subjects presented for examination were: Senior Latin, French, English, religion, American history and chemistry.

It is hoped by the Academy faculty that the junior and lower classes, whose reports will be received a little later, will keep good the record set by their sister senior class.

DOZEN OCTOGENARIAN DRIVERS IN ACCIDENTS

The oldest operator involved in a motor vehicle accident in Connecticut last year was 88 years old, according to a table compiled by the state motor vehicle department classifying accidents for the year 1925 according to the ages of the operators. Three operators 85 years old, one 83 years old, one 82 years old, three 81 years old and three 80 years old reported accidents during the year to the state department. The law fixes no maximum age limit.

Operators 20 years old figured most frequently in the motor vehicle accidents reported during 1926, whereas in the previous year operators 21 years old held that record. There were 1,490 accidents chalked up against 20-year-old drivers last year and 1,405 against 21-year-old drivers in the previous year.

Approximately 2,500 people more than 70 years old held licenses to operate motor vehicles in Connecticut last year, and it is estimated that at least that many or the same class are licensed at present in this state. The record does not show that the number of accidents per licensed operator of the more-than-70-years-old class is any greater than that for classes of younger operators. Ten thousand of the Connecticut operators of last year was under 20 years old; 69,183 were between 20 and 30 years old; 76,301 were between 30 and 40 years old; 59,195 were between 40 and 50 years old, 36471 were between 50 and 60 years old and 12,876 were between 60 and 70 years old.

Thirteen of last year's accidents involved cars driven by 15-year-old operators. Operators 16 years old were involved in sixteen accidents and 17-year-old operators figured in forty-nine accidents. Under the state law, no person at any of these ages could legally operate a motor vehicle in Connecticut unless accompanied by an instructor licensed under the Connecticut law. Each case was disposed of on its merits.

DEVICE TO CONNECT ALL POLICE DEPARTMENTS

An electrically operated typewriter giving simultaneous connections between police departments of various cities and towns was inspected and approved Thursday by mayors, police chiefs and police commissioners at a demonstration at the Hartford office of the Southern New England telephone company. Chief Garrett J. Farrell was so impressed with the demonstration he announced he would ask the police commission to have the system installed in Hartford.

The machine is electrically operated so that the operator writing his message on it can broadcast the same message to other machines on the system. The current is obtained from the telephone lines and by use of a call bell one station is able to attract the attention of others. A similar key cuts off communication. Switching keys also enable the operator to send his messages to any one or to several stations selected without others interfering.

The demonstration followed a meeting of the state police association. Those present were guests of the company at dinner. The apparatus has been used by the Chicago police for two years and Philadelphia and Cleveland are considering its installation. The system, if adopted by cities and towns in the state, would link the various police departments by telephone wires without going through the routine of dependance upon the toll operator. In this way news, information and alarms between stations could be sent out through the network of a state-wide police system so that all stations could receive the messages simultaneously. It was brought out that police officials have been seeking a special trunk line for their use and that the typewriter system would be an excellent substitute for it, and a superior method for the catching of criminals. The new system would also give the police a written record of the messages.

The Cost

It was suggested that the Saybrook bridge might be used as one link in the chain of stations and that a receiving set could be installed at the state police barracks. Two types of machines are available, one writing on tape and the other on pages. The latter was said to be more favorable because of the permanency of the paper. The prices are based on population and crime proportion with Hartford, Bridgeport and New Haven paying $125 a month for rental of the page type; Waterbury, $100; New Britain and Stamford $75; Meriden, Danbury, Middletown and Norwich $50; and Manchester and Wallingford $40. The tape type would cost from 30 to 40 per cent less.

HUGE BANKING SCANDAL HAS BEEN UNCOVERED IN ITALY

Twelve Men, All Prominent in Political, Financial and Business Life, Have Been Arrested in Five Cities—Warrants For the Arrest of Ten Others Have Been Issued—The Scandal Resulted From the Alleged Corrupt Handling of the Affairs of the Recently Defunct Agricultural Bank of Parma.

ROME, June 27.—(AP)—The efforts of Secretary-General Tarati of the fascist party, personally backed up by Premier Mussolini, to drive out financial corruption and raise the standards of the political morality of the party have borne sensational fruit in the discovery of a huge banking scandal involving a score of persons high in the party councils under the regime of Robert Farinacci, who Tarati succeeded as secretary-general.

Twelve men, all prominent in political, financial and business life, have been arrested in Parma, Florence, Genoa, Piacenza and Cremona, while warrants for the arrest of ten others have been issued.

The far-reaching significance of the scandal, which concerns primarily the alleged corrupt handling of the affairs of the recently defunct agricultural bank of Parma, is indicated by the fact that one of those arrested is Giambattista Biaggi, Swiss consul general at Genoa. Others under arrest are Count Luigi Lusignani, former president of the bank, who, the police assert, attempted to commit suicide when taken into custody, Professor Alessandro Groppali, of the University of Parma, and Professors Galvi and Ghibellini.

Ugly rumors concerning the bank, which had deposits of $5,000,000 and 20 flourishing branches, originated in the closing of its doors on June 18, after which Signor Turati began an investigation. On the submission of his findings to Mussolini, the premier ordered immediate action, regardless of consequences.

The specific charges against the men under arrest have not been made public, but the immense political importance of the case is pointed out by the semi-official Popolo Di Roma which says that Parma is overjoyed and placarded with posters reading: "The duke's word will prevail. Gentlemen in fascism, thieves in jail."

The paper adds: "Until the arrests, the people believed that nobody dare act against Lusignani, the roots of whose influence were so deep it seemed absurd to try to tear them up."

Although this is the most sensational, it is not the first step that Turati has made to clear up by drastic methods "the difficult local situations" left over, as he puts it, by the Farinacci regime. Many deputies have been expelled or suspended from the party, provincial party directorates have been dissolved in many places, while dozens of representatives of the present administration, with almost unlimited powers, are busy cleaning house throughout the nation.

The purpose of this "moralization campaign," as it is characterized by the official party organs, is not only the elimination of corruption but also the removal of the psychological attitude of extremism, which the government realizes is doing great harm both at home and abroad. Progress to this end, although steady, is slow, and it is rumored that Mussolini is prepared to carry the fight to a finish, even if it is necessary to resort to the drastic expedient of dissolving the party.

Roberto Farinacci, militant fascist leader from Cremona, resigned as secretary general of the fascist party, a post ranking next to Mussolini's leadership, last March after having held that office since February, 1925.

Several reasons were advanced for his resignation which, incidentally, followed immediately upon his having acted as chief of council for Angelo Dumini, one of the defendants in the Matteotti murder trial. Luigi Federzoni, the fascist minister of interior, particularly objected to Farinacci's tactics.

CONGRESS PREPARING TO ADJOURN SATURDAY

WASHINGTON, June 27.—(AP)—With the hope that farm legislation can be disposed of this week, republican leaders of the house and senate are preparing for the adjournment of congress next Saturday.

This program contemplates the postponement until the next and short session of the rivers and harbors bill, coal legislation, the French debt settlement and a number or other matters of importance now on the calendar.

A final vote on the farm relief bill in the senate is looked for by Tuesday and with that idea in view house leaders are leaving Wednesday open for action on whatever measure the senate puts through.

Administration leaders are to press the Fess-Tincher amendment to the house cooperative marketing bill with the hope that President Coolidge's approval of this farm relief plan can swing a majority for this as a substitute for the defeated McNary-Haugen measure.

Leaders of the farm group of the republican side are dissatisfied with this substitute and predict it will be rejected and that the only legislation taht will meet senate approval is the house cooperative marketing bill which was approved by the senate agriculture committee.

After farm legislation is out of the way, the senate will turn its attention to the Dill radio control bill, providing for a separate government commission to control air communication, which was made a special order some days ago.

15 DAY CRUISE FOR THE NAVAL RESERVE UNITS

NEW YORK, June 27.—(AP)—The naval reserve units of the Third Naval District comprising the states of New York, Connecticut, and northern New Jersey will make the annual 15 day training cruise this summer aboard regular navy vessels of the scouting (Atlantic) fleet.

"As in this country the regular personnel is not large enough to man even the ships remaining as the result of the Washington limitation of naval armament treaties," said an official statement issued today, "there is greater than ever need of training reservists. For example, approximately two-thirds of the destroyers are out of commission on account of lack of crews to man them."

"To provide a nucleus for manning a part of these destroyers, naval reserve divisions have been organized into neucleus destroyer crews, each of such neucleus crews consisting of four commissioned officers, 20 petty officers and 63 men."

Three separate 15-day cruises will be made from July 3 to 17, the second from July 24 to August 7 and the third cruise from August 14 to 28.

FATE OF 12 GLOUCESTER FISHERMEN IS UNKNOWN

HALIFAX, N. S., June 27.—(AP)—No word has been received here today from any quarter of the fate of 12 men from the Gloucester fishing schooner Falmouth, abandoned on fire 24 miles of Sable Island last Wednesday. Captain Carlson and eight of his crew managed to reach Sable Island in their small boats, but the others were swallowed up in a dense fog that has shrouded the North Atlantic for five days since the accident, preventing any concerted search.

S. C. H. Harvey, agent for the marine fisheries department here, today expressed the belief that the men might have been picked up by some vessel not able to report them. They were supplied with enough food and water to survive, he pointed out, and if the fog lifts in time they have a fair chance of being rescued.

The Canadian government steamer Aranmore has been held in port ever since the accident, unable to start a search because of the fog.

PONZI REPORTED TO HAVE SAILED FOR SOUTH AMERICA

HOUSTON, Texas, June 27.—(AP)—The whereabouts of Charles Ponzi, fugitive swindler, reported last night to have slipped through Houston and to have sailed for South America remained a mystery tonight.

The erstwhile "financial wizard" who failed to appear last May in superior criminal court in Boston, to be sentenced as a "common and notorious thief," was sought in Houston after a dock worker yesterday told Sheriff T. A. Binford that a man he believed to resemble Ponzi had been seen on the water front.

Officials were unable to add any details to the story today, or could they verify the belief expressed last night that Ponzi might be en route to South America to escape the jurisdiction of both Massachusetts and Florida authorities.

Sheriff Binford referred inquirers to his deputy, George J. Lacy, who insisted he knew nothing of Ponzi's presence in Houston at any time.

The sheriff later said he had sent a telegram to Boston authorities for a description of Ponzi merely "to have it handy if we nabbed him."

WHY WALSH FAILED TO APPEAR IN WORCESTER

WORCESTER, Mass., June 27.—(AP)—Former Senator David I. Walsh, returning tonight from Chicago where he has been in attendance at the eucharistic congress, explained his "unavoidable absence" at the democratic gathering in Worcester last night which had expected him to be present, and to announce his candidacy for the democratic nomination for United States senator.

"In the first place," said Mr. Walsh, "I had no intention of returning from a religious gathering to make political announcements and I did not intend to come to Worcester to make any statement of my candidacy. I would have been glad to have attended the meeting and to speak, however, but the congestion of trains in leaving Chicago made it physically impossible to reach Worcester in time. In the second place I do not see any need of haste in announcement of candidacies when nomination papers need not be filed until August."

ALL UNITS SATISFACTORY EXCEPT THE AVIATION

WASHINGTON, June 27.—(AP)—Generally satisfactory conditions except as to aviation units in the naval reserve of New York, Connecticut, New Jersey, Pennsylvania and the District of Columbia has been reported to Secretary to Secretary Wilbur by Captain Pitt Scott, U. S. N., senior member of an inspection board which has devoted two months to its study in these districts. There are 59 reserve units, about one third of the total strength of the naval reserve, located in the states mentioned.

Reawakened interest, a high state of morale and a degree of efficiency that will make the units "a real asset to the navy" was found by the board. The unsatisfactory condition of aviation development, it was added, was due to lack of suitable armories and air equipment.

The board remarked that it was pleased to note "the general cleanliness and excellant upkeep" of obsolete naval craft used by the reservists.

TWO WHALES IN BATTLE OFF NEW JERSEY COAST

ASBURY, N. J., June 27.—(AP)—A battle between two whales at least 70 feet in length, staged about a half mile out at sea, today was reported by D. D. Bowen of the Deal coast guard station. Bowen said the mammals for a half hour flayed at each other with their tails, rising at times 20 feet out of the water.

A school of 12 whales was sighted a short distance from the beach by coast guardsmen and residents.

Germans Against All Forms of Prohibition

Believe That Legal Restrictions on Personal Freedom Would Lead to Race Demoralization.

EISENACH, Germany, June 27.—(AP)—The conference of German physicians meeting here which included, as well, prominent temperance advocates adopted a resolution today against all forms of prohibition laws, declaring that legal restrictions on personal freedom would lead to race demoralization.

The conference almost unanimously voted in favor of an educational campaign against intemperance by propaganda in the schools, the promotion of sports and the curbing of the treating habit.

The physicians expressed the belief that the Swedish system of governmental control of the sale of liquor was the most noteworthy in the world, but asserted that even it was wrong in principle.

WARNED BY RADIO OF PATH OF HURRICANES

WASHINGTON, June 27.—(AP)—Evolution of a hurricane range finding system by use of radio, barometric pressure charts and weather maps aboard the navy cargo ship Kittery has attracted attention of navy navigators to such an extent that general use of the system by all navigators has been recommended by the department.

Several times the little Kittery, working on the Hampton Roads-West Indian run, has completely escaped storms which did terrific damage to shipping over a wide area, her navigators having spotted the storm path long in advance and either avoided it or put back to port.

The system depends on use of weather bulletins broadcast to mariners by radio twice daily by the Arlington, Va., and San Francisco naval stations. By plotted this data on a weather chart, supplemented by the storm warnings sent out by secondary coastal radio stations, the Kittery, then enroute to the West Indies, evaded a hurricane in August, 1924 which seriously damaged great liners and caused distress to shipping from Haiti to Labrador. The Kittery weather chart showed no safe path for the little vessel and she was prodcuntly headed back to port to lay over one day.

$30,000,000 ON DEPOSIT IN SCHOOL SAVINGS BANKS

NEW YORK, June 27.—(AP)—School boys and girls of the United States now have upward of $30,000,000 on deposit in school savings banks, Arthur H. Chamberlain of San Francisco, chairman on thrift education disclosed the total today in discussing the spread of thrift throughout schools of the nation.

"In the last decade remarkable progress has been made toward planting in the minds of America's younger generation a repugnance for waste and a respect for thrift," said Mr. Chamberlain, who will preside tomorrow at the national congress on thrift, meeting in Philadelphia.

It is in the schools of New England that thrift is most generally taught and most avidly practiced, Mr. Chamberlain disclosed. Throughout the southern states he said, "little attention is given to thrift in the schools."

USED STEAM ROLLERS TO EXTERMINATE JUNE BUGS

STOLP, Pomerania, Germany, June 27.—(AP)—Steamrollers have been used to exterminate June bugs in Pomerania and Mecklenburg. The pests appeared by the billion and even the school children were mobilized for the "June bug war." The children on holiday leave from school, collected the bugs in sacks, being paid one dollar for hundredweight. In the town of Delitzch alone 25 tons of the pugs were "bagged."

Immense damaged has been caused by the bugs and for miles all foliage is gone from the trees. The farmers complain that the plague is getting worse every year owing to the scarcity of artificial fertilizers. The insects breed in stable manue, which is now used almost exclusively instead if nitrate fertilizers. The high cost of nitrate fertilizers makes their general use impossible.

SAYS STATE SHOULD HAVE PLANE FOR AIR POLICE

HARTFORD, June 27.—(AP)—The results of the air police work at the boat races demonstrate the necessity for the state having one or more airplanes of its own, Deputy Aviation Inspector Clarence M. Knox said tonight. "The state cannot go on indefinitely borrowing planes for use in police work." The airplane police at the boat race, consisting of a seaplane borrowed from the coast guard, an airplane borrowed from a civilian flyer and a speed boat borrowed from the coast guard, "worked out beautifully," Captain Knox said. There were no violations of the aviation law although there were a number of private airplanes at the regatta. Captain Knox anticipates the continued increase of airplanes will make air police necessary at future regattas and other events.

EARTHQUAKE AND FIRE IN THE ISLAND OF CRETE

ATHENS, Greece, June 27.—(AP)—A fire which followed an earthquake yesterday caused considerable damage at Candia, Island of Crete, where a number of ancient houses crumbled. An examination is being made to ascertain whether the aqueduct constructed in 1627, which furnishes part of the city's water supply, is seriously damaged.

Insufficient Water In Locomotive Boiler

Caused Wreck at Kingston, R. I., Saturday, Resulting in the Death of Three Men.

PROVIDENCE, June 27.—(AP)—Statements were issued here tonight by Attorney General Charles P. Sisson and State Boiler Inspector Epher W. Farmer, to the effect that the explosion of the freight engine boiler which caused the wreck at Kingston yesterday morning, involving the death of three men and the derailment of the Cape Codder, was apparently due to insufficient water in the boiler of the Locomotive and resultant overheating.

The attorney general stated that this condition was apparently not caused by any structural defect of the boiler. Inspector Farmer said that in one place on top of the fire box the crown sheet appeared to be strained and thinned down from one eighth to three sixteenths of an inch for a length of three feet, but that such a thinning may have ben due to the strain of the explosion.

Engineer Fraser and Fireman Bennett of the Cape Codder, who are at the Westerly hospital, were reported tonight to be in a critical condition.

Both tracks at Kingston torn up by the wreck were clear for traffic early today. As one track is reserved for operations of wrecking crews, however, passenger trains are being delayed from 20 minutes to half an hour.

Railroad police continued today to forbid any approach to the scene of the wreck by spectators or newspapermen. The barring of newspapermen was said to be the first instance of such action in connection with a wreck in Rhode Island.

SUFFRAGE SOCIETIES TO PARADE IN LONDON JULY 3

LONDON, June 27.—(AP)— Dame Millicent Wawcett, the 79-year-old president-ameritus of the national union of suffrage societies, will march in the great parade British women are to hold July 3 to agitate for universal suffrage for English women on the same terms as men.

It will be a very different parade from that which Mrs. Fawcett headed a quarter of a century ago when British women for the first time held a monster demonstration in London, since referred to as "the mud march."

The weather conditions were terrible and the crowds hissed and hooted the suffragettes as they passed through the streets lined by men and boys and even hostile women.

These pioneers paraded in their oldest and shabbiest gowns. That was before women had demonstrated their loyalty and effectiveness in the great war and had made such progress in educating the British public to believe that women must have political recognition.

MAE MURRAY TAKES UNTO HERSELF FOURTH HUSBAND

BEVERLEY HILLS, Calif., June 27.—(AP)—Mae Murray, the "merry widow" of the films, today married her prince charming—David Bivaini, a native of the republic of Georgia.

The ceremony, one of utmost simplicity, was performed this afternoon in a church here but the particular one in which the wedding took place, the actress would not divulge. Rudolph Valentino, screenland's shiek, was best man, while Pola Negri, under whose wing Hollywood's latest romance developed, was maid of honor.

There will be no wedding trip as the bride is said to be engaged in making a picture which will prevent her leaving the city.

Bivaini, now a film actor, is reputed to have been a prince in what is now the republic of Georgia. He also is reputed wealthy. He is 27 years old and his marriage was his first trip to the altar.

Miss Murray, 33 years old, has been married four times. Her last husband was Robert Z. Leonard, the director.

The couple met three weks ago at a party given by Pola Negri. They obtained a marriage license last Friday, while Bivaini was taking Miss Murray to the doctor for treatment of injuries she received during a recent fall.

CAILLAUX WOULD RE-OPEN CREDITS IN U. S. FOR FRANCE

Finance Minister Believes That the Debt Agreement Should Not Be Presented For Ratification Until the Ground Has Been Cleared—Caillaux Considers Settlement of Foreign Debts Must Be Made For the Stabilization of the Franc.

PARIS, June 27.—(AP)—Before M. Caillaux, the new finance minister, presents to the parliament the question of ratification of the Mellon-Berenger agreement on the France-American debt, new conversations will likely be initiated at Washington.

While the semi-official statement on the subject is most guarded in that it specifies the new conversations would deal largely with the question of reopening credits in the United States to assist in the stabilization of the franc, the majority opinion is that the vexatious matter of article 7 of he accord would also be probed and that the man selected for the probing would be M. Boisanowski, former reporter general of the budget and one of M. Caillaux's collaborators at the attempt at settlement last year.

M. Caillaux, it is represented in quarters close to the new ministry, considers regulations of the debts to the United States and England as the first step in any programme for the stabilization of the franc.

He is also represened as a partisan of the Mellon-Berenger accord, but in view of the objections certain to be raised in parliament to the terms as they now stand, the finance minister is understood to believe that the accord should not be presented for ratification until the ground has been cleared, particularly with regard to the probability of reopening credits. Thus until some formal exchanges have taken place the agreement which M. Berenger brought back to Paris is likely to lie untouched on the finance minister's desk.

13 DEATHS ON BAY STATE HIGHWAYS LAST WEEK

WILLIMANTIC ICE DEALERS PRAY FOR HOT WEATHER

(Special to the Bulletin)

WILLIMANTIC, June 27—Local ice dealers are complaining of finding direct opposites in the months of June 1925 and June 1926. Last year the icemen did a flourishing business and throughout the entire summer which was one of the best for them in many years. In fact an ice shortage was at hand before the season closed. This year the ice houses in this section are all well filled but the stock remains "on the shelf" as it were. The ice dealers fear that unless Old Sol does his summer stuff and does it quick the season will close with not much business done and the ice houses still partly filled.

WILLIMANTIC TO OBSERVE INDEPENDENCE WEEK

(Special to the Bulletin)

WILLIMANTIC, June 27—The echo of the ringing of the great Liberty bell by the president at 11:11 a. m. this Monday forenoon will be heard here in the sounding of the fire and church bells in the city, according to a proclamation issued Saturday by Mayor John C. Tracy, in designating American Independence week. Citizens are asked to pause for a moment as a salute to the great emblem of peace and security, the Stars and Stripes. And there will be many who in gratitude will offer a silent prayer for the 150 years of independence which the nation has enjoyed. In addition to having the bells rung, and the manufactory whistles sounded, Mayor Tracy has asked that flags be displayed wherever possible.

The extensive Dion property which came into possession of Roderick G. Dion two and one half years ago upon the death of his father, the late Mayor Hormisdas Dion and which went into bankruptcy a few months ago was sold at auction last week to Frank Press of Jackson street, this city, With W. H. Wakelee as auctioneer and several bidders present the sale started in parcel lots on conditions. The estate as a whole was then put up and went to Mr. Press. The successful bidder secured all the property, consisting of a two-story frame building at 36 Ash street with a store on the first floor and apartment on the second. There are buildings attached which contain store rooms, garage, large barn, a complete bakery shop and cottage at 26 Ash street. Referee in Bankruptcy Louis A. Woisard of Danielson stated that the real estate brought $4,175 and stock $1,345. The sale took in the mortgages on the property of $12,450 making the total purchase price $15,820. Mr. Press states that other purchases made by him have brought his purchase figure very close to $20,000.

Mr. Press' new purchase is generally considered most desirable property. It has a frontage of 165 feet and a depth of 190 feet. The buildings were erected by the late Hormisdas Dion and on the premises he conducted a successful grocery business for 35 years. Upon his death while serving this city a smayor, the property reverted to his family. His son, Roderick G. Dion, who had been conducting a bakery business on the premises disposed of this to enter the grocery field vacated by his father. Local industrial conditions were to blame for the fact that a few months ago he filed a voluntary petition in bankruptcy. The real estate of the Dion property was listed at $9,000 on the grand list of 1925. According to the referee in bankruptcy the revenue from the sale of the property by auction will net the creditors about forty per cent. Mr. Press, who has resided in this city for about 30 years and conducts a grocery store in another section of the city states that he will either conduct or lease the grocery store at 36 Ash street.

The other case, involving a charge against Joseph Sedeski of 19 Valley street, was nolled. Due to the inability of one of the defendant's attorneys to appear in court, Brettschneider's case was continued on recommendation of Prosecuting Attorney Harry S. Gaucher. In the Sedeski case Captain of Police Frank McLean testified that upon raiding the home on the night of June 18 he caught the accused emptying the contents of a glass jar into the sink. Using a cloth the officer sopped up the liquid which had an odor similar to that of liquor. Sedeski asserted through his attorney that his wife had just finished cleaning pickle jars from last year and that the liquid the officers had obtained was nothing more than pickle drainings. DEATH IN DANIELSON OF MRS. JOSEPHINE FRANKLIN

(Special to the Bulletin)

DANIELSON, June 27—Mrs. Josephine Maine Franklin, wife of Vine R. Franklin, died at 9.30 Saturday evening at her home on Academy St. Mrs. Franklin had been seriously ill the past seven weeks and her death was not unexpected by those familiar with the seriousness of her condition but her passing came as a shock to her many friends here and in Brooklyn, where the great majority of her many and fruitful years were spent.

Mrs. Franklin came of Colonial stock, and one learns from the genealogy of her family that her ancestors settled in Stonington as early as 1629, only six years after the Mayflower discharged its brave band of men and women on Plymouth Rock. Continuously from that time up to the recent past descendants of her hardy and valiant ancestors have lived in Stonington and her father was a native of that place, its name secure in the annals of the early history of the nation.

Mrs. Franklin was born in Hampton, May 9, 1848, a daughter of Daniel and Lucy Hutchins Maine. Her parents removed to Brooklyn during her very early years and it was in that community that her rudimentary education was obtained, this supplemented later by a course of study in the schools of Danielson and still further by application of her mind to selected pursuing of many lines of knowledge.

Soon after his return from the war, in which he served from 1863 to the close of the great Civil conflict in 1865, Mrs. Franklin was married to Vine R. Franklin, who was a member of Company K, 21st Connecticut Volunteer Infantry. They made their home in Brooklyn for nearly half a century after their marriage, then coming to Danielson, where, in association with his son-in-law, Henry D. Crosby, Mr. Franklin has been and still is engaged in business.

Mrs. Franklin leaves her husband, a respected member of the G. A. R., a daughter, Mrs. H. D. Crosby, two grandsons, Franklin and John Crosby, and a sister, Mrs. Ina Keech, all of Danielson.

Mrs. Franklin was a member of the Brooklyn Congregational church, a charter member Dr Brooklyn grange and of the Woman's Relief corps. Her passing removes a woman who held the universal love and respect of the people of Brooklyn and Danielson.

CAUGHT RUNNING BOOZE INTO TOWN OF PLAINFIELD

(Special to the Bulletin)

DANIELSON, June 27—Sam Small, who may come from New York, but who was driving a coupe with a Connecticut registration when he was picked up in Plainfield Friday night by State Officer Nolan of the Danielson barracks, languished in Brooklyn jail during Sunday, awaiting some one of his friends who might appear, out of New Haven, and pay a fine of $200 and costs imposed upon him for illegal transportation of intoxicants.

Small was presented before Judge Torrey in the Plainfield town court Saturday and was fined $200 and costs. As he was without money to meet the assessments he was taken to Brooklyn jail and locked up.

Small had 30 cases of real beer in his car when he was apprehended by Officer Nolan. He was driving a small coupe that has one or those exaggerated rear compartments, the type that would contain the twenty suit cases that any couple might take on a week end trip and still leave room for half a ton of coal.

Twenty-nine of the cases of beer were in the compartment at the rear of the car and the one additional case that caused Small all the trouble in the front of the car with him. A laboratory test on Saturday developed the fact that the beer contained about 3.56 per cent. of alcohol, which is far and away above the one-half of one per cent. limit allowed as non-intoxicating under the Volstead act. The small car is at the state police barracks here awaiting the appearance of some of small's friends, willing to pay what it will cost to get him out of jail. The beer has been confiscated. The car has not.

Disregard of Christian modesty in dress came in for unreserved scoring at all the masses at St. James' church on Sunday by the pastor, Rev. Joseph Deschaux. M. S. Fr. Deschaux addressed his remarks to the women of his congregations. No woman who heard what he had to say—be they young or old, married or unmarried—could mistake the intent and purpose and teachings of the Roman Catholic church as to what the church expects and commands, at least as to attending divine service in proper garb. Fr. Deschaux did not spare words, nor mince them.

Imperfect man could not disagree with anything the pastor said. There are limitations to everything. In this day of frenzied exhibitions of any personal charm that they may possess by women—married and unmarried—it is little wonder that both men and women go wrong, or have inclinations to do so, under the stress of an absurd drive to leave absolutely nothing at all to the imagination or to the future. The sermon of Sunday may cause some to pause if it does not check the pageant of near nudity.

The average person has seen a million For Sale signs, more or less, in the course of any limited number of years, but the average person has not seen a For Sale sign where one may see one today in a community not so far from Danielson. As it is against practice and good business to give away advertising, The Bulletin may not be more specific this morning than it is going to be in mentioning a little matter that is of passing interest.

Hundreds of motorists who rode through this territory Sunday might have taken as a warning, been shocked a bit, or, if they were so inclined, smiled a bit, knowing what the end of all life must be, to gaze upon a "For Sale" sign tacked upon the back of a hearse that must have served its purpose—and finished the job—some twenty years ago.

The hearse is a real old-timer—one of the type that horses used to draw in conveying on their final ride—prior to their obtaining wings—such sundry persons as passed out of this existence in the countryside where it was kept.

It looks incongruous when one mentally compares it with the elaborate motor-driven hearses of today. It is set up on springs intended to ease jolting on that one last ride, and must have been regarded as the last word in such construction in the good old days.

And that's that. Today it stands out in a yard beside a state highway with that "For Sale" sign attached to it. One may well imagine what a customer—a buyer— might do with it. No undertaker will buy it, that's assured. Such business men have to keep their equipment up-to-date. They couldn't use it.

That's of passing interest. One can imagine the salvage man looking over this gruesome relic with an eye to profit. There's good glass in the sides, enough to make several windshields or side windows for a closed car. The glass is worth money. The wheels are not so bad—someone might use them. There are other parts to that hearse that would appeal to a man who figures everything in terms of money and who has no qualms or superstitions, being driven onward in his quest for wealth by the motto "is there a profit in it?" and wondering betimes, who will spend his money, he knowing that he will never loosen up enough to spend more than a fraction of it.

All of this means that there is a customer for this hearse—maybe a dozen. It has been said that nothing goes to waste in the course of time And that is well. The hearse will interest a few as buyers, a multitude of those who just look and contemplate.

Mrs. Emma L. Wood, widow of Nehemiah J. Wood, died late Saturday night at the Day Kimball hospital, where she had been a patient for some time. Mrs. Wood, prior to entering the hospital, had been living with her sister, Mrs. Lucy Hopkins, and Charles Rounds, her brother-in-law, at North Sterling.

Mrs. Wood was born in Killingly, July 6, 1849, a daughter of Charles and Lucy Chase Young. Besides her sister, Mrs. Hopkins, leaves a brother, Charles Young of South Killingly, and the following nephews and nieces Vincent, Mildred and Frank Young of Providence; Kenneth and Bessie Young of Boston, Clarence Hopkis of Washigto, R. I., Mrs. L. E. Young of Danielson, Mrs. Ellen Burgess of Danielson, Mrs. Raymond Humes of Danielson, Hollis, Stephen, Charles, Jr., and Lilly May Young of South Killingly, Truman and Roy Young of Terryville and Miss Evelyn Soule of Norwich.

Miss Helen Nash, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Nash of this place and Elmer Elliott Ellsworth of Willimantic are to be married here today. Miss Nash is a graduate of Killingly High school and the Willimantic Normal school and has since been engaged in teaching.

Heavy rain during a part of Saturday afternoon slowed down the motor traffic so that there was the dividend of no accidents and the absence of accidents also was noted during such a beautiful day as Sunday, in this immediate territory.

Train schedules were a bit disrupted here Saturday morning owing to the wreck of the express Cape Codder at Kingston, R. I., as told elsewhere in this issue.

Mrs. Anna F. Herr, wife of Wilson F. Herr, died at her home in Canterbury on Saturday following a short illness. Mrs. Herr was born in Salona, Pa. July 8, 1873. She is survived by her husband and six children.

In compliance with the wishes of the committee Mr. Boulais said that wherever possible he would buy materials in Putnam and give preference to Putnam citizens in the work on the building.

Members of Quinebaug lodge, A. F. and A. M. attended services at the Second Congregational church Sunday morning at the invitation of the pastor, Rev. James F. English. It was St. Johns' day and the trend of the sermon was appropriate to the occasion.

At a meeting to be held Monday evening at the chamber of commerce rooms, plans will be perfected for the celebration on July 4th of the 100th anniversary of the death of Thomas Jefferson and of the 150th anniversary of the nation which he helped to found and whose declaration of independence he wrote.

The first meeting was held Friday evening presided over by Byron D. Bugbee, one of the commissioners named by Governor Trumbull for the Jefferson Centennial celebration. H. H. Ellis was secretary.

The heads of the following fraternal organizations were named as part of a general committee to arrange for the affair: Putnam lodge, I. O. O. F., Carl Weeks; Quinebaug lodge of Masons, Charles Richardson; Putnam Lodge of Elks, A. Newton Vaughn; Order of Eagles, Joseph Larrow; Knights of Columbus, Armand Montville; Order of Rebekahs, Mrs. E. H. Burt; Eastern Star, Mrs. H. S. Whipple; St. Jean de Baptiste, Origs Touchette.

An educational committee was named consisting of Rev. Fr. Routhier, Ralph C. Jenkins, superintendent of schools and H. H. Ellis, director of the State Trade school.

Mr. Burbee explained the purpose of the meeting, that it was to be part of a nation wide tribute to the memory of the man who wrote the Declaration of Independence, who had died July 4th, 1826, fifty years after it was signed, proclaiming to all the world that the United States of America were, and of right ought to be, a free and independent government.

At this meeting it was decided that all the bells of the city would be rung on Monday morning at eleven minutes after eleven o'clock, an echo of the ringing of the Liberty bell. Mayor Chapdelaine will sound the first peal, and Ralph E. Thurston will direct this feature of the observance.

WESTERLY

WESTERLY RENDERED ALL AID POSSIBLE TO INJURED

(Special to the Bulletin)

WESTERLY, R. I., June 27—The average Westerly resident who attempted on Saturday and Sunday to gain a view of the twisted mass of wreckage resulting from the railroad crash between a New Bedford to New Haven bound freight train and the Cape Cod passenger express eastbound, in the Great Swamp, a mile and a half west of the Kingston, R. I. station, found that the nearest point that they could reach was a mile to the westward and a mile and a half to the eastward. A force of New Haven railroad police stopped the curious and no one was allowed to proceed without a pass.

The first news of the railroad disaster, even greater than the terrible Bradford wreck of April 17th, 1916, to a request from railroad officials to a request from Railroad officials to have ambulances in readiness at the Westerly station of the New Haven railroad to transport injured passengers to the Westerly hospital. Later this request was modified when two railroad trainmen, who were injured, were reported on the way to Westerly to be cared for at the Westerly hospital. The ambulance of the Westerly Sanitary corps with Charles D. Maxson and W. Harry Anderson was soon at the westbound station shelter. Rev. Fr. J. F. Vincent of the Immaculate Conception church was also present, having been summoned.

It was not long before the locomotive with three baggage cars of the second section of train No. 82, the first section of which was the "Cape Codder" on its first eastbound trip of the season, was reported as backing up and passing Bradford and giving the "hurry up sign." In the baggage car on a stretcher was the Cape Codder Fireman Andrew Bennett, 29, of 210 Crown street, New Haven, badly injured with severe burns over his back and left side with fractured and crushed pelvis. He was placed in the ambulance at 6:15 a. m. Engineer Chester Frazier, 40, of 1298 State street, New Haven, sat on a pile of paper with a blanket about him, suffering from a wrenched back and minor injuries. He was able in a gritty manner to let himself down the short iron ladder at the baggage car door and was assisted to the ambulance. Both mene were soaking wet, their clothes saturated with water. Dr. Edward E. Kenyon of Kingston, R. I., accompanied the injured men in the baggage car to Westerly. At the Westerly hospital they were attended by Dr. Michael H. Scanlon, Westerly railroad surgeon. During the day numerous false reports were prevalent in Westerly to the effect that many injured passengers were at the Westerly hospital, but fortunately none of the passengers of the Express train received more than minor injuries, and slight ones at that.

The Kingston wreck was the cause of much inconvenience in Westerly on Saturday. Metropolitan daily newspapers did not arrive until late in the morning; mails at the Westerly post office, both arriving and departing were irregular; milk was not accepted at the Westerly railroad station for transportation to Providence, nor was cream or ice cream shipped by railroad from Providence to Westerly and baggage was accepted only on the understanding of delayed transportation. The American Railway Express company received two motor truck shipments of express matter from Providence. One Westerly merchant called up a Providence associate and their trucks met at Washington village, R. I., for transhipment. Summer people for local seashore resorts experienced considerable delay, one woman stating that she was going to return to New London then go to Block Island. Soon after 12 o'clock noon on Saturday, a shuttle train from New London to Westerly discharged its passengers at the Westerly station, where two big Mooney motor busses took the passengers over the new cement state highway by way of Nooseneck hill to Providence, as far as Hope Valley and then by way of Usquepaug, R. I., to Kingston station, where they boarded a steam train for Providence.

A passenger from New York who left the Cape Cod express at the Westerly station on Saturday morning was Edward Miller of Pawcatuck and also another unidentified individual. Dr. Kenyon of Kingston was unable to catch the New Haven railroad officials' special train for the Kingston wreck or Saturday morning to return to his home, the special slowing down at the Westerly station only long enough to secure wire coils to tap in on telephone lines in the Kingston swamp. The Midway wrecker, proceeding to the Kingston wreck was flagged at the Westerly tower and Dr. Kenyon returned to Kingston on this train.

Mrs. Hannah Coyle, of 258 Temple street, New Haven, who came to Westerly to see her brother-in-law, Fireman Andrew Bennett at the Westerly hospital, collapsed as she entered the building and it was necessary for her to be given medical attention. Westerly Station Agent Earl S. Bavier, not only visited the injured trainmen at the Westerly hospital, but tendered relatives of the injured railroad employees, every facility for their comfort at his command and also telegraphed relatives the condition of the injured.

It was reported that the first train by the wreck at Kingston did not pass until after 3 p. m. on Saturday night, later the two tracks being in operation and passing trains proceeded only at a speed of five miles per hour. On Saturday morning after the three bagage cars had arrived at Westerly with the injured trainmen, the rest of the train was brought to Westerly, recoupled and proceeded to Providence with a locomotive on the front end, three coaches, five sleepers and the three baggage cars with following locomotive attached, going to Groton, up the valley to Norwich and then by way of Plainfield to Providence.

Sunday morning the New Haven wrecker passed the Westerly station for Kingston shortly after eight o'clock, followed by the Midway wrecker at 9 o'clock. It was planned to have a switch or crossover installed at each end of the wreck area and while the wreckers were at work on the other track, train movement could be maintained during the day.

Following a custom adopted a year ago Judge Albert E. Hamlin of the court of common pleas of Litchfield county, Conn., entertained a number of Connecticut judges at a dinner on Saturday night at 7 o'clock at the Weekapaug inn, Weekapaug beach. The original party planned was to include ten guests, but due to the Kingston railroad wreck on the New Haven road and to court appointments, many of the guests were unable to attend. Those present included Waterbury District Court Judge Walter D. Makepeace of Waterbury; Deputy Judge Harry J. Beardsley, also of Waterbury and Associate Justice Arthur E. Howard, Jr., New Haven, of the common pleas court of Hartford county.

The annual observance of Children's day by the Sabbath school of the Sabbath school of the Pawcatuck Seventh-day Baptist church was held Saturday morning at 10:30 o'clock in the church auditorium, taking the place of the morning church service. The church was decorated with wild and garden flowers. In charge of the observance was Miss Emma Crandall assisted by a choir of the Misses Martha Burdick, Emily Barber, Betty Whitford, Dorcas Austin, Harris Browning, Theodore S. Whitford and Donald Whitford, and Miss Emma Crandall acted as organist.

The following was the program:

Baccalaureate sermon before the graduating class of the Westerly high school was delivered by the rector, Rev. G. Edgar Tobin at Christ Episcopal church on Sunday afternoon at 3 o'clock. Led by the choir, the 50 seniors marched to the reserved seats at the front of the church, marked by ribbons of the class colors of crimson and grey. The graduates for the first time wore caps and gowns.

Rev. Tobin took for his text "The Fear of the Lord is the Beginning of Knowledge." The musical program was in charge of the church chorister Mrs. Florence V. Larkin.

The suggestion has been offered that some method should be devised for immediately informing the many thousands who line the Thames river course during the Yale-Harvard boat race as to which crew won the race. The suggestion is a good one.

According to at least one estimate there were 70,000 who viewed the varsity race from shore, boat or observation trains. There were those who were in a position to see which crew was actually ahead as they crossed the line and others remembered which lane had been picked by the respective crews, but there were thousands who actually saw the contest and yet did not know for hours afterwards which crew had won.

There was a time some years ago when there was a signal raised on the railroad bridge indicating to all who could see it, or who passed, which crew was victorious but that was abandoned some years ago. In a runaway race, or for those who can assemble at the finish or watch the race from the trains the information may not be necessary, but when the contest is close or when it is observed from a point along the banks or from one of the hundreds of boats beside the course it is impossible to do any more than guess at the result. Those hundreds of miles away from the course knew before many who actually saw the race what the outcome was.

The raising of a large crimson or blue flag according to the winner at each end of the course would meet the situation admirably. Most any device that would convey the information that is desired would suffice. It may be argued that inasmuch as there is no admission fee to see the race that there is no call to serve the interested public in this respect, and strictly speaking that is so, but none is more interested in getting this very information than the graduates and friends of the two universities and they are not an inconsiderable part of the thousands of spectators who are eager for early and correct information.

HOARDED MONEY

A legal battle is promised over the disposition of $38,000 in gold and paper money found in an old chest, a mattress and a money belt worn by a 73 year old woman recluse whose death occurred recently.

Presumably it will be some time before this legal battle will be decided, but it would have been a prompt and disastrous decision had flames by chance got the opportunity to determine the disposition of that small fortune.

This brings to light another one of those instances where persons are ready to take great chances with their wealth by hoarding it in secret hiding places which may seem secure to them but which would be food for flames in case of fire and too often is the bait of robbers when suspicion spreads stories about hoarded gold.

The danger of having such a sum quickly wiped out by fire, or of having it stolen by those who may be ready to commit murder in their quest for such loot apparently doesn't enter the mind of the owner, or if it does it arouses little fear. But aside from those dangers there is the economic mistake that is being made. The hidden funds, stored away for no one knows how many years, would have produced a good income had it been placed at interest in a savings bank or otherwise invested in good securities, and yet that recluse probably had daily visions of going to the poorhouse.

This isn't the first instance where just such a wrong policy has been followed. It isn't the first case where money has been found tucked away under the eaves, back of pictures, in boxes and other hiding places after persons have died, but too frequently just such persons have been the victims of violence to say nothing of their lives of needless hardship and exclusiveness and then to end in being the cause for a long legal battle of others. The distressing part of these cases is that the persons themselves cannot see the deprivations which they are suffering from which they gain nothing, not even the gratitude of those who fight over what they leave, when they might as well have enjoyed life like other people and have accomplished more with their money and put it to good use when they were through with it. Such lives are excellent examples of what not to do.

UNLICENSED DRIVERS

Frequently is it the case that persons are arrested for driving autos without possessing a driver's license. Some even have never had their cars registered. Recklessness occasionally brings these cases to attention and at other times the disclosure comes through an accident. This does not include those who forget to transfer their license from one coat to another but those who are actually dodging the state law.

When such cases get before a court there is invariably a fine imposed much in excess of the fee required under observance of the law, so that the chance taking is invariably expensive. But still the number of chance takers is large and when it is estimated by the registrar of motor vehicles in Massachusetts that they total as many as 15,000 of the 700,000 drivers in that state, it is a commendable move in behalf of highway safety when he opens a campaign for the corralling of the unlicensed drivers.

His method of doing this was to have all drivers stopped during a certain hour of the day for the examination of their papers. The day and the time were not made public in advance. It is not to be supposed that all of the 700,000 drivers were under inspection during that designated hour but large numbers of them were and some of the unlicensed drivers were caught. With the expectation that such examinations can be anticipated most any time added reason will confront the unlicensed driver to obey the law and avoid trouble instead or continuing to take chances.

When it comes to paying the registration and license fees all auto auto owners are supposed to toe the mark. It is thus quite proper that the registrar of motor vehicles should be alert to see that they do. Even though it is estimated that there is only about one unlicensed driver to every 50 auto drivers that one is too many. Such drivers mean no good to the other highway users. They are tax dodgers of the worst kind and in addition too many of them create conditions which are highly dangerous. If they are unable to pass the examination or unwilling to pay the license fee they should not be allowed to drive. Registrar Goodwin has the right idea.

FOREST FIRE CONTROL

Whether any direct results come from the forest fire conference held at Hartford last week depends upon the next general assembly. There was an interesting presentation of the situation and the problems to be met. It was also set forth how an important beginning might be made in meeting the forest fire situation. Certainly it cannot be relieved by ignoring it.

For a couple of decades this state has been striving to control forest fires. It is not an easy job. It takes men, equipment and time and it all involves expense. Lookouts to report fires and organizations to respond have done much to keep down the losses, but the inadequacy of the forest fighting force and equipment is easily shown. It furnishes the reason for the recommendation to have the state forestry department ask the general assembly to authorize the purchase of fire fighting equipment to the value of $30,000 and biennially appropriate $70,000 for maintenance.

That is one thing that the state can do, but when it is shown that the past spring was one of the worst fire seasons on record it is easily understood that there is much opportunity for preventive work, and that work rests to a large degree upon the people. Fire equipment isn't going to do it, but just as long as there is a failure or refusal to stop starting fires there is going to be an increasing demand for forest fire control funds. The various agencies that are responsible for the forest fires can do much if they will to keep down the fires, but there are times when they seem to have no interest in such a thing. It is then that relief is sought in other directions and relief, as well as the fires is invariably expensive.

THE RETURN OF CAILLAUX

Caillaux is back. This is the second time that he has enjoyed the elation of being recalled to distinguished service after his downfall. He isn't in the role of premier at this time, and it isn't expected that he will make a visit to this country, but he has been given the important post of minister of finance in Briand's new cabinet and vested with unusual authority, and it remains to be seen what he is going to do with it and whether he is going to be able to straighten out the financial tangle that has bothered that country too long.

One endeavor to break up the political activities in France was not successful. Whether he has profited by his experiences and the failures of others remains to be disclosed. Caillaux wasn't the first choice for the post, but if was made necessary by conditions which existed in that country today. He has control in certain directions and that influence is needed to get action.

Whether his choice encourages or discourages the debt adjustment with this country is among the uncertainties. He will have to depart somewhat from some of his previous views if it does, although conditions at the present time may make that possible. We are directly interested therein, although we are of course desirous that France should put its finances in order as quickly as possible, but no greater help might be anticipated than the disclosure of its real attitude toward the debt payment.

EDITORIAL NOTES

The griddle cakes may be gone for a few months, but there are the clam fritters to take their place.

Some who have tried have found that even this June the sun is capable of providing a good sunburn.

The man on the corner says: How many young Americans know what celebration comes a week from today?

Perhaps one of the best ways to show the value of Briand to France is to let some one else try to organize a cabinet.

Now that hundreds of tourists are visiting the battlefields of the Riff, the next trip will probably be to Syria and China.

If you are planting your garden just for exercise it doesn't make any difference what the response is or how many times it has to be planted over.

WOMAN IN LIFE AND IN THE KITCHEN

SUGGESTIONS FOR THE HOUSEWIFE

The water in which potatoes have been boiled is excellent for sponging soiled silk.

Boiled water poured on fruit stains will remove them as if by magic.

Wicker furniture scrubbed with salt and water (no soap) will look as nice and fresh as when new.

To exclude flies put a piece of screen wire over the top of chimneys and ventilation flues.

To avoid cleaning a bread board, roll out biscuit dough on white wrapping paper.

A coat of white wash is a valuable disinfectant. It preserves food, and if properly prepared, is a fire retardant.

To keep bath enamel in good condition always put in a little cold water first. Exceedingly hot water is likely to make it crack and peel off.

If labels on cans are put on with rubber bands the labels can be changed as often as the container is filled with a different material.

To remove whitewash from a ceiling dissolve one pound of alum in one gallon of strong vinegar. Apply with brush, let soak in well, and scrape and wash as usual.

To economize on laundry, use as center pieces paper napkins of the dinner size. They are substantial and last for several meals. They come folded in packages.

To prevent marmalade from graining, do not boil it too fast, and take it off the stove directly that a little of it jellies on a cold plate. Be careful that you have pure sugar for this and all preserves.

To prevent the confusion which often takes place in drawers as a result of opening and shutting them, use boxes in them, omitting the covers. Men's sock boxes are good for this purpose.

If your clothes catches fire you will only make matters worse by running, as running fans the fire. The best thing to do is to wrap yourself at once in some heavy material and roll on the floor. This smothers the fire.

Never dry shoes over a register or any strong heat. They may dry more quickly, but the leather will be made hard and stiff. If shoes are wet stuff them with tissue paper and let them dry in the sun or if the sun is not shining let them dry in a warm room.

MILK AND FRESH VEGETABLES

The days of "plenty of milk and eggs" are gone forever. Plenty of milk and fresh vegetables is the modern slogan for children's diets. Green vegetables are fully as important builders as any of the so-called "strength foods."

SAW-EDGED THE BEST

The saw-edged bread knife is easier to handle when cutting fresh bread and is a great deal less likely to cause a bad cut should it accidentally skid.

MINUS THE "CANNY" TASTE

When using canned beans or peas, turn them into a saucepan and hold the pan under water faucet. Allow the water to change slowly until clear and without foam. Then they will be ready to heat.

HEALTH AND BEAUTY

Begin training your babies in sound habit formation early. Many desirable habits can be established during the first three months of life.

For oily skins a simple mixture of cedar parts of glycerin and rose water makes an excellent powder base. Glycerin, used without being diluted, has a tendency to make the skin dry and yellow, but if used in the way suggested here it has no superior as a softening and mildly bleaching lotion.

Real liver spots are due to internal conditions and are usually too deep to be removed by external applications. You might try a mild bleaching lotion for them, but you should also have medical advice. Glycerin is too drying if used without being diluted. Use equal parts of glycerin and rose water. This lotion has bleaching properties also.

Local treatments for checking excessive perspiration include thorough cleansing of the affected areas daily and bathing with a special lotion. There are a number of reliable preparations sold for this purpose. They depend for their effects on such astringents as salycilic acid, tannic acid and alum. A simple lotion for the purpose is made of 3 ounces of alcohol to 2 drams of tannic acid. Another is composed of 4 ounces of witch hazel and 1 dram beta-naphthol. After the lotion has dried an astringent powder may be dusted on the palms and feet.

KEEP A CHARITY BOX

A charity box or drawer should find a place in every house. Into it should be put all discarded toys, old clothes, outgrown children's things and all the numerous odds and ends which are not wanted. If the things accumulate too quickly there is always some church or organization that will welcome them gladly for its rummage sale.

WHITE SHOES BACK

The sweet girl graduate is now swarming over the shoe shops and in nine cases out of ten is buying white shoes for her grand event. But she does not buy white stockings to go with them. The more vivid flesh tints are taboo, but the oyster white hose and those which have a mere hint of rosy pink are chosen.

EASY PORCH CLEANING

One housewife gives her porch a scrubbing on wash day by throwing over it the cleaner suds after the clothes are hung on the line. Then the rinse water is thrown over it and swept off with a broom. She says it is as effective as when done by a scrubbing brush and certainly is an easier method on a cold day.

POLISHING OAK

A mixture of bees wax and turpentine is excellent for oak furniture. Take care to rub with the grain, using an old silk handkerchief for the final polishing.

BETTER PUDDING

Put the milk pudding into a cold oven and let the oven heat gradually with the milk. If put into a very hot oven it is apt to cause the milk to curdle.

DICTATES OF FASHION

Very wide balloon sleeves are seen on the new frocks in soft materials, but they are closely confined at the wrists.

The very large leghorn hat is often trimmed with a single flower or with a bow of velvet ribbon in pink, blue or orchid tones.

The scarf or shawl of brocaded metal cloth or of lame is the popular accessory for the evening gown. Often these are gorgeously fringed.

The vogue of black and white effects is emphasized in coats and capes of heavy black satin lined with white satin and trimmed with black and white monkey fur.

The bolero idea is gaining in favor and is particularly liked in evening attire. When it partly reveals a wide girdle of gem-studded silk or satin it is at its best.

Never have bows been so important as today, they are apt to be found at any point on the afternoon or evening gown, but usually defining a sash that ties directly in front.

The nude stockings still is in full sway, but the pastel shades in the crepe and chiffon frocks are demonstrating that the nude stocking possesses a tinge of the same distinguishing color.

Most attractive sports dresses are of Chinese damask with a skirt which unbottons and reveals a matching pair of bloomers. For the golf course or tennis court it has the admirable combination of utility and style.

The girl scout or the woman who likes to picnic will be most appreciative of a compact case of leather which will fit into any pocket. It holds a collapsible knife, fork, spoon and a glass. The glass is oval and fits over the knife, fork and spoon like a cover.

For evening or to carry with soft summer dresses are small bags of antique tapestry set into dull gilt frames. The bags range in color from the softest pastel colors to brilliant shades of flame and cerise, but all have the mellowed look of old tapestry.

SMOCKING POPULAR

The newest one-piece dresses of crepe de chine or georgette are distinguished by bands of smocking at neck line and waist. Bright hand embroidery also embellishes these frocks, which have full smock sleeves gathered tightly at the wrists.

SILK BATHING SUITS

This season many of the smartest suits are made of gay printed silks or linens, while those of more conservative appearance are of black crepe de chine or satin with long sleeves and collars that button high at the throat to prevent sunburn. Plaid taffeta also is much in evidence and is used for several of the most attractive models.

LAUNDRY HINTS

When laundering curtains of voile, scrim or any material which has to be ironed if they are folded so the selvage ends are together and ironed they will hang perfectly even and straight.

If you wish to iron a rough-dry garment in a hurry, dampen it with hot water, roll tightly in a cloth and place on a hot radiator while the irons are heating.

On washing day, in winter, pin handkerchiefs and small articles to a short piece of rope with snap pins in the house and attach to the clothes line by a clothes pin at each end. Easier both to put out and take in than by the old way.

When ironing a garment that has a row of buttons, fold a Turkish towel into several thicknesses, lay the garment, buttons down, on the towel and iron it on the wrong side. The buttons will sink into the towel and the garment will be smooth.

WASH THEM FIRST

If the blankets are soiled when the winter is over, don't put them away in that condition. On a clear windy day wash them and hang them out straight to dry. Then wrap them in brown paper with plenty of camphor and then again in newspapers before packing away. You will not only fool Mr. Moth by this method, but be pretty well pleased with yourself when you get them out next fall span clean.

LEFT OVER CHICKEN

Buy a half-pound of mushrooms and two green peppers when next you have a small amount of chicken left over. Cook the peppers in water until tender, adding the mushrooms for the last five minutes. Drain and add the chicken diced. Warm them all in a rich cream sauce and you have a dish fit for a king at very little expense.

SAVE THE BOX

The paper carton in which the quart of ice cream arrives, when washed out with hot water and dried quickly, will prove just the thing for packing picnic sandwiches. They can be saved and individual lunches packed in each one, if time is at a premium and lunch must be eaten while traveling. It would save a great deal of distributing and passing of food.

A BAGGAGE HINT

When preparing one's baggage for a trip, if two tags (one for going and one for coming home) are written, no small amount of annoyance may be done away with when the return trip is made. If the tags are to be tacked onto a trunk, the one with the return address should be placed beneath the one with the going-away address and both tacked on together. When the traveler is ready for the return trip, the top one may be torn off, leaving the other in its proper place. If the tags are to be inserted in a leather holder the same method can be used

AN APPETIZER

There is no fruit cup so refreshing as one consisting of apples, grapefruit oranges and Hawaiian pineapple.

CONCERNING WOMEN

Woman public school teachers of Louisville have won their contest for equal pay for equal work.

Since 1915 the women of Iceland have enjoyed the right to vote on terms of complete equality with men.

Under the new order of things in Greece women are to have municipal suffrage without being eligible to public office.

Within the last ten years more has been accomplished for the advancement of women in Turkey than in all the centuries that have gone before.

FOR IMMEDIATE SERVICE

Lettuce that is prepared just before serving should be wrapped in a large cloth and whirled around a couple of times. Then the lettuce will be perfectly dry before the dressing is applied.

GOOD THE SECOND TIME

The leftover roast may be sliced and the slices dipped in egg and cracker and fried in fat until a delicate brown. This is a very good and also an economical method of using up any sort of roast.

RECIPES

Maple Walnut Bread: One cup graham flour, 1 cup white flour, 1 teaspoon baking powder, 1-4 teaspoon salt, 1 cup sour milk, 1 teaspoon soda, 1 cup maple sirup or 1 cup brown sugar, 1 cup walnut meats broken in pieces, 1-2 cup raisins. Mix and sift ingredients. Add sour milk mixed with soda, maple sirup, and stir in nut meats and raisins which have been dredged in 3 tablespoons flour. Pour in greased loaf pan. Bake in slow oven about 1 hour.

Stuffed Cauliflower: Break the head into flowerlets as soon as it is cooked and season it with 1-2 teaspoon pepper. Have ready for every pint of cauliflower cream sauce made from 1 tablespoon butter, 1-2 tablespoon flour and 2 cups of milk, seasoned with 1-2 teaspoon salt. The sauce should be cooked for about 12 minutes until it is smooth and thick. Creamed cauliflower can be served plain or on slices of toast. Chopped parsley or lemon juice can be added to the sauce just before it is poured over the cauliflower. Boiled cauliflower can be served with lemon juice, pepper, salt, grated nutmeg and melted butter.

IN THE PUBLIC EYE

Lyman J. Gage, who is 90 years old today, was formerly a noted figure in American banking and finance and at one time secretary or the treasury of the United States. A native of New York state, at the age of 19 he went to Chicago and found his first employment as bookkeeper for a lumber firm. Soon after he was employed in a similar capacity by one of the Chicago banks and soon gave evidence of the possession of a higher character of banking genius. In 1891 he had risen to the presidency of the largest banking institution in the Western metroplis. His great financial abilities were brought to the service of the government when he accepted the treasury portfolio in the McKinley cabinet in 1891. In 1902 he resigned to become president of a trust company in New York. Since his retirement from business some 20 years ago Mr. Gage has resided in southern California.

From Small Beginnings

Pietro Mascagni, the Composer of Calvalleria Rusticana

Everyone who loves music knows the beautiful opera, Cavalleria Rusticana, composed about 30 years ago by Pietro Mascagni, an Italian orchestra leader. Everyone who hears the music or that opera feels its haunting charm, and is tempted to hum it, or to whistle snatches from it, long afterward.

Pietro Mascagni was 27 years old when he first produced Cavalleria Rusticana. If he had followed his father's occupation he would have made bread instead of music—for his father was a baker. At no time, however, did he propose to follow his father's life. From the very first he turned his attention to music In doing this he by no means pleased his father, a practical man who wished to see the son well started in work that would promise a good income. The father was a worker, but he intended to free the son from drudgery He would make him a lawyer.

Like most men of genius, Mascagni was always strongly individual. He obeyed his father to the extent of studying law, but he disobeyed him by continuing to study music as well, carrying on his work without his father's knowledge. He devoted himself so well to his beloved music that by the time he was 18 years of age he had written a symphony that made music lovers enthusiastic. One of the compositions of his early days gave him the money for further study. Impatient of delay, he left serious study and eagerly accepted a place as the leader of an opera company, hoping that practical work would accomplish more than student life in a conservatory. This he apparently proved when at 27 he thrilled the world with his delightful Cavalleria Rusticana. That, however, was a dash of genius, for in none of the many operas Mascagni produced after the composition of Cavalleria Rusticana did he even approach the beauty of his one great work.

Nevertheless, to have produced one work that will live is sufficient reward for any man of genius.

By giving to the world one great opera, Mascagni proved the wisdom of his course in turning to the study of music, whatever the cost.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Senator Bingham's Speech

Mr. Editor: In judging character, it appears to me a good way is to see what the person you are judging thinks of character himself. Our junior Senator Hon. Hiram Bingham made one of the most wonderful speeches ever listened to Memorial day. Here are a few of his words:

"The most precious thing in the world is character. A good name is far above riches. If our children have character, then America will be safe. If they have character, they can be trusted to build up an America of the future worthy of the soldiers we commemorate today. But character can not be had for the asking. The glory of character is like the glory of pure gold that has come through the refiner's fire and had its dross burned away in the heat of conflict. The strength of character is like the strength of an athlete, which comes from long, grinding training, patient attention to duty, and a daily struggle to overcome inherited weaknesses. Strength comes from struggle. In ease and luxury lurk the germs of weakness. Let us beware lest our love and affection for our boys and girls, these Americans of tomorrow, deprive them of the opportunity to meet and overcome difficulties; deprive them of the chance to build a rugged and strong character.

Our soldiers held their heads high and faced discomfort, pain, and death, proud to be serving their country. Let us likewise, however dim be our vision, however insignificant our place in life, hold our heads high and cheerfully accept discomfort, pain, and even death if by so doing we may serve our country and follow in the steps of these heroes who have gone before."

C. B. MONTGOMERY.

Oneco, June 26, 1926.

"Look here, Binks," said the leader, "if this carol is to be a success you must sing louder."

VARIOUS MATTERS

Only a few more days remain for those who desire to be in the June bride class to find their man and locate a clergyman to tie the knot.

Sunday dawned bright and fair, therefore many local people left bright and early for the seashore to enjoy the day to the utmost.

Automobiles from over a dozen states were noticed passing through local streets on Sunday, an indication that the summer tourists are now out in force.

REDS FEATURE LAST WEEK IN BASEBALL

NEW YORK, June 27.—(AP)—Consistent hitting behind steady pitching which has marked Cincinnati's advance as pacemaker in the National league pennant scramble, carried the Reds through severe tests with front rank contenders, figures for the past week show.

Jack Kendrick's club gathered the greatest number of hits for both big league circuits, 87, in winning five of seven contests. Cincinnati was also at the top in both batting and fielding departments for the season. According to the latest team records, the Reds had a batting percentage of .288 and a fielding mark of .972.

The close of the week found the Pittsburgh threat to the peak position temporarily sidetracked as the Corsairs were compelled to yield the runner up place to the Cardinals. Detroit turned in the best performance for the week in the American with five victories and no set backs, thereby rising from the second division to tie the Athletics for third place. Tris Speaker's Indians continued their erratic course climbing into second place early in the week but to drop back to fifth in the standing at the conclusion.

PICTURES OF MOSES' LIFE WERE SHOWN

The attendance as good and the interest marked at the local Y. M. C. A. Sunday afternoon. After the singing of hymns, the scriptures reading, prayer and vocal solos rendered sweetly by Hugh Kinder, the last part of the Bible feature moving picture, "The Life of Moses," was shown. The picture was unusually realistic and very true to the story as recorded in the Bible. The scenes included the Israelites pursued by the Egyptians, the pillar of cloud, etc. The illustration of the crossing of the Red sea was especially impressive as was Moses smiting the rock and his receiving the ten commandments. The death of Moses was also most impressive.

Between the reels, a brief talk was given by Secretary Edwin Hill, who spoke in part as follows: "While many things impress us in the picture story, we all noticed, I am sure, how God cared for his own. I was thinking of those lines, "It may not be your way; it may not be my way, but yet in His own way, the Lord will provide." How wonderfully God cares for us as he did the Israelites. Through Moses he gave them manna; he caused Moses to smite the rock from which gushed out refreshing water to satisfy their terrible thirst. Paul asked the Lord to remove his "thorn in the flesh," but the Lord refused to do so, but instead he gave Paul grace to bear the thorn. I sometimes wonder how God can be so kind to us, for we are ofttimes unkind to him. Let us strive to please God in our lives and show to those about us the same spirit of kindness that the kind Heavenly Father constantly shows to us."

SUES FOR COMMISSION DUE BROKERS WHO WERE SHOT

Saturday in the common pleas court here Judge C. B. Waller heard the evidence in the suit of Samuel Pokutny and others vs. Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Gollas of Norwich for commission on sale of a farm. After the evidence had been concluded, court adjourned to Tuesday when the arguments will be made.

The plaintiffs in the suit are Michael Pisarko and the administrators of the estates of Peter Pisarko and Samuel Pokutny. Both of these men died as the result of a shooting affray some time ago at a farm off the Gallows hill road on the old Canterbury turnpike. Pokutny shot Pisarko and then committed suicide.

The claim is made in the suit that on Jan. 1, 1925, the defendants employed the plaintiffs as agents to sell their farm in Preston for $15,000. The brokers were to receive 10 per cent. commission, it is alleged.

The plaintiffs claim that they secured a customer who was ready to pay the price and did pay it. The defense claimed that the commission was only $500 and the suit came to court. Attorneys H. H. Pettis and V. P. A. Quinn are counsel for the plaintiffs and Attorney E. W. Higgins for the defendants.

"WILL SUZANNE PLAY?" IS QUESTION AT WIMBLEDON

WIMBLEDON, England, June 28.—(AP)—The big question for the Wimbledon jubilee tennis tournament contests tomorrow again is "will Suzanne play?"

The French star, whose uncertain mindedness, coupled with what evidently is her present uncertain state of health, badly disarranged the Wimbledon program on two days. She is carded to play in the third round of the women's singles against Miss Claire Beckenham. The official announcement to this carding, however, is coupled with the proviso "if well enough to play."

Thus the uncertainty regarding the champion's appearance in virtually every match in which she is listed bids fair to keep the committee and crowds guessing during the present week.

Mlle Lenglen was up and about today, but few ventured to predict what the morrow would bring forth.

The commotion over the French woman star's doings has overshadowed the serious tennis battles in the various divisions, but the fact remains that the tournament has reached a highly interesting stage in the men's singles with the last eight, which includes Howard Kinsey, the only remaining American contestant in this class, fully rounded out.

The last eight players in the men's singles are opposed as follows: Howard Kinsey vs. P. D. E. Spence; C. H. Kingsley vs. Jacques Brugnon; Henri Cochet vs. J. C. Gregory, and Jean Borotra vs. J. Kozeluh, the Czechoslovak crack.

The battle in the women's singles, is not so far advanced, as only five of the last eight have definitely come through, these being Senorita De Alvarez, of Spain, Mrs. Molla Mallory, United States, Miss Bouman, Holland, Mlle Contostavlos, France, and Miss C. Tyrell, England.

Mlle Lenglen under normal conditions will be added to this list unless scratched, while Mlle Vlasto, second ranking French woman player, has still to beat Miss G. Sterry in order to get in.

The last place on the list was originally to have been decided Saturday in a match between Miss Elizabeth Ryan and Mrs. L. A. Godfree. This was postponed on account of Miss Ryan's illness. She was reported today as being improved, and it is hoped she will play tomorrow, the match being carded for the centre court.

CALLAHAN WINS FOUR LETTERS IN FRESHMAN SPORTS

(Special to the Bulletin)

STORRS, Conn., Jnune 28—To John J. Callahan '29, of Revere, Mass., goes the honor of being the first man to win freshman numerals in four sports at Connecticut Aggies since yearling teams were first organized at Storrs three years ago. In addition, he is rated as the outstanding athlete in the class of 1929 by Freshman Coach Louis A. Alexander. Callahan weighs only 145 pounds, yet he played center on both the freshman football and basketball teams, left field in baseball and entered in the high jump in track. In all four sports he made his numerals.

Callahan will be a candidate for the Connecticut eleven when the call for practice is sounded in September. Because of his lack of weight, he will probably be shifted to the end of the line and given a trial at end, though Coach Dole may play to use him as an understudy to Captain Daily at center, who has only one more season of participation left.

POP WILLIAMS WILL BE ELIGIBLE FOR AGGIE TEAMS

(Special to the Bulletin)

STORRS, Conn., June 27—Arthur V. Williams '29, of Danielson, will be eligible for the Connecticut Aggie eleven next fall according to information obtained from the college registrar's office today, and with this announcement Connecticut's football stock is bound to rise. For Williams is without doubt one of the best backfield men to ever play on an Aggie eleven, and his presence on the 1926 team will add greatly to its strength. He weighs close to 200 pounds yet is one of the fastest men on the squad, and he is also an ideal triple threat man.

Scholastic difficulties prevented Williams from playing on the Connecticut eleven last fall, though during his freshman year he was an outstanding star of the yearling team that won all of its games. Williams is also a valuable man in basketball, baseball and track. He made his letter at center on the Aggie quintet last winter, and played regularly at catch on the ball nine this spring until a broken finger forced him out of the game for the season.

W. K. LANMAN BEATS SAM WILCOX IN BRILLIANT MATCH FOR NOYES TROPHY

A too forceful chip shot on the 36th green spelled defeat for Sam Wilcox, local boy, and William K. Lanman of Columbus, O., won the first annual invitation tournament of the Norwich Golf club, one up, and with it secured a hold on the Mrs. Charles D. Noyes trophy, emblematic of the title. The climax came on the 36th hole with the match all even after 35 holes of brilliant golf played in a drenching rain that soaked the players and the small gallery that followed the play, to the skin.

Coming to the 36th with the match deadlocked Wilcox drove off the 36th tee with a low scooter that carried him well up the fairway. Using a wood club he shot a bit to the right of the green and landed in the short rough but not such a bad lie. Lanman on his drive from the tee landed within a good iron shot of the green but he overplayed his second shot and landed in the rough above the green. Wilcox endeavored to chip onto the green but was too strong and his ball rolled to the far edge of the green. Lanman chipped to within 18 inches of the pin and holed out in four. Wilcox missed his long putt by a scant inch and took a five, losing the match.

Wilcox, however, had a better medal score than Lanman, getting 160 while Lanman took 162. Lanman was in difficulty on several holes and was out of bounds several times. Wilcox played brilliant iron shots to the greens but his putting was far from his usual brand of golf. On several holes Wilcox missed easy putts that would have given him the hole but forced him to halve it. Lanman played good golf the entire match and was especially strong on the greens, an advantage that forced his opponent to make up for on the approach shots.

Lanman took the first hole with a birdie three in the morning round. The second was halved at threes while Wilcox evened the match on the third when Lanman drove out of bounds. Lanman captured the fourth hole with a birdie three holing out with a pretty chip shot. He made it two up by taking the next hole in five while Wilcox took a six. On the sixth Wilcox holed out with a par five while Lanman took a five. The seventh went to Lanman with a par five while Wilcox had a six. On the eighth Lanman drove out of bounds three times and then conceded the hole to his opponent. The ninth was halved and at the turn Lanman was one up.

The next three holes were halved and on the thirteenth Wilcox with a par four evened the match. Lanman made it one up on the next hole with a par five while Wilcox was off on his putting, missing a short putt to halve the hole. The next two were halved and on the seventeenth Wilcox rimmed the cup and lost the hole. The 18th was halved and Lanman finished the morning round two up.

The afternoon round was even more strenuous than the morning round and the drenching rain that fell continually throughout the match did not help the golfers, making the greens soggy and slow as well as the fairways. The first hole was halved and Wilcox was three down when he holed out in four on the second hole, Lanman being on the green on his second shot and taking a three. The next four holes were halved although Wilcox had a chance to gain a hole on the third hole when he missed a comparatively easy putt. The local boy won the seventh with a birdie four and the eighth with a birdie three. The ninth was halved. With Lanman one up at the turn the Columbus boy took the 11th with a four after the tenth had been halved. Wilcox, by several beautiful iron shots took the 12th with a par four and on the 13th evened the match. Thus the match stood until the 18th and the strain began to tell for both boys missed easy putts on the 17th. The 18th was a heart-breaking one for the local boy who had put up a game fight against a more experienced tournament player. On the whole it was a match well worth seeing as both boys played beautiful golf under the most trying conditions.

Rain soaked the players to the skin and made their clubs wet and slippery and hard to hold. With handkerchiefs wrapped around their clubs to keep them from slipping the boys played through it all with never a word of complaint.

WARRIORS WIN EASY GAME FROM SACHEMS

The Warriors took the Sachems into camp at the Duwell field Sunday afternoon before a fair-sized crowd, by the score of 8 to 3.

Greene, on the mound for the losers, was touched up for 13 hits by the Warriors and these coupled with a few costly errors decided the contest. Jab Burns led in the hitting for the winners with three safe drives out of five trips while Fitzgerald and W. Burns with two out of five also featured.

Finnegan, Greene and Tim Coughlin did the best work for the losers.

TWILIGHT LEAGUE TO HAVE BUSY WEEK

Although the twilight league has been in operation for two weeks, this coming week will represent the first full week of its schedule provided that the ever doubtful weather is a little bit reasonable. During the past two weeks the league has met with many reverses at the hands of the weather which has resulted in only four games being played to date. The schedule for this week calls for three scheduled games and two postponed games, on Monday the East Ends will meet the Eastern Connecticut Power, on Tuesday Yantic will play off a postponed game with the Warriors. Wednesday the Saints will play the Warriors, Thursday the E. C. P. and St. Joseph's teams will play off a postponed game and on Friday the Bon Tons will play Yantic. In looking over the above scheduled games for the week the fans can look for some real fast baseball as the teams are evenly matched and without a doubt will play some close and exciting game.

The game tonight between the East Side and the Eastern Conn. Power should be an exceptionally good game as both of these teams have some of the fastest semi-pro player in these parts in their lineups who are capable of turning in some real thrilling baseball.

With the league pulling into its third week no team can very will afford to lose many games if they expect to get in on melon that only the victors can share and from now on every game should be hard fought from the time the umpire calls play ball until the last man has been called out.

The E. C. P. has won one game while the East Enders have won one and lost one falling before the slants of Gil Jones, cannonball pitcher of the Yantic A. A. last week in a hair-raising, heart-breaking six inning game which wound up with a five to four score.

The Power Co. boys will take the field tonight with a slight edge on the East Siders as they have a pitching staff which to their opponents slightly. Mgr. Holland has the veteran Tommy Simcox whose all but reliable soup bone has turned back many a team in the past score of years and also the youthful Lefty Dugas, the sensation of the 1925 and 26 baseball season, who in his short career has dragged down the batting average of some of the best stickers in the state, and then there is also Smiling Johnny Greene who in the past two years has won his way to the hearts of every baseball fan in the city by his work on the mound for the N. F. A. The remainder of the E. C. P. lineup will include the Hull boys, Davis, E. Murphy, Yerrington, Tombari, Goldblatt, Fanning, Smith, Whitney, Ringland and Hawkins.

The East Siders will depend upon Harry Mills, their manager and also league president to keep the above mentioned sluggers in hand long enough while Hamil, Tim Coughlin, Morin, Normandin, Filen, Gaudette, Duffy, Dinty Moore, J. Peduce and the Papineau brothers collect enough runs to win. Whoever wins or whatever the outcome of tonight's game may be it is almost safe to guarantee that whatever fans find their way to the Duwell field tonight, will receive their fill of good fast, clean baseball. Hank Morin behind the bat and Oney on the bases will keep things moving from 6.30 until the last man is out.

KAPLAN-GARCIA FIGHT HEADS WEEK BOXING PROGRAM

NEW YORK, June 27.—(AP)—Three pugilistic diadems, the featherweight lightweight and welterweight boxing crowns, will be dangled before the eyes of challengers this week in Hartford, Conn., Chicago and Newark, N. J., as the high spots of a week of feverish activity in cauliflower circles.

Louis (Kid) Kaplan of Meriden, Conn., featherweight pride of the Nutmeg state, will enter the lists in defense of his 126 pound title against Bobby Garcia, United States Army champion, at Hartford, Conn., tomorrow night in a 12 round match, with the referee rendering the decision at the close of the match. This will be Kaplan's second fight in Connecticut since he won the title. He won a hairline decision over Babe Herman of California at Waterbury, last summer.

Pete Latzo, newly-crowned king of the Welter, will step into the ring at Dreamland park, N. J., Tuesday night, against Willie Harmon of New York in a 12 round, no decision contest. This contest has twice been postponed by rain, it being originally scheduled for last Tuesday and then Wednesday but halted by showers each time.

Chicago will inaugurate boxing under its new control Saturday night with a lightweight championship contest between Rocky Kansas of Buffalo, N. Y., and Sammy Mandell of Rock Island, Ill. It will be Kansas' first defense of the title he won from Jimmy Goodrich, in Buffalo last December.

The headliner of New York will be fought Thursday night when Mike McTigue, former world's light-heavy weight champion, will meet Johnny Risko, rugged Cleveland heavyweight, in a 10 rounder at Madison Square Garden.

As a counter attraction to the Latzo-Harmon fight, promoters of the Queensboro A. C., have announced a return match between Dave and Maxie Rosenbloom for their Long Island city stadium, Tuesday night. The match will be over the ten round route. Rosenbloom won the verdict in a recent encounter.

Billy Petrolle, the Fargo, N. D., lightweight, will meet Ray Miller of Chicago in a ten round topliner at the Coney Island stadium on Friday night.

VELVETMEN LOSE GAME TO VALLEY FALLS CLUB

Sunday afternoon at the J. B. Martin grounds the Valley Falls, R. I. club, substituting for the Columbian of Hartford, handed the J. B. Martin team a neat trimming, 11 to 7. Pepin who started for the Velvetmen, was ineffective and nine runs were scored off his delivery before Lemieux was sent in to relieve him. Lemieux proved to be more or less of a mystery to the visitors and he held them safely throughout the remainder of the game. The score:

REDS SWAMP PIRATES UNDER BARRAGE OF HITS

CINCINNATI, June 27.—(AP)—Four Pittsburgh pitchers were hammered for eighteen hits today and Cincinnati won from the Champions 16 to 0. Aside from the heavy batting of the league leaders, a triple play by Emmer, Dressen and Bressler was the most spectacular feature.

Donohue, who was knocked out of the box in less than an inning at Pittsburgh a few days ago, held the Pirates to six scattered hits.

YOUTH OF FOURTEEN YEARS BEING HELD FOR BURGLARY AT NEW LONDON

(Special to the Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, June 27.—The grocery store of Morris Litinsky, 59 Washington street, was entered by a thief Saturday night or early this morning and locked up at the police station charged with the crime is a youth of 14, who claims to reside on Haddam road, Middletown. The robbery was discovered this morning when Litinsky opened his store for business, and he at once reported the break to the police. The plunder consisted of about $1 in pennies, a quantity of cakes and cigarettes.

Early this morning Patrolman William Manice found a boy, who since has turned out to be the burglar, roaming coatless and hatless about the streets. He was turned over to the custody of Probation Officer Richard W. Mansfield, who caused the boy to be given shelter at the Salvation Army. While the members of the army were conducting a street service the boy made his escape. A short time afterwards Sergeant John Cavanaugh obtained information from a woman who was going to her home about 1 o'clock this morning that she observed a boy coatless and hatless loitering near the Litinsky store. As the description tallied with the boy arrested by Patrolman Manice, Sergeant Cavanaugh went to the Salvation Army for the purpose of questioning the boy, but when he arrived there the boy had escaped. A search of the outskirts of the city was made by several of the patrolmen and Motorcycle Officer Augustus Ray. While passing through Broad street, Officer Ray detected the youth near Connecticut avenue, where he was soliciting a ride of autoists enroute over the Hartford turnpike, presumably in an attempt to get back to his home. Ray placed the boy under arrest and instead of being given over to the custody of the probation officer again, he was locked up. In possession of the youth was found cigarettes, pennies and a small quantity of cakes.

Boat race followers in automobiles brought business to the police court Saturday. Louis Weinstein and Thomas Phillips of New Haven were charged with defiance of the orders of Traffic Officer Henry Silvia when the latter was doing duty on State street. It was decided that Phillips was drunk and he was so charged. In fact the prosecutor did not prove that they were indifferent to the orders of the traffic officer. They called Boxing Commissioner Thomas E. Donohue, who witnessed the arrest, to testify for them and he said the men had not offended. The court ruled that the accused were not offenders to a degree that warranted the imposition of fines and they were discharged as innocent.

Leslie B. Cooper of Montclair, N. J. was charged with gross carelessness in the operation of his automobile and with having evaded responsibility when he was involved in an accident. Rev. Lathrop J. Chase testified that Cooper was operating his car on Pequot avenue with a fellow standing in the rear of the machine cursing and using language that was disgraceful. On the way up the avenue the Cooper car, a Packard, smashed into a truck conveying beverages, the impact throwing the truck over on its side and against a Marmon automobile that was parked. Before hitting the truck the Cooper Packard had brushed against a Buick that was parked at the side of the road and in which were Morris Federer, his wife and a baby. That spoil gave Federer a shock and he put after the Cooper car and ascertained its registration. He told much the same story that Rev. Mr. Chase related to the court. The Packard's party went to the varsity race before they reported the accidents. That led to the charge of evading responsibility. The claim of Cooper and his friends was that the impact was so slight that they did not realize that the Packard had done any damage whatever, so they did not report till evening. Then they knew that a search was being made for them. Cooper was fined $50. Paul H. Smart, a New York lawyer, defended the men accused. He happened to be in court and so came to the defense of the men accused. The truck was badly damaged, but the Federman car was injured only to a slight extent.

Andrew Mickel and Vera Yankee, the latter a waitress in the Star Lunch, have been friendly with each other for some time. Last week they entered into an arrangement to become husband and wife before the 4th of July, but when Vera went to ride with a taximan and brought up at Ocean Beach, Andy resented her disregard of his affection and declared that the engagement to marry no longer held good. At the house on Hill street where the pair lived, they talked over their affairs with the result that Andrew threw the girl through a window, she told the police. Affairs finally took a turn that neighbors complained to the police that there was breach of the peace and the pair were arrested. Then came a complaint that Vera was a person of lascivious carriage and she as well as Andrew was accused. They told their stories in the police court Saturday with the result that Andrew was fined $10 and the cast against Vera was continued till the 3rd of July.

Two sporty colored women were before the police court Saturday—the victims of "race day" jubilation. Catherine Roberts was out for a good time. She admitted it, but denied that she was intoxicated. She said she had no booze but had taken a couple bottles of beer. Her husband wanted her to go home, but she declined to comply with his request, saying this was her day and made known that she would see the races and then go home when she got ready. She said she was not talking as her husband did all that was necessary. But Catherine was so demonstrative that she was charged with a breach of the peace as well as with intoxication and she was notified by the court that she would have to pay fines of $20. She paid. Mazie Williams, a familiar figure in the court, was charged with intoxication. She admitted that the charge was a proper one, and said that she, too, was celebrating the boat race. She simply drank too much. She made known that she would be deeply appreciative of any leniency the court might extend to her, so she was just fined $10. Mazie reached down and paid what she was assessed for her celebration. There were three or four other drunks and they were disciplined. Four youths were charged with taking an automobile and using it without the permission of the owner, but their cases went over for a week that the facts might be investigated. Victor Smylgen, a youth, was inclined to resist the power of the railroad police to keep him off railroad property, so he was arrested after he became abusive to the officers. He was released with a reprimand.

The Essex coach owned by R. W. Gay, 139 Circle street, Hamden, this state, which was stolen from the yard of the Thames Towboat company Friday afternoon while Gay and a party of friends witnessed the Yale-Harvard race, was found abandoned on Mohegan avenue Saturday morning and taken charge of by the police. Gay came to New London Saturday afternoon and took possession of the automobile.

The services were conducted by Rev. Byron U. Hatfield, Mystic. Members of the Spanish war veterans and American Legion acted as bearers. A firing squad fired a volley and taps were sounded as the body was lowered to its final resting place in Cedar Grove cemetery.

Mr. Drea was born in New London, Sept. 30, 1869. He was married in Taftville, June 30, 1903. The ceremony was performed by Rev. U. O. Bellerose, pastor of the Sacred Heart church of Taftville. This marriage was the first to have taken place in the Taftville church which then had been built only a short while.

Miss Dorothy Lee, New York; Mrs. Helen Shane, Mystic; Mrs. Edward Clark, 243 Howard street; Patrick Clifford, 16 Pleasant street and Mrs. Louis Chapman and infant son, Groton, patients at Lawrence hospital, were discharged Saturday.

Joseph Lawsky, 9 1-2 Harrison street, was arrested Saturday afternoon by Sergeant John Cavanaugh charged by his wife with intoxication and breach of the peace. He was later released on furnishing a surety on his bond of $50 for his appearance in the police court Monday morning. Lawsky went to his home about noon and being intoxicated he engaged in a quarrel with his wife, the argument between the husband and wife assuming such serious proportions that Mrs. Lawsky appealed to the police to arrest her husband.

Harold Cruise and Miss Isabel Austin, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John G. Austin, 52 Gorton street, were married Saturday evening at the residence of the bride's parents. The ceremony was performed by Rev. J. Romeyn Danforth, pastor of the First Church of Christ. The bride has been employed several years as clerk in the office of City Treasurer Herbert J. Huntley.

The condition of Harry Leroy Ward, United States coast guard sailor, stationed at the state pier, and who attempted to commit suicide at Darien a week ago when he was arrested for stealing an automobile from this city, is reported as being critical at the Darien hospital. The Darien police this morning notified the New London police to this effect. Ward swallowed a solution of bichloride of mercury a short time after he was arrested.

(Special to the Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, June 27.—Frank Colletti, 323 Franklin street, Norwich, was arrested Saturday evening by Sergeant Samuel Hick charged with operating his automobile in a reckless manner and also operating a car equipped with defective brakes. ANNOUNCEMENTS

Broadway Theater

Reginald Denny has earned the right to be crowned King of Comedy. This amazing young actor conveys more with the lift of an inquiring eyebrow than many others can with their entire bodies.

Denny's flair for farce is not better exemplified than in his latest starring vehicle, the new Universal-Jewel, Skinner's Dress Suit, now playing to clamorous audiences at the Broadway theater, the first of this week.

Skinner's Dress Suit is a rib-tickling tale of a young married couple, the Skinners, who live in the suburbs. They are just the sort of married children who live next door to you and me, very much in love with one another, with Honey under the positive belief that her husband is the greatest business man of all time.

In reality, he is just an underpaid clerk, submissive to his employer and when Honey compels him to ask for an increase in salary, his outward calm is more than offset by his mental disturbance. And when he finally summons enough courage to request the raise, he is incontinently refused.

He hasn't the heart to undeceive his trustful wife, who believes that there is nothing he cannot accomplish, and he tells her that he received his increase amounting to ten dollars a week. She is overjoyed, and makes plans to spend the raise immediately from their savings. He is aghast at her decision, but he is helpless.

That is where the plot begins to become involved. From then on, the tempo is fast and funny. The plot is most ingenious, being taken almost literally from Henry Irving Dodge's famous book of the same name. The picture was most skillfully directed by William A. Seiter.

Too much credit cannot be given to charming Laura LaPlante, than whom he can think of no one better able to portray Honey, the cuddly and ambitious-for-her-husband wife.

A very funny Mermaid comedy Live Cowards adds to the fun and a new Kinograms completes the bill.

Breed Theater

Charlie Chaplin and Harold Lloyd have a new playfellow. He is Harry Langdon, First National comedy King.

Tramp, Tramp, Tramp, Harry's first feature length comedy, which enjoyed a premier at the Breed theater last night, very definitely establishes the moon faced comic in the camp of the mighty of the screen world. However shrewdly you view the work of the new comedian, you must admit that his gifts are as fine as those possessed by Chaplin and Lloyd.

We can say for ourselves and for those that sat around us last night that we appeared not to have laughed so much or so heartily in some time.

Harry stages a transcontinental hike in Tramp, Tramp, Tramp. He enters the walking joust in order to lift the mortgage from his father's house and also to win the hand of a beautiful girl. He succeeds in doing both.

One of the most exciting and diverting scenes in the picture is the cyclone episode. An entire township is shown blown to pieces by a terrific wind storm. The photography of this scene is remarkable. It is said that the cameramen had to be lashed to trees and posts to prevent being blown away.

Joan Crawford, a former musical star and a well known beauty, plays opposite the funny actor. Others in the cast are Tom Murray, Alec Francis, Edwards Davis and Brooks Benedict. The company as a whole gives a most competent account of itself.

JEWETT CITY

PREACHES ST. JOHN'S DAY SERMON FOR MASONIC LODGE

(Special to the Bulletin)

JEWETT CITY, June 27—Acting upon the invitation of Rev. J. W. Carter, pastor of the Methodist church, 46 members of the craft from Mt. Vernon lodge, No. 75, A. F. and A. M., attended divine worship at his church Sunday morning. It being the nearest Sunday to St. John's day, this attendance was in keeping with the usual custom of the Masonic order.

The floral decorations about the altar were potted geraniums and begonias together with bouquets of freshly cut June roses and carnations. An attractive feature in the musical program was the anthem, Send Out Thy Light, sung by a chorus choir, in which the Misses Arlene Burdick and Bessie LaLiberty sang a duet.

Rev. J. W. Carter, gave a fine, straightaway address, which one might say possessed its outstanding features in its measure of common sense. From a text found in Second Corinthians 4-18 and from the doctrine of Paul, whom the speakers declared was next to Jesus in the world's history, the subject was chosen. The Measure of a Man. The fact was pointed out at the start, that it is not altogether what a man does, but what he would like to do, or really intends to do, that enters into the important factors of his real measure. In turn the speaker considered, what he chose to characterize as the Four Square phases of human make-up. The Height of Ideals. The Depth of Convictions. The Breadth of Sympathy and the Length of Sacrifice.

All through the carefully prepared address, different lines of thought were illustrated in which the benefits were proven or a determined effort to face duty and the keeping in mind of the continually renewed obligation, we are under to give lives of service. Whenever, he said, there exists a doubt as to whether sympathy savors of weakness, then, there is ever to be seen the flawless character of the fearless man of Galilee.

Not in many a moon, indeed if ever before within the space of six days has Jewett City had as many crack train visitors, entire strangers to the local iron, as passed through Jewett City last week. On account of a freight wreck at Auburn, R. I. Wednesday night train 29 the west bound Night Postal Express and train 179 the Quaker Limited for Philadelphia via the Hell Gate Bridge route were detoured this way. Thursday night another freight wreck at Niantic caused a peculiar bit of rerouting of the Federal Washington Express. Westbound it came to New London on the main line, there an engine was coupled to the tail end and the big string of sleepers were hauled up through Jewett City to Plainfield. From Plainfield with an engine on both ends, the train proceeded to Willimantic and thence to New York via Hartford. In the overhanging for and the dim light of the early morning if some wakeful inhabitant of South Canterbury or Packer, happened to be out, he must have thought that the world was nearing its end, when he saw the big Federal express sailing down over Butts bridge at the Quinebaug crossing.

Then to complete the list, the Kingston, R. I., wreck during the early hours of Saturday morning necessitated a series of re-routings that kept the dispatchers on edge, and the local iron hot, all day Saturday, Train 32, the night express from New York, as well as The Owl, and Train 4, the Narragansett and New York paper train, all went through here, a notable string.

To E. H. Hiscox, a local postal clerk, there exists an element of especial interest in the Kingston wreck. His train, number 30, the night "Postal" from New York with a long string of steel mail cars and 35 clerks, was but a few minutes ahead of the "Cape Codder" at Kingston, and passed the extra New Haven freight, whose engine boiler exploded at Slocums, only four miles east of the scene of one of the worst wrecks in the New Haven's history. A matter of eight minutes saved train 30 from the fate of the Cape Codder.

Those who attended the Congregational church picnic Saturday at the Mansion house in Preston had a most delightful time. Although it rained, the commodious house interior was an added attraction. None minded the rain, for music, games and refreshments were enjoyed in the spacious rooms. William McNicol, the owner, had made everything very comfortable and attractive. Everyone carried a basket lunch and lemonade and ice cream were furnished.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred B. Owen of Fort Wayne, Ind., and John A. Owen of Providence, called on friends here Saturday.

A. R. Young is visiting his daughter, Mrs. Champion Mathewson in New Haven.

Joseph Koniecko, who lives in the south part of the town is in Backus hospital. He works in the Glasgo Finishing Co. mills and Friday morning his left arm was crushed in one of the machines. He was reported as being comfortable on Sunday.

Mrs. Annie Olin had as week end visitors E. E. Colburn, Misses Elizabeth and Mary Colburn, Mrs. Mary Leonard and Raymond Jacobs of Albany, N. Y., who made the trip by automobile.

Officer Vegiard is receiving numerous complaints regarding the explosion of fireworks which is going on in town. He states that there is a penalty for this breaking of the law, which he shall enforce.

Farmer Brown's Boy Loses a Pigeon

The right to live belongs to all,
The strong, the weak, the great, the small.

—Old Mother Nature.

It is true that Old Mother Nature has given each the right to live, but it is also her law that each must protect that right. In other words, each one must continually use his wits and be smart enough to prevent any one else from taking away that right. This is Mother Nature's way of making sure that only the most fit shall live.

Farmer Brown's Boy had pigeons as well as chickens. Of course those pigeons could fly at will. Pigeons are not kept in yards as are chickens. So Farmer Brown's Boy's pigeons could be seen flying about over the farm every day. They delighted to bill and coo in the roof of the barn. Some of them were so tame that they would come down and sit on Farmer Brown's Boy's hand while he fed them. He was very fond of those pigeons.

Some of those pigeons were very swift fliers and Farmer Brown's Boy took great pride in them. He was doing this one morning. The pigeons were some little distance away in the cornfield. Suddenly they rose as if in fright and headed for home. At first Farmer Brown's Boy couldn't think what it was. Then he saw some distance back of them a dark form coming through the air with tremendous speed. He knew it for a hawk, but it was the fastest flying hawk he had ever seen. Those pigeons were coming fast, but the hawk behind them was coming faster.

Farmer Brown's Boy yelled and waved his arms in the hope of frightening away that hawk. But that hawk didn't frighten. Straight on it came and struck one of those pigeons in midair only a few feet from where Farmer Brown's Boy was standing. Without stopping the hawk swept on, carrying the pigeon with it. Farmer Brown's Boy watched it out of sight. It had flown straight toward the Big Mountain and at the rate it was going it had soon disappeared.

"Phew!" exclaimed Farmer Brown's Boy, "that's the boldest hawk I ever saw, and how it can fly. I hope he doesn't come back again. I thought my pigeons could fly, but they haven't any chance against that fellow. He picked that pigeon out of the air as if it were sitting still instead of flying as hard as it could. If he comes often I see where I shall have to keep my pigeons shut up. I am not raising pigeons to feed hawks.

Now once upon a time Farmer Brown's Boy would have been terribly indignant. He would have been ready to kill every hawk that he got a chance to, just because that one hawk had taken one of his pigeons. But Farmer Brown's Boy had come to know the little people of the Green Meadows and of the Green Forest and the Old Pasture, and to understand that when they killed they did so only for food; and this is no more than man does. He was keeping those pigeons and his chickens for food. He knew that in the eyes of hawks, owls, foxes and some other of the little people who kill for food, pigeons and chickens had no rights that other birds hadn't. So he had learned not to blame any of these folk who were smart enough to now and then get a chicken when they could get one. That they did so only often and that it was done happen often ad that it was done wholly in the spirit of self-preservation. These so-called "robbers" were not thieves, for they did not know they were stealing. They were simply getting food when the opportunity presented itself. So he had learned to protect his chickens and rarely did he lose one.

But the pigeons were another matter. He couldn't keep them cooped up as he could his chickens. Hitherto they had been smart enough to take care of themselves. But if this hawk were to come that way often something would have to be done about it. Yes sir, something would have to be done about it.

(Copyright, 1926, by T. W. Burgess)

EAGLEVILLE

There was a pretty home wedding on the lawn at the home of Mr. and Mrs. George Tootell on Friday noon when their daughter, Gertrude, was married to Charles J. Potter of Perkins Corner. The bride's gown was of white georgette with satin train and a veil. She carried pink roses. Miss Margaret Tootell, sister of the bride, was maid of honor and wore rust colored georgette and carried pink roses. The two bridesmaids were cousins of the bride and wore yellow gowns and carried sweet peas. Little Lois Tootell, sister of the bride, was the ring bearer and was dressed in white satin. Two small cousins of the bride were flower girls and wore white satin. The bride was given away by her father. Delmar Potter, brother of the groom, was best man. Rev. C. G. Johnson performed the ceremony. After a wedding trip to New York and New Jersey they will reside at Perkins Corner. Guests were present from Massachusetts, Rhode Island, Hartford, Storrs, as well as local people. A wedding breakfast was served following the ceremony. There were many beautiful gifts.

FINANCIAL AND COMMERCIAL

WEEKLY FINANCIAL REVIEW

NEW YORK, June 27—(AP)—Most of the financial markets strengthened their positions last week although the pace of trading tended to slacken as the immediate trade outlook became more confused. With the first half of the year drawing to a close, activities were retarded by the fears of a mid-summer lull in business and financial activities, and the week on the whole was uneventful.

A well sustained demand for investment securities enabled the stock and bond market to make satisfactory progress. Rail stocks were more favored than industrials, due to continued improvement in earnings and freight movement, as well as important developments which are expected to pave the way for new traffic routes and mergers. The price average of leading issues reached the highest mark in several years.

The ready absorption of approximately $150,000,000 in new bond issues, in the face of lagging activity in listed obligations testified to the strong investment demand which normally develops around this time of year. A notable development was the expansion in foreign financing, with important loans floated for the Brazilian government and the German steel trust.

The commodity markets were irregular, wheat prices declined 1 to 4 1-4 cents a bushel, and considerable uneasiness was manifested over political consequences likely to follow the failure of agricultural interests to obtain their desired relief legislation. Although the cotton situation was not closely tied up with the defeated Haugen bill, its price was not effected by the defeat of that measure and gains of 24 to 38 points were recorded during the week on less favorable weather reports.

POETRY FOR THE WIDE AWAKES

Little Miss Curly-Grins

Little Miss Curly-Grins!
Oh, what a girl;
Grins with a thrill in them,
Crowned by a curl!
Baby-locks looking for
Some place to play,
Romp down to meet your eyes,
Twinkling and gay.

Breezes, all friendly, come
Wanting to be Part of your coquetry,
Vamping poor me.
They seem deliberately
Blowing your curls,
Just to make me forget
Other sweet girls.

Bare feet and simple frocks
Are, I suppose,
Your way of proving thorns
Don't make the rose.
First your hair fascinates,
Then comes that grin;
Romance, please tell my heart
Where to begin.

Little Miss Curly-Grins!
Oh, what a girl;
Grins with a thrill in them,
Crowned by a curl;
Let Cupid sell his darts,
You have in stock
Far more alluring things—
Grins and a lock!

—William Hershell.

Almost a Man

I'm goin' to go where my gran'maw's at,
An' I've got new pants an' a bran' new hat,
An' a shirt with a collar; an' I bet she
Will be supprized when she looks at me.
She thinks I'm little—I know she does
Last time I visited her I was:
But I have growed till I'm awful tall—
I marked myself on the kitchen wall—
And I have been in a couple fights,
An' I oughta have long pants by rights.

When my gran'maw sees my dad an' me
A-comin' along down the road, then she
Will say: "I wonder who them two men
S. I EJe mb b mb mb m
Can be?" An' then she will look again
An' then she'll come out the door an' stare,
An' then she'll holler: "Well, I declare!"
An' she will know me, an' kiss me, too.
The way gran'maws has been raised to
And mebby get me a cookie that
Has a sugared side where the raisin's at.

An' I'll stay there till vacation's done,
An' mebby 'get me a shootin' gun,
An' kill things for her to eat; an' she
Will feel safe nights when she's where I be:
An' if tramps came I will tell them:
"You
Better not come here!" An' then they'll skiddoo.
And she'll be glad when she sees them run
Away from me an' my shootin' gun:
An' then she'll take me upon her knee
An' sing the songs that I like to me.

—Jed Mortimer Lewis.

The Starry Host

The countless stars, which to our human eye
Are fixed and steadfast, each in proper place,
Forever bound to changeless points in space,
Rush with our sun and planets through the sky.
And like a flock of birds onward fly:
Returning never whence began their race.
They speed their ceaseless way with gleaming face.
As though God bade them win Infinity.
Ah whither, whither is their forward flight
Through endless time and limitless expanse?
What power with unimaginable might
First hurled them forth to spin in tireless dance?
What beauty lures them on through primal night
So that for them to be is to advance?

—Bishop Spalding.

UNCLE JED'S TALK TO THE WIDE AWAKES

How many of the Wide Awakes know that the giant brown bear of Alaska is a real fisherman? The giant brown bear of Alaska is one of the commanding and most interesting wild animals of our country. He is perfectly at home in the remote, vast wilderness of Alaska, rarely visited by man. There he has absolute freedom under primitive conditions.

The brown bears, as a group, are mainly on the islands and in the coastal region of southern and southeastern Alaska. However they also inhabit the interior, northward at least to the slopes of the Alaskan range. They are not as ferocious and dangerous as they are reputed to be, in fact they flee from the presence and even the scent of man. If they are cornered they may put up a strenuous fight to gain their freedom or the freedom of their young.

They are very large animals, attaining a length of eight feet and a height of four to five feet at the shoulders. They eat fish, flesh, roots and grass. They like the meat of the caribou, moose, mountain sheep and goat.

It is in salmon fishing that these great beasts display their remarkably cunning ability. As soon as the salmon begin to go up stream in July, from the sea, the bears make fishing their chief business. The fish in large numbers usually ascend the streams the entire summer.

A mother bear will leave her cubs on the bank to receive the fish while she stands upright and wades in water, even up to her neck, going very slowly with the current. She holds her arms down at her sides with hands spread and when she feels a salmon coming up against her, clutches it with her claws and throws it out onto the bank to the expectant cubs. After supplying the cubs, she goes ashore to share in the feast. So you see that the giant brown bear of Alaska is a real fisherman.

UNITED CONGREGATIONAL CHURCH RAISES FUND FOR BUILDING CHANGES

The successful outcome of the campaign by the special finance committee to raise the money needed for some building changes, an addition and repairs to the property of the United Congregational church was reported at the Sunday morning service at the church by Dr. Hugh B. Campbell, chairman of the committee. The amount for the projected work was $17,000. The amount which had been secured by pledges, according to Dr. Campbell's report, was $20,700.

The financial campaign has been carried on since June 6 by the committee which consisted of Dr. Campbell, Herbert B. Cary, H. M. Lerou, Charles S. Holbrook, Walter F. Lester, and Harold E. Robbins. The work for which the money has been raised is to be begun at once, Arthur M. Thompson being chairman of the committee in charge.

One of the most important details in the work is the building of an addition to the church property on Broadway. This is to be a one story addition on the northerly side of the building, next to the Masonic temple, and will provide facilities for the expanding church school by adding several class rooms, connecting with the present large room used by the church school. The expense of this church addition has been specifically assumed by the pledge of Miss Norton, one of the church members.

Other work to be done in the church building includes painting the church school rooms, covering the floor, repairing the organ, touching up the auditorium and the vestibule, painting the roof, and some other minor repairs.

At the Community house, the lower floor is to be painted, lavatories are to be placed in a special addition, the lower vestibule is to be enlarged, the moving picture booth is to be replaced upstairs, the walls of the auditorium are to be painted, there are to be repairs to the plastering and the organ, new wiring and fixtures are to be put in and there are to be new conductors with painting.

The exterior of the parsonage on Union street is to be painted and the study in the Otis library building is to be painted and have the plastering repaired.

ENGINEERS' NEXT CONVENTION IS TO BE IN HARTFORD

L. J. Nickerk, Waterbury, was elected president of the Connecticut State Association of Stationery Engineers at the closing session of the annual convention in this city Saturday morning. The session was presided over by the retiring president, Elmer L. Bassett of Bridgeport, and was held at the Community house on Church street.

Secretary John J. O'Rourke of the Norwich Chamber of Commerce expressed the appreciation of the officers and members of the chamber for the honor conferred upon Norwich in having the state convention held here. Locally made cigars were furnished the delegates by the chamber. President Bassett responded to the cordial welcome from the chamber and expressed appreciation of the many courtesies extended the delegates.

The officers were elected as follows for the ensuing year.

The newly elected officers were installed by National Trustee William J. Reynolds of Hoboken.

The meeting accepted an invitation from Hartford to hold next year's convention in that city. During the late afternoon the delegates enjoyed an automobile trip to the submarine base at Groton, automobiles being furnished through the cooperation of the Chamber of Commerce.

MANY BOYS ENROLLING TO LEARN TO SWIM

The Y. M. C. A. "Learn to Swim" campaign, in which the local association is offering a course of free swimming lessons to all the boys of Norwich is scheduled to start off this (Monday) morning and if all the lads who have signed up for the lessons appear for their instruction there is bound to be some lively splashing and gurgling as the boys endeavor to master the art of swimming.

The boys will be taught a step at a time, first learning the proper method of breathing which is one of the most important essentials. This will be followed by various water stunts and games which will be given for the purpose of helping the lads get acquainted with the water. Later they will be taught to float, after which are added the arm and leg movements, which with a little amount of earnest practice results in most boys learning to swim.

The classes for Monday will be held at 10 a. m., 3 and 7.30 p. m., the latter being reserved especially for the older and employed young men and boys. After Monday's session the swimmers will be graded into groups according to their ability and a new schedule of hours arranged.

The water in the big pool will receive an extra heating so as to be of a comfortable temperature for the beginners and everything has been arranged so as to make it a big week of real sport for the lads.

SUES HER HUSBAND TO GET MONEY PAYMENTS

By a suit brought in the superior court, which has been field here with the clerk of the court, Mrs. Bertha Frentz of Brooklyn, N. Y., has taken legal action to compel her husband, Richard Frentz of Stonington, to make the payments of $18 a week to her, according to an agreement which it is alleged has been made. The sum of $756 is now due and payable to her, she claims.

Mr. and Mrs. Frentz were married Dec. 17, 1913 but have been living separately and apart since June 27, 1919. On June 17, 1919, it is alleged in the suit, that they entered into a written agreement to live separately and apart and that Mr. Frentz should pay his wife $18 per month, payable on or before the third day of each month at the residence of the plaintiff. It is alleged that Mrs. Frentz has kept her side of the agreement but that her husband has not made the payments agreed upon.

PEAK ACCIDENT HOUR IS 5 IN AFTERNOON

Five o'clock in the afternoon remains the time of the day when motor vehicle accidents are most likely to occur. That hour has held the record for several years, and a chart showing the hourly distribution of Connecticut motor vehicle accidents during 1925, which has just been completed by the state motor vehicle department, shows that the past year brought no change. Nearly one-tenth of the 22,568 motor vehicle accidents reported to the department in 1925 occurred at about 5 o'clock.

Six o'clock, p. m. is the next most dangerous time to venture out on the highways, judging from this chart and, that for 1924, and 4 p. m. stands third. All the afternoon hours had worse records than any of the morning hours, but 12 o'clock noon proved to be a somewhat hazardous time for pedestrians.

It has been concluded that 5 o'clock has the most motor vehicle accidents chalked up against it because it is the time of the day when traffic is at its peak, what with the factories closing down and pouring great volumes of humanity into the streets and highways, many school children out in the streets at play after class hours and throngs of women and others returning from shopping trips into the trading centers. Not only are automobiles and pedestrians on the street most numerous at about that time, but the maximum number of electric street cars and busses are in service, all contributing to traffic complications. In the city of Hartford alone more than 100 extra trolley cars are pressed into use daily at about 5 o'clock.

The time of day when accidents are least apt to happen, according to the motor vehicle department chart for 1925, is 5 a. m., but the hazards even at that hour are increasing, which undoubtedly is due to the growing use of long-distance motor truck in the early morning hours.

From the scratches on the telegraph pole, the wheelmarks in the sidewalk, and the splintered wood and glass in the highway, it was apparent that the machine was driving towards Yantic when it hit the pole which would be on the left hand side of the road for an automobile traveling in the direction indicated.

QUESTIONABLE METHOD OF DRY ENFORCEMENT AGENTS

Special Officials in Pennsylvania Frequently Purchased Liquor With W. C. T. U. Funds—Fact Disclosed Before the Senate Campaign Funds Committee—Senator Reed Asserted That the Law Was Being Violated in Order That It Might Be Enforced.

WASHINGTON, June 28—(AP)—Frequent purchase of liquor by special agents of the state with money out of a fund raised by the Pennsylvania Women's Christian Temperance Union for enforcement of the dry law was disclosed today before the senate campaign funds committee.

Senator Reed, democrat, Missouri, chairman of the committee, said that the law was violated in order that it might be enforced, but William B. Wright, special counsel to Governor Pinchot, who with Attorney General Woodruff administered the temperance fund, defended the practice of the agents.

"I know of no other way you can obtain evidence upon which to get convictions," he said.

Picking at random from a large number of vouchers covering expenditures from the fund, Senator Reed took up the account of Lawrence M. Knox, which showed expenditures of approximately $75 for liquor from September 17 to October 2.

On some days expenses for this purpose exceeded living costs of the agent. The largest day's liquor bill was $10.50, but it was explained that in two instances the agent had to pay a "cover charge" in the Havana and Martinique hotels in Philadelphia to gather evidence.

Senator Goff, republican, West Virginia, wanted to know if the agents would keep sober when drinking so much whiskey daily, but Wright assured him that they did, explaining that usually they traveled in threes and that the agent paid the liquor bills for all.

The smallest daily total for liquor in Knox's account was 65 cents.

"That must have been a bad day," remarked Chairman Reed amid laughter.

Wright told the committee the usual price for a drink of whiskey was 50 cents and that beer ranged from 15 cents a glass up to 40 cents a bottle. He explained Knox's expenditures, made in 1923, by saying that from his activities the first padlock injunctions in Philadelphia were obtained.

Another of the special agents paid out of the W. C. T. U. fund was J. A. Tatro, who got $250 a month salary and $6 a day expenses.

"Tatro was getting after the denaturing alcohol aristocracy in Philadelphia," Wright explained.

"Then you have a bootleg aristocracy?" asked Senator Reed.

"I should say so," the witness returned.

Wright gave the committee the names of all men who had been his assistants or who had served as special agents, except in the case of four, whom he described as "under-cover" men whose names he did not care to disclose except in executive session.

"This committee does not believe in 'under-cover' government," Senator Reed said, but passing for the time being the question of eliciting the names in public the chairman designated one of the men as "Mr. X.," another as "Mr. Y.," another as "Mr. Z.," and the fourth as "Mr. Zero."

Wright explained that all of these men went around buying liquor in order to bring action against law violators. "Mr. X." traveled alone, buying drinks and then later passing the word along to other agents who did the follow up work and caused the arrests.

Up to last June 4, Wright testified, the state had drawn upon the W. C. T. U. for approximately $110,000 of the $130,000 fund. Explaining the process, he said Mrs. Leah Cobb Marion, treasurer of the W. C. T. U. was the custodian of the fund while it remained in the hands of the temperance organization.

Charles J. Rhoads, of Brown Brothers and Co., Philadelphia bankers, became treasurer of the fund at the request of Governor Pinchot and Mrs. Marion made remittances to him. Wright and Woodruff, as trustees, then drew on Rhoads as the money was needed for enforcement work, but the special counsel explained that the fund in the hands of the state officers never exceeded $4,000.

As the fund would become exhausted, the trustees would make requisition on Rhoads for enough to bring it up again to $4,000 accounting for what had been spent, when the new requisition went in.

A single session of the committee was held today and the examination of Wright was not concluded. He will be heard again tomorrow and the investigators also want to question Attorney General Woodruff, who failed today to respond when his name was called.

Wright explained the attorney general had gone from Harrisburg to attend the Yale-Harvard boat races last week and he had been unable to communicate with him.

CHANGE OF ALIGNMENT ON THE FISK FARM BILL

WASHINGTON, June 28—(AP)—Coalitions that have sprung up in the senate during the long fight over farm legislation were disintegrating today under pressure from the administration, forecasting a different alignment when a vote is taken on the Fess-Tincher farm credits bill, which has President Coolidge's endorsement.

Adhering to the administration's program a number of supporters of the original McNary equalization bill informed party leaders they would vote for the farm credits measure. The switching of sentiment was interpreted by senators as leaving in doubt the vote on the credits bill.

Group leaders declined to hazard a forecast. Senator McNary, republican, Oregon, declaring the bill's fate depended on the democrats while Senator Robinson, Arkansas, the democratic leader, said it depended on Senator McNary's crowd standing."

Senator Fess, republican, Ohio, on the other hand thought the result was in the hands of both groups.

Monday's session was spent in trying to capture votes of passive senators. Representatives of Secretary Jardine were on hand for the administration and he conferred several times in an effort to swing votes over to the credits bill.

While the private discussions were in progress, some relief received here from a ruling by Gen. Lejeune, marine corps commandant, that Sen. Kenyon, democrat, Utah, called the agricultural measures back before the senate on a point of order, defeating an attempt of Senator Cummins, republican, Iowa, to obtain final action on his bill to permit use of corn sugar in the canning of canned goods and other food products. At the same time Senator Lenroot, republican, Wisconsin, withdrew his bill, providing for farm credits.

BOY DROWNED IN THE CONN. RIVER AT PORTLAND

MIDDLETOWN, June 28—(AP)—"An old swimming hole," the Connecticut river, claimed another victim this afternoon.

Andrew Guglielmino, 9, of Pease avenue, this city, and two Portland boys undressed their clothes off on the Portland side of the river in preparation for an afternoon in the water.

"I'll show you how to swim" Andrew said to his companions, and he bounced into the river. That was the last the two Portland boys saw of him.

Half an hour later two rivermen dragging for the body found it on the side of the channel.

TO REINSTATE LAPSED WAR RISK INSURANCE POLICIES

WASHINGTON, June 28—(AP)—The senate passed late today and sent to conference the veterans' rehabilitation bill liberalizing the conditions for reinstating lapsed war risk insurance policies and extending the benefits of vocational rehabilitation which expire tomorrow.

The senate voted to retain several provisions regarding reinstatement of lapsed insurance policies which had been eliminated from the house bill by the senate finance committee.

The senate adopted an amendment by Senator Robinson the democratic leader to extend until June 7, 1927, the period in which veterans who have no hospital record may establish disability originating during their service. The senate committee had eliminated the house provision removing all time limitations.

An amendment by Senator Steck, democrat, Iowa, raising the annual salary of the director of the veterans bureau from $10,000 to $12,000 was adopted. The director, under the measure as amended by the senate, would be authorized to continue vocational training support allowances for not more than two years to any veterans unable to obtain employment.

RIVERS AND HARBORS BILL MAY GO UNTIL NEXT SESSION

WASHINGTON, June 28—(AP)—In an effort to pave the way for adjournment of congress at the end of this week, senate leaders began a quiet campaign today to obtain an agreement to let the rivers and harbors bill go over until the next session with a fixed date for taking it up under limitatio nof debate or for a final vote.

Whether such an agreement can be reached admittedly is problematical but even the most ardent proponents of the waterways measure are about convinced that there is little hope for action at this session even if congress should stay here through next month.

Bevin [illegible] manufacturer of this town, of $30,000 for the library has been withdrawn for the present.

FLORIDA PROMOTER HELD FOR FIRST DEGREE MURDER

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla., June 28—Dr. Eugene M. Elliott, multi-millionaire developer and promoter, was arrested late today on a charge of first degree murder and held without bond.

The arrest of the former college athlete came as the climax to the hearing of a coroners jury investigating the fatal injury of his wife Saturday afternoon at their home in an exclusive residential section here.

Attorneys for Elliott asked for an immediate preliminary hearing.

The inquest was held behind closed doors.

Mrs. Elliott died as a result of a fractured skull, which she was said to have received when she fell backward to the pavement from the rear entrance of their home.

Chief of Police E. D. Vaughn said Elliott told him his wife lost her grip on the door and fell backward, striking her head on a concrete sidewalk. The chief said police had worked on the theory that the woman was already inside the house and that she was shoved or knocked through the door.

The divorce bill filed by Mrs. Elliott last Saturday alleged extreme cruelty and infidelity. It was set forth Elliott had threatened her life in the event she brought suit for divorce.

Police said Elliott had them be ordered his wife away from the house after she returned Saturday from a conference with her attorney. They said Mrs. Elliott, barred at the front door, hurried to the rear door, where she was intercepted by Elliott.

BLOCK ISLAND GROCERS AND MARKETMEN COMPLAIN

BLOCK ISLAND, R. I., June 28—(AP)—Charges that members of the U. S. coastguard here have engaged in trade to the detriment of local merchants form the basis of a complaint forwarded to Washington on behalf of the retail grocers and marketmen of Block Island. Meantime F. B. Lincoln of Wakefield, regional coastguard superintendent, today denied knowledge of alleged practice, which was contrary to the regulations of the service.

Several years ago the authorities at Washington, acting on complaints from residents here, prohibited members of the coastguard service at the three Block Island stations from engaging in the fishing business. It was charged that men fished in their spare time and shipped the product to New York markets. Recently, the local merchants say, the coastguardsmen have launched into the groceries and market business at the expense of the established tradesmen.

A committee of merchants headed by Albert Mitchell has requested U. S. Senator J. Eugene Littlefield to present their protest to the proper authorities sin Washington. The local business men planned to organize this week for further action.

CRUELTY IN WAR NOW BEING WAGED IN SYRIA

DAMASCUS, June 28—(AP)—Syria today is writhing in the throes of one of the cruelest wars ever waged, and charges and countercharges of atrocities of the most revolting sort are constantly being made.

Stories of disembowled men found along the roadside, of others found with their ears cut off and suffering from the most atrocious kinds of mutilation, are common.

Without going into the matter of responsibility for the present situation, the fact remains that Syria, which it was intended should enjoy peace and prosperity under the protection of the League of Nations, is now a country where the hangman operates in the public square.

Whether the journey were made by road or railway, one used to enter Damascus through a long stretch of orchards and running water in pleasant oases, and gardens. Today one passes through barbed wire barricades and danger lurks everywhere.

URGES CONTIUANCE OF LITTLE RED SCHOOL HOUSE

Hale, Augusta, Me., state agent of rural eduncation before the National Education association. She urged improvement in the rural school and the employment of more efficient teachers.

The value of home influence was emphasized by Miss Abigal Eliot, of Boston, in address before the kindergarten department "The home influence is the greatest influence," she said. "What is learned at home will remain."

CANADA UNDERGOING A CHANGE OF GOVERNMENT

OTTAWA, Ont., June 28—(AP)—The Mackenzie King liberal government has resigned and Arthur Meighen, conservative leaders, has been invited to form a new administration in its stead.

Such are the outstanding developments in a day of dramatic surprises and swift action. The house gathered at 3 o'clock fully prepared for a day of battle on the customs report. During the week end since the critical developments of Friday, both liberals and conservatives had prepared moves and counter-moves. But scarcely had the speaker opened the house this afternoon when Premier King rose, and, quickly reading a slip of paper, announced he had advised the governor general to dissolve parliament, that his attorney had declined and that he, as prime minister, had therefore tendered his resignation.

Mr. Meighen suggested a conference between the prime minister and himself on the question of the completion of the session.

"There is no prime minister," Mr. Mackenzie King returned. "May I emphasize that when there is a prime minister, he may come to this house and announce his policy and his wishes."

It was all over in a few minutes. The end had come and the house adjourned almost before the crowded galleries realized what had happened.

As Mr. Meighen left the chamber, he was loudly cheered by his followers. A few moments later, he was on his way to Government house where the governor-general invited him to form a new cabinet.

WAR SERVICE ALIENS ADMITTED TO COUNTRY

NEW YORK, June 28—(AP)—A major in the A. E. F. arrived from France today, the first of 10,000 veterans of foreign birth who until recently were denied free entry to the country for which they fought.

Lucien J. Rode obtained his discharge abroad, where he visited relatives in Belgium before he came here he could not obtain a visa and he was married and settled in France before congress passed the law admitting American war veterans outside quota numbers. With him on the Leviathan came his wife and three year old daughter.

On the same ship, but unknown to Rode, was Colonel E. H. Warner McCabe, who helped lead the fight to get the law passed. He is former military attache at Rome.

Rode will go to Los Angeles, while Colonel McCabe is bound for San Houston, Texas.

The Italian liner Duilio, which arrived later today brought two other United States veterans who were expected until the passage of the law. They were Frank Zenobi and Cesare Conti, both privates, formerly of New Britain, Conn., while the two men are still Italian subjects, they have the privilege of claiming American citizenship, and were sent to Ellis Island as qualified for admission under the non-quota class.

France to Ratify Debt Agreement

Senators and Deputies Who Have Been Hostile Are Being Converted.

PARIS, June 28—(AP)—"The new government wants to get the debt settlement ratified." This was the brief comment made this evening by the spokesman of the French foreign office with reference to opposition to the Washington debt accord manifested in different quarters and various rumors as to the official attitude. The cabinet is understood to have agreed on a policy of early ratification, although the decision will be made to the public only after it has been communicated to parliament.

The apparent hesitation of the new cabinet to take a position in the matter, it is explained in official quarters, is due to the fact that public opinion is not yet sufficiently prepared for ratification. There is good authority for the supposition that M. Caillaux, as well as Premier Briand, is firmly convinced that the settlement must be approved as part of the scheme for stabilization of the franc.

Converts among the senators and deputies who have been hostile to the settlement are being made. It is asserted and the government is confident now a majority will be found in its favor in both houses. The time when the question may opportunely be brought to a decisive issue remains, however, an uncertain quantity. The government will not rise defeat by precipitating matters; neither will it allow the vote on the accord to be put off indefinitely.

The government will, according to well-informed authority, carefully try out the two houses on the question in committee, and then decide as to procedure. The keynote of the policy of the new cabinet as it will be set forth in the ministerial declaration which was substantially agreed upon by, will be rigid economy. The finance measures, which M. Caillaux will present in a few days after the cabinet makes its bow will probably include an increased inheritance tax to finance the sinking fund.

The minister's plans are directed toward the accumulating eight billion francs, in addition to present annual revenue to provide for a sinking fund to domestic and foreign debts and admitting the budget out of all danger of being submerged by fluctuations in prices. Part of this sum will be derived from the inheritance tax, part from reparations payments under the Dawes plan and part from new measures, on the nature of which M. Caillaux is still holding his own counsels.

HOUSTON, Tex., June 28.—(AP)—Charles Ponzi, swindler, who is wanted in Florida and Massachusetts, was arrested today in New Orleans by Deputy Sheriff George Lacy, of Houston. Sheriff T. A. Binford announced here tonight.

"The financial wizard" was taken off the Italian steamer Sic Vos Non Vobis, which it docked at New Orleans, en route from Houston to Genoa, Italy. He was serving as a seaman, the name of Luciani Andrea and had been aboard the vessel since June 8. He went aboard at Tampa.

A hunt for Ponzi was instituted here last week when Sheriff Binford received a tip that the fugitive financier had been in Houston. The tip was said to have come from a dock worker.

The vessel had sailed from Houston, however, before an arrest could be made and Sheriff Binford sent Deputy Lacy to New Orleans on the case.

The arrest was made by George Lacy, a deputy sheriff of Houston, Texas, when the Italian steamer Sic vos non Vobis docked here while en route from Houston to Genoa, Italy. Lacy declared Andrea answered Ponzi's description in every particular.

Lacy said he noticed Andrea in Houston last Tuesday and followed him aboard the Sic vos non Vobis.

A TALK FOR AVIATION FIELD IN NEW HAVEN

NEW HAVEN, June 28—(AP)—The need of a landing field for airplanes in New Haven to give merchants and manufacturers here the advantage of the New York and Boston air mail line opening July 1, was emphasized at a meeting here today of the New Haven chapter of the National Aeronautic association.

NINE PERSONS SHOT DOWN BY A NEGRO IN BALTIMORE

Three of His Victims, Two of Them Policemen, Are Near Death—The Crazed Negro Was Killed by Concerted Fire From the Wounded Men on the Ground and Two Policemen—Shooting Resulted From a Quarrel—The Negro Had Been Released From the Insane Ward at City Hospital a Year Ago.

BALTIMORE, June 28—(AP)—Suddenly crazed, with a rifle and two revolvers in his hands, Vance Lee, 33 year old negro, shot down nine persons in northwest Baltimore in a space of 20 minutes today before he died with 12 police bullets in his body.

Three of his victims, two of them policemen and the other a seven year old negro girl, are near death. Of the others, all are more or less seriously hurt, three were policemen and the rest were bystanders who got in his way.

The injured are: Patrolman Webster Schuman, shot in mouth, may die. He is credited with firing the shot, after he was wounded, that first stopped the demented man.

Police Chauffeur Leroy Lentz, shot in ankle.

Patrolman John R. Collins, shot in hand.

Dr. William Kamurer, shot in leg.

Arthur Wells, negro shot in neck.

Calvin Howard, negro, shot in leg.

Having sent the entire neighborhood in the vicinity of Argyle and Lafayette avenues to cover and with his nine victims ranged about him in the street or crumpled into areaways, Lee buckled, at bay, against a plate glass window, with a bullet wound in his shoulder. A concerted fire from the wounded men on the ground and from the guns of Albert Ludwig and Harry Bates, the only policemen of the seven who had answered riot calls, still on their feet, dropped him to the sidewalk dead. A special riot squad which arrived a few minutes later gathered up the wounded.

Lee shot every policeman who approached him during the 20 minutes before he was shot. He picked three of his victims [illegible] car which was rushing after him.

The shooting originated in a quarrel involving Lee and Wells, one of the wounded negroes. Lee shot Wells with a revolver and then, procuring a rifle, and another revolver, started to terrorize the neighborhood. He had been released from the insane ward at City hospital a year ago.

UNITED STATES TIRES ARE GOOD TIRES

What is a Real Tire Test?

Among the searching tests made on United States Tires is the "Tread Wear Test" which duplicates in a few days the effect of many months of service.

United States Tires are under continual test in our laboratories and on our road test vehicles. Motorcoach tires, for example, are tested under actual service conditions on this United States Rubber Company Test Coach.

Questions and Answers that may be News to You—by a Tire Engineer of the United States Rubber Company

Question—With 20,000,000 cars running in America, does not the experience of users largely take the place of factory tests?

Answer—On the contrary. The very fact that motor transportation is so important in the life of every one imposes an additional obligation for searching tests on the tire manufacturer. The makers of United States Tires do not expect their customers to test their tires for them.

Question—What does the United States Rubber Company Factory Test include?

Answer—Everything from the Tree to the finished Tire. Raw materials are tested before they go into the tires, and the finished tires are tested in the Company's laboratories and on the Company's road test cars, trucks and buses. They are also watched in actual commercial service.

Question—What do these tests prove?

Answer—The material tests insure the quality of material used. The laboratory and road tests of complete tires "prove up" the correctness of manufacturing processes.

Question—What raw materials are tested?

Answer—Cotton cord, which furnishes the strength and flexibility of the tire; rubber, which binds the various parts of the tire together and forms the tread or wearing surface; compounding ingredients, which we mix with the rubber to give it the necessary qualities; and, steel wire, which is used in making the beads of the tire.

Question—What tests are made on the cord?

Answer—Cord going into the manufacture of Web Cord for United States Tires is tested for strength, stretch, size, twist, ply, length of staple, and freedom from imperfections.

Question—What tests are made on Rubber?

Answer—Even though the quality and uniformity of Sprayed Rubber is controlled by the processes used on our plantations in the Far East, every shipment received at our factories is again tested for uniformity and also, after mixing with sulphur, it is tested for its rate of vulcanization, its tensile strength and stretch.

Question—What tests are made of compounding ingredients?

Answer—Compounding ingredients are tested to determine their purity and uniformity. They are practically all in powder form and even the degree of fineness to which they have been ground is tested.

Question—What tests are made on Steel Wire?

Answer—Steel wire is given a chemical analysis to determine whether it meets our specifications, and it is also tested for tensile strength and elongation.

Question—Are United States Tires tested alongside of other makes?

Answer—Yes. These tests are conducted daily in our laboratories and on our road test vehicles.

Question—What is the object of these competitive tests?

Answer—To maintain the superiority of our design and construction.

Question—Does the fact that a large number of tires of a certain design and construction have given satisfactory service obviate the necessity for further tests on tires of the same kind?

Answer—No. Vehicle design and use, and road conditions are constantly changing. Tires that gave excellent satisfaction ten years ago are obsolete today in design and construction.

Question—How does the United States Rubber Company keep abreast of these constantly changing conditions?

Answer—It has a corps of factory trained technical experts in different sections of the country, continually checking the service our tires are rendering under actual operating conditions.

Question—Do all companies test their tires in this way?

Answer—Most all companies make tests of some sort. Very few, if any, carry them to the extent that they are carried by the United States Rubber Company.

DANIELSON

TOOK CHANCE HIMSELF BUT PROTECTED LITTLE BOY

(Special to the Bulletin)

DANIELSON, June 28—Nothing much more serious than a wrecked motor truck could be charged up this afternoon against the first grade crossing accident that has happened in Danielson in a number of years. Royal Choquett drove his truck at the Franklin street crossing against the side of a locomotive hauling the northbound passenger train due here at 3.41 p. m. Sensing that a crash was imminent Choquett tossed from the truck a little boy that was riding on the driver's seat beside him, the boy escaping without any injuries while Choquett himself received only the most minor injuries.

At the home of the bride's parents on Spring street Monday afternoon at 2 o'clock, Miss Helen Dodge Nash, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Fred J. Nash, and Elmer Elliott Ellsworth, son of Mr. and Mrs. Edward S. Ellsworth of Williamsville, were united in marriage by Rev. Roger U. Stenson, pastor of the Methodist Episcopal church. The bride was given in marriage by her father.

The home was attractively decorated with ferns, daisies and buttercups and in the living room where the ceremony was performed, there were long streamers of crepe paper and a bell with an effect fashioned of the same [illegible]. The wedding march from Lohengrin was played by Miss Marjorie I. Gaffney, [illegible] party entered for the ceremony and during the marriage Miss Gaffney played I Love You Truly, with Mendelssohn's wedding march for the recessional. The bride was attended by Miss [illegible] sister of the groom, as bridesmaid and Matthew L. [illegible] as best man, who served overseas with Mr. Ellsworth during the World war, was best man. Miss Katherine Nash, little sister of the bride, was the flower girl.

The bride's gown was trimmed with [illegible] and was worn by the bride [illegible] trimmed with [illegible]. Her shower was a shower of bride's roses and lilies of the valley. The maid of honor wore a green crepe de chine and her bouquet was of pink sweet peas. The flower girl was dressed in pink and she carried a basket of sweet peas.

Following the ceremony a reception for the bride and groom was held. Mr. and Mrs. Ellsworth were showered with congratulations and confetti.

Mr. Ellsworth gave to New Hampshire for the summer at Lake Winnepesaukee and they will make their home in Bridgewater, Mass., where Mr. Ellsworth is connected with the Hollis Manufacturing company. For three years Mr. Ellsworth was in charge of the training school at the Connecticut School in Williamsville. The bride received a great number of beautiful gifts, including furniture, silver, linen, cut glass and money. She is a graduate of Killingly high school in the class of 1919, and of Willimantic Normal school in the class of 1921. Following her graduation from Normal school she taught for a year in Voluntown and the past school year was teacher in the East Brooklyn school.

PEN SHOP HOUSE BURNED TO GROUND AT WEST BROOKLYN

(Special to the Bulletin)

DANIELSON, June 28—A dwelling house on the Pen Shop road was burned to the ground in West Brooklyn Monday afternoon despite every effort made to save the building. It was occupied by Zeno Zukas and family, including a number of children. It appears that Mrs. Zukas left the house, in which a fire was burning, on an errand for a few minutes and when she was gone some clothing on the stove blazed and the fire became incapable of handling. It was a very serious situation. On Mrs. Zukas's return she found the interior of the house ablaze. A telephone message to Danielson asked aid from the local department. In the first place the big pumper is a piece of apparatus that cannot be used to any advantage here and on account of having solid tires cannot be used for a long run except in a real emergency. Chief A. H. Woodward was unwilling to help out, though many people went to see the fire. The Putnam chemical truck was rushed to the fire, but was ineffective against a fire that had gained such headway and the flames licked the entire structure until they had reduced a considerable amount of household goods, including a piano, to a tangled mass of twisting workers.

The house was a story and a half [illegible] and had two tenements. It was owned by Mrs. Ida Bradford of North Attleboro. She had not occupied the premises for several years and rented part of the house to Mr. Zukas. The property had a value of about [illegible] and is covered by insurance.

Dance in Pettee's hall, Danielson, Wednesday, June 30, auspices Killingly Council, O. U. A. M. Fine dance, everyone welcome.—Adv.

Thursday brings the opening of the trout fishing season of 1926. It so happens that Thursday is an open day for fishing at Alexander's lake, and that fact has been certainly noted by fishermen who will try their luck on that particular body of water on the opening day of the season. Game wardens have given notice as to bass fishing and are familiar with the opening date of the season, so it will be up to the fishermen to have their tackle in readiness and [illegible] not to keep short fish—or more or less than the day's legal allowance of them.

We always recommend judicious buying of meats, but at the same time a certain definite aim to save [illegible] to a point in our savings department. The Windham County National Bank, Danielson, Conn.—Adv.

The first call for the services of the new fire truck came several weeks came Monday when it was used when a chimney fire [illegible] for a few minutes.

RAIDING THE COUNTRYSIDE

Much sympathy is always shown for the farmers whose rights are constantly being disregarded by trespassers, who are not content with trespassing but are disposed to damage and destroy whatever seems to be necessary for their pleasure.

If there was a bit more consideration shown to property owners in the country there would be found a spirit of generosity and kindness, but it cannot be expected when the city visitors feel free to do as they please with what belongs to someone else and then give them the laugh as they [illegible] resentment is natural under such conditions. It is no more than the city dweller would show if [illegible] going along the streets felt [illegible] blossoms and plants from [illegible] gardens and boxes.

No swimming hole ever held a much more enthusiastic crowd of boys than did the Y. M. C. A. pool Monday, when the boys took their initial "ducks" in the opening lessons of the "Learn to Swim" campaign which will be held at the "Y" every day of this week.

"Oh boy, the water's great!" "Gee its some swell" and other youthful expressions clearly indicated the joy of the boys as they entered the clear, sparkling water of the big pool, and from present indications a good percentage of the lads will be successful in learning the art of swimming before the week is over.

A program of the most notable lecturers and psychics in America has been arranged.

BEAUMONT PROGRAMME SHOWS OLD LEBANON COMMON

The programme for the Dr. Beaumont memorial dedication at Lebanon this (Tuesday) afternoon at 4 o'clock d. s. t., contains a picture of Lebanon Common which was drawn on June 3, 1835 by John Watson Barber (b 1798, d 1858) a diligent recorder in picture and word of Connecticut and other New England scenes, and first printed in his "Connecticut Historica. Collections" New Haven 1836. It probably shows the Common substantially as it was in Beaumont's day, and the buildings are, with one exception, still standing. The picture is printed by courtesy of Andrew Keogh, Esq., librarian, from an electrotype of the original wood block engraved by Barber, now in possession of the Yale university library.

THREE NORWICH DRIVERS SUMMONED TO COURT

NEW LONDON, June 28.—Norwich automobile drivers "got in bad" with the New London police Sunday and today three of them are scheduled for presentation in the police court tomorrow morning for various infractions of the state and city automobile laws.

The alleged offender, whose case is the most serious, is Fred L. DeWitt, 302 Central avenue, Norwich, who was arrested tonight charged with reckless driving and upon complaint of Mrs. Frank L. McGuire, Vauxhall street and wife of Attorney McGuire.

DeWitt is employed by the New England Transportation company as operator of a bus running between Norwich and New London. This evening when the bus was passing through Huntington street on its way to the Union station it collided with the automobile operated by Mrs. McGuire at the corner of Church street. Mrs. McGuire had driven her automobile almost across Huntington street, on her way to Broad street, when the heavy bus struck the rear end of Mrs. McGuire's car and caused considerable damage. Mrs. McGuire made complaint to the police and after DeWitt was arrested he made a counter complaint against Mrs. McGuire.

The second alleged offender is James Emerson, R. F. D. No. 4. Emerson was at Ocean Beach Sunday and it is claimed that he parked his automobile in front of a driveway, which is a violation of the city's parking laws. His auto was tagged, but when Emerson discovered that he had been summoned to court he approached Sergeant Samuel Hick in the matter and declared that he was informed he could park his auto where he did by the police officer on the beat. The charge against Emerson was not pressed then, but, today, when Sergeant Hick interviewed the officer, who, it was claimed, had given permission to Emerson to park in front of the driveway, the officer flatly denied the assertion accredited to him, whereupon Acting Prosecuting Attorney Perry J. Hollandersky instructed Captain Pinney to order Emerson into court. If Emerson can be located tonight by state police he will be presented in the police court tomorrow morning, otherwise he will be presented the day following his being located and summoned.

Still another alleged violator is Richard C. Moran, 51 Green avenue, Norwich, who was ordered into court by Patrolman William Riordan this afternoon. The city has established a restricted parking area on a certain part of the west side of Green street, the parking being restricted to 45 minutes. Officer Riordan alleges that Moran parked his auto in excess of that time while Moran declares that he did not violate the ordinance. He will be presented in court tomorrow morning.

METHODISTS HELD PICNIC AT MOHEGAN PARK

Trinity Methodist Episcopal church and Sunday school held its outing at Mohegan park Saturday afternoon, over 100 going by automobiles from the church and enjoying the programme in spite of the rain. The Men's class arranged for the transportation under the direction of Robert McNeely.

A ball game that was started between the girls and the boys was broken up in the third inning by the rain. The teams: Girls—Mary Boardman p, Evelyn Wheeler c, Marcia Stanton 1b, Fay Hill 2b, Rita Greenlaw 3b, Mary Phillips ss, Henrietta Frink rf, Boys—James Graham p, George Greenlaw Jr. c, Paul Genter 1b, Robert Graham 2b, Joe Haddad 3b, Henry Ladd lf, Frank Haeck cf.

Physical Director E. J. Fritz had charge of the sports and games, some held on the grounds, but others in the pavilion when the rain drove the picnickers in. In the clothes pin race, Mrs. Greenlaw was first, Mrs. Graham second.

The nail driving contest for men was won by Andrew Crowe with Edwin Hawkins second; for the boys, Harold Frink, first; James Graham second; and for the girls, Evelyn Wheeler, first; Rita Greenlaw, second. In the finals the boys defeated the girls.

Lemonade was served under the direction of Mrs. E. J. Jones and coffee under the direction of Mrs. Alvin H. Lewis. The general committee had Edwin Floyd for chairman among the men and Mrs. J. Harlow Graham among the women.

PIANO PUPILS GIVE FINE RECITAL PROGRAMME

At Trinity Methodist Episcopal church Monday evening the pupils of Mrs. Olive Riley Roberts gave an excellent recital before an audience that almost filled the Sunday school rooms. The listeners were treated to as delightful a program of music as has been given in Norwich by similar groups of musicians. Applause upon applause greeted the players after their renditions, which were in pleasing and professional style. The program was carried out as follows:

WATCHMAN AND SEA SLED MISSING FROM GROTON

Paddy Fenton, 26 of Poquonnock, employed as watchman and the Groton plant of Sea Sled Corporation, is missing and so is a $3,000 sea sled, which it was part of his duty to watch.

Fenton punched his clock on the second floor of the office building, but was taken, partially consumed, was found on a bench in the boiler house.

Fenton's dog, a collie, was also found in the boiler house, whining and crying for his master. There were no signs of a scuffle about the yards, and it is not known whether Fenton disappeared voluntarily or was kidnapped.

One theory advanced was that Fenton might have intercepted an attempt to steal the sea sled, and was set upon, beaten and thrown into the river by the marauders. Another theory advanced was that he was kidnapped by thieves who stole the sea sled and took the watchman with him to prevent his giving an alarm.

Police officials of the shore towns of Connecticut, Rhode Island and Long Island have been requested to keep a lookout for the vessel. The sea sled is the sort of vessel is capable of about 50 miles an hour and therefore the person or persons who took the craft would have been able to cover a considerable distance before the theft of the boat was discovered.

WATER DEPARTMENT OFFICERS ARE ALL RE-ELECTED

At the organization meeting of the board of water commissioners, held Monday evening in the water office at the court house all the elective officers were re-elected. This puts the following into office again: President Frank H. Quinlen, supervisor, William H. Callahan; cashier, Thaddeus Leahy; assistant cashier, Miss Mazie Maloney; inspector, Neil Bresnahan.

Outside of this only routine business was transacted the full membership of the board being present, which includes the three democratic members, Frank H. Quinlen, Arthur L. Story, and Joseph A. Fitzgerald and the two republican members, John A. Mitchell and Charles W. Barton.

INCIDENTS IN SOCIETY

A recent guest at the home of Fred Johnson of 129 Broadway was Frank Hyde, of New Haven.

Miss Katharine Hempstead has returned home from Wellesley college where she has been attending the reunion of her class. For the boat races she entertained a party of young people for her guests, Miss Loretta Ann Davis, of Cleveland, Ohio, and Miss Dorothy E. Koop of Allentown, Pa.

Among the guests at Cinderella Inn, Quaker Hill, Monday afternoon, was Mrs. H. E. Hasty of Uncasville, who entertained a number of friends at a birthday party in honor of her little daughter, Ruth. After the Yale-Harvard regatta on the Thames river Friday Mr. and Mrs. F. B. Craven of Uncasville entertained a party of seven at the inn.

MISS GRACE ABBOTT ON THE CHILD LABOR LAW

PHILADELPHIA, June 28—(AP)—Motives behind the opposition to child labor laws by manufacturers associations and big business men were questioned before thousands of the country's educators today by Miss Grace Abbott, chief of the children's bureau of the United States department of labor.

Speaking before the annual convention of the National Education association, Miss Abbott asserted that when manufacturers associations and other big business organizations could not find another reason for opposing child labor laws, they spread the idea that poor boys and girls should not be sent to school past the lower grades.

"This propaganda," declared the speaker, "has convinced many parents they are over-educating their children. Back of this opposition is the desire of the manufacturers and business men to get poor boys and girls into their kitchens and factories. They always evade the issue. They never plead industry's cause. If the child labor measure is a national law they stick up for state rights. If it is a proposed state law, they base their opposition on the contention that the rights of communities would be outraged."

Addressing the general session today, Robert R. Smith, of the Chicago Normal school, declared the radio was "dumping culture into the average home in carload lots." He said every school should be supplied with radio receiving outfits and added:

Wood Shingles

Some Things About Them You Ought to Know

SHINGLES are made of various weather resisting woods, cedar, pine, red-wood, etc. Some stain well, others are better adapted to paint or to weathering. Some are cut larger than others for appearance sake; some are better adapted for flat pitch roofs than others.

All of these things have to be considered when ordering wood shingles. All of these we are familiar with and would be glad to tell you of.

KAPLAN KNOCKS OUT GARCIA IN 10TH IN FURIOUS ATTACKS ON CHALLENGER

HARTFORD, June 28.—(AP)—Louis (Kid) Kaplan, king of the featherweight division, scored a technical knockout over Bobby Garcia, sturdy soldier-boxer of Baltimore, in the tenth round of a 15-round championship match in the new Hartford velodrome on the banks of the picturesque Connecticut river, tonight.

A crowd of 15,000 spectators saw the pugilistic pride of the Nutmeg state floor his challenger seven times before Referee Young McAuley, Bridgeport, stepped in to put an end to the uneven encounter and award the champion's right hand its meed of victory. Just 51 seconds of the round had expired when the end came.

Kaplan toasted during the early rounds of the fight when he opened up a slashing attack which lasted until the challenger was declared unfit to continue by Referee McAuley.

In the latter period of the fight Manager Lou Arnold, Meriden, Conn., saw Garcia's gameness and aggressiveness and praises elevated him to the featherweight throne in the New York state athletic commission's tournament to determine a successor to Johnny Dundee, whom the little Italian abdicated because of his inability to make weight.

Kaplan took the first three rounds of the fight, but Garcia was never counted out. Little did Kaplan realize that Garcia had been saving his best punches for the eighth round, however, for it was in that session that the challenger's right fist flashed over a smiling face and crossed with his right and left hooks, toppled the champion to the canvas. Six strokes of the referee's arm and Kaplan came up, apparently none the worse for his unexpected trip to the floor.

Sensing a break in the contest, Kaplan followed up his advantage with both hands and a flurry of body blows and a right to the jaw relegated Garcia to the canvas. He took six counts, one for each time he dropped to the knee and then on the stroke of the vertical Kaplan was on him in a moment and a volley of right flashed downward. Two straight ended the fight and then two left hooks for Garcia.

His seconds jumped into the ring and dragged the floundering challenger to his chair and worked feverishly over him. He was revived by the use of salts and water and came up on the bell with unsteady legs.

For a moment it appeared he would survive the terrid ordeal but Kaplan, cool and calm in the face of the champion, was not to be hurried by the task. He boxed, stepped around in little jog and then bounced a right uppercut into Garcia's solar plexus, horizontal again for his foe on the canvas. He heard the count of nine and came up.

Another right sent him down again and he took five. He was up only a moment and another volley of rights with both gloves found Garcia for the third time of the round. He took three, came up unsteadily, reeled into a clinch. By now Kaplan and blocking effectively. Garcia revived until the bell sounded.

The tenth was the end. They mixed and wrestled. Then Kaplan, a Garcia swam, measured him with a left and poured a heartening [illegible] him. Garcia's left was dazed, [illegible] took the glove flush on the jaw, knees sagged and he drooped to the canal time. Referee McAuley stopped the fight and Garcia slumped up, could not keep his balance and the referee stepped in and [illegible]

Cohen Outpoints Tendler

Tendler 145 3-4.

The fight was a torrid slugging match from the start. Cohen had a decided margin in the opening rounds, taking nearly every one up to the eighth. Tendler appeared to be slugging until the eighth when he caught Cohen with a left hook and followed with a right which floored Cohen. The Holyoke boy was out but the bell sounded after two counts had been tolled and his seconds dragged him to his corner and [illegible] to revive him.

[illegible] the Holyoke boy's favor and was too [illegible] and Referee Jim Keefe of Waterbury [illegible] the decision in his favor.

SUZANNE HAS WITHDRAWN FROM WIMBLEDON TENNIS

WIMBLEDON, England, June 28—(AP)—Suzanne Lenglen, incomparable on the tennis court and six time Wimbledon champion, has withdrawn from the women's singles in the Golden Jubilee tournament, which might have given her a seventh crown.

Beset by ills, which in the opinion of her medical attendants make it inadvisable for her to play, she announced early today she would not appear on the singles court. She is probably out of the tournament altogether.

"I have done my best to carry on," said Suzanne, in telephoning to the club to give her decision to retire, "but I regret to further because of the pain I am suffering."

The American contingent today suffered a severe loss when Mrs. L. A. Godfree eliminated Miss Elizabeth Ryan in the third round of the women's singles in a match which went to the limit, despite Miss Ryan's obvious weakness due to recent illness.

In four other matches, however, Americans won. Howard Kinsey came through as a semi-finalist by defeating P. D. B. Spence, South Africa, with comparative ease, 6-3, 6-3, 3-6, 6-3.

Vincent Richards and Howard Kinsey had little trouble in advancing to the fourth round by disposing of S. W. Robb and B. Meyer in three straight sets, 6-4, 6-0, 6-3.

Mrs. Molla Mallory and D. M. Greig in the mixed doubles had a hard passage through the first round, but defeated Mme. Mathieu and Jacques Brugnon in a full length match, 6-2, 3-6, 6-1. Mrs. Marion Jessup paired with Georges Crolerees, Great Britain, Davis Cup contender, defeated Mrs. R. W. Jackson and E. Zemla 6-2, 1-6,

SUSIE ATTENDS HORSE RACES AND ALSO YALE-HARVARD REGATTA

Susie during the past week took in a number of the sporting events held in eastern Connecticut including the meeting of the Bay State circuit and the Yale-Harvard crew race. Her letter follows:

Dear Sports Ed.:

Seein' how I didn't work last week I hadda lotta time to take in the sports events that was held right in our own back yard it would seem. First they was them horse races at the Fair grounds and then that Yale-Harvard boat race on the river. Between the two of them events I don't know whether you row a horse or drive a boat or visa worser, but anyhow I gets a lotta fun watching other peoples what knows what its all about.

Them horse races was good and I went all three days which set me back quite a piece of change seeing how it cost a buck to get in and four bits to sit down but I ain't kicking none 'cause its all in my sporting edication. The boy friend goes one day to the races but that was enough for him so I goes alone the other two day and I has just as good a time although there ain't nobody to ask no questions of. There's one grate trouble with horse racing the way I looks at it and that is them horses look so much alike you don't know who has won until the feller in the little box across from the grandstand tells you I told this to the boy friend and he says look at the numbers of the arms of the drivers so I watches the drivers but then I dont see which horse is in front.

The first race what I see out there is a good one with everybody standing up in their seats and yelling their heads off just as if them horses knew what they was saying. Just before the race the boy asks me what horse I thinks would win and I picks out a horse what looks good to me but he's a lemon when it comes to running around that track. I bets the boy a necktie against a box of candy but that old plug what I picks out runs so long in one place that the rest of the horses is in the stable by the time he gets around twice. A feller what heard how I bet says to me, "That's too bad, kid, but that horse might have won if he hadn't stopped." "Gosh, I says, ain't that tough, when he broke I went broke and the boy has got a new necktie coming to him. Believe me I don't make no more bets on horse races 'cause you cant never tell what them animals is going to do when they gets out on that track.

I ain't the only one what makes a fool bet at them races. They is a feller sitting in front of me what was a wise guy and he knew all them fellers with the pretty colored silk pajama tops what droved them horses. He was telling everybody what would listen all he knew about the races which warnt much but it took him a long time to tell it. Finally seeing he didn't get no rise outta anybody he flashes a few toadskins and declares he'll bet 25 good bucks that a certain horse will win the next heat, in a certain race. Some guy what has been sitting quiet like and not saying nothing reaches over and taps that feller on the shoulder and says, "All right brother I'll cover that bet," and he pulls outa roll what would choke any one of them race horses. The bet is laid and then the quiet chap asks the loud speaker if he is satisfied and the wise cracker says "Sure."

Then the quiet feller says, "Lister brother, everybody has heard about enough of how much you know, which ain't nothing, so I'm just going to show you how much you know. That horse what you just bet on is all through for the day and has run his race and won it, so I guess you lose." Well you oughtu have seen the sickly green look what come over that loud-mouthed fellers face. He warnt no quitter for he just says "You win, brother, it was my mistake." Gosh but he's a sick looking feller but he don't have no more loud talk and in a few minutes he gets up to leave when the quiet chap says "Wait a minute brother, here's your 25 bucks. I ain't got the heart to keep it but I just wanted to show you that you don't know everything."

They's a lotta funny things you see at a horse races but if you don't know nothing about them don't do no betting. Somebody tells me that the free-for-all was going to be a big event on the last day so I goes out but there weren't nothing free about it at all. I hadda pay my buck to get in just the same.

Well on Friday me and the boy friend goes to the boat races down the river and they is pretty good seeing how I evens up the bet with the boy friend, me picking Yale and he taking Harvard. I never see so many folks what is crazy about boat racing what don't know nothing about it same as me. We goes down the road to a place near Jerome farm and cuts across the lots to the river. I thinks here's where we sees something for nothing but alas it was not so. We got about in the middle of a pasture and I was sporting a pair of stockings what had been tored to pieces, when some jane with a clothes pin bag comes tearing at us and demands ten bits apiece for crossing the land. The boy starts to row her argument but I says pay the woman for she's probably one of them poor farmers what ain't got more'n three automobiles. The kid kicks up the money and we climbs over a wall into a nother lot. Here's a nother woman only she's charging a half a buck for her land and everybody's paying it too. We was just going to cough up the dough when she stops five or six people sneaking by her on the other side so she says you wait here a minute and she goes and tackles them other peobuck for she ain't more'n fifty feet buck for she ain't more fifty feet from us when I gives the kid a kick in the shins and says get going Man O'War and we beats it. Well them horses at them races didn't have nothing on us the way we went through the lots but we saved enough in pasture fees to buy a new pair of stockings.

Well they is a big crowd down on the banks of the river some having a great time with their lunches all spread out and the ants all crawling in the food but they don't seem to mind. Finally we gets a place and sits down but we gets right up again seeing how we picks a ant hill for a nice place to camp. Well, between chasing ants off my anatomy and watching for them races I is kept pretty busy. By and by somebody yells here they come and everybody stands up. I thinks I is going to get a thrill but all I can see is a coupla specks coming up the river. When they gets closer I can see they is fellers rowing a coupla long big boats what looks like would sink most any minute. The boy has a pair of opera glasses which I grabs when they is almost at the finish and I puts them to my eyes but its kind of funny them boats seem like they was going backwards and about that time somebody yells Yale wins and the horns and whistles start blowing and everything. Then the boy looks at me and the glasses and says, "Why you darned fool you was looking through them glasses backwards." Say Ed, ain't that a hot thing to do. I might as well as been a coupla miles from them races as to look at them through the wrong end of the glass and we paid two bits to get close to 'em.

Well Ed, So Long,
Yours as ever,
SUSIE.

JEWETT CITY

WOUNDED CROW WILL PROBABLY FLY AGAIN

(Special to the Bulletin)

JEWETT CITY, June 28—Monday afternoon a big black crow, evidently a member of a great flock that was passing over the borough at a consid... height, suddenly fell behind the others and dropped to the street.

The unusual occurrence caused no little excitement in Postoffice square. Mr. Crow, although smitten with dire misfortune, in that a stray shot, probably fired by some irate farmer as the flock were visiting his corn field, had broken his wing, was not wholly without comfort. He dropped close to Carey's drug store and the man to pick up the struggling crow was young Doctor Sweet grandson of the late Dr. Byron L. Sweet. The lad took the injured bird home, and, as he possesses ... the skill left ... Crow ... grandfather, Mr. Crow ... again.

Farmer Brown's Boy Traces the Robber

Patience often will attain
What nothing else could ever gain.
—Farmer Brown's Boy.

Farmer Brown's Boy had lost three pigeons. Each one had been taken in mid-air in full flight. At first he had not known just who it was who was carrying away these pigeons. He had known it was a hawk he had never suspected. Now he knew who it was. He knew it was Killer the Duck Hawk who took them. A falcon. He remembered having read how in the old days in England and France a favorite sport of kings and nobles had been the training of falcons, and how closely related to royalty were those used in [illegible]. NEW LONDON RESTAURANT OWNERS AND EMPLOYES ARRESTED FOLLOWING FIRE

(Special to the Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, June 28—Following a fire that for a time threatened to destroy the two and one-half story wooden building, Nos. 87-91-93-95 Bank street, occupied by three stores and a lodging house, Gregory Pappas, 26, of 42 Golden street, proprietor of the Sea Food restaurant, owner of the building; James Stavros, 42, cook, 95 Bank street, and Arthur Boonfis, 22, cook, also of 95 Bank street, were arrested this morning by State Police Officer Henry Albright, charged with arson. In default of bail of $5,000 each, the accused are locked up at the police station awaiting trial in the police court tomorrow morning.

Pappas purchased the restaurant about a year ago and it is understood to have paid $2,000 for the business. He carried insurance of approximately $11,000.

The restaurant was extensively damaged by fire and water, while the stock of the Luggage Shop 87, and the fruit store of John Gentilello, 91, were extensively damaged by water and smoke.

The fire occurred about 1:30 o'clock. When discovered the entire kitchen was enveloped in flames and an alarm was rung in from Box 321, corner of Bank and Golden streets. When the first apparatus arrived at the burning building, great clouds of smoke were pouring into the street and the lodgers, who had been aroused by pedestrians, were hurrying to the streets. Entrances to both the front and rear of the building were smashed and as water was directed upon the flames in the kitchen the odor of oil was most perceptible. The fire had gained considerable headway by the time the firemen arrived and a mighty volume of water was needed to subdue the flames. Because of the great quantity of water used, the stores in the other part of the building were given a thorough soaking.

After the fire it is claimed that oil soaked rags had been distributed about the kitchen making excellent feed for the flames. This morning Acting Prosecuting Attorney Perry J. Hollandersky was acquainted with the facts, as alleged and he summoned the state police so that an investigation might be made. Lieutenant [illegible] was assigned to the case and [illegible] upon the arrest of the [illegible] Pappas, Stavros and Boonfis. Acting Prosecuting Attorney Hollandersky [illegible] Lieutenant Officer Albright [illegible] in the securing of the large [illegible] evidence for the use of the grand jury called by Judge [illegible].

It was also stated that when the firemen inspected the place after the fire it was disclosed that there were no foodstuffs whatever in the ice box although the restaurant was not closed until nearly midnight.

Carl Angle, sailor stationed at the submarine base, was arrested this afternoon by Sergeant Nelson Smith on a warrant charging him with driving his automobile on the 17th inst. while under the influence of liquor. He furnished a surety bond of $50 for his appearance in the police court tomorrow morning.

Miss Ella Howard, stenographer in the office of City Manager William A. Ely, is enjoying her annual vacation of two weeks.

Harold Terhune, New York, was released from the New London county jail this morning, where he had been serving a sentence of four months for [illegible] worthless check. Terhune was arrested in Baltimore after leaving New London and brought back to this city for trial. He negotiated a worthless check on R. B. Rutherford, Lyman and did not have an account at the bank upon which the check was drawn.

John R. McLean, who claims to reside in Rockville, and who has been employed by the Pickers Island, was arrested this afternoon by Patrolmen Harry A. Murphy and Walter O'Neil charged with the theft of a Ford automobile and a camera belonging to Lawrence Dubois. When the young man was arrested the camera was found in McLean's pocket and the automobile was later found abandoned on Winthrop street.

Denison drove his automobile to Water street and parked it while he attended to some business. When he returned he discovered the automobile missing and reported its theft and that of the camera, which had been in the automobile, to the police. Patrolmen Murphy and O'Neil were assigned to the case and going to Water street, they found McLean, near the corner of Water and Douglass streets. Residents of that vicinity declared that they had observed McLean loitering near where the stolen automobile had been parked. McLean was taken to the police station for the purpose of questioning him and when searched the camera was found. An hour later the automobile was recovered. McLean is well known to the police, having a long police court record.

The funeral of Orion L. Fowler was held Sunday afternoon at 2 o'clock at his late residence, 6 Beckwith street and was attended by a large concourse of mourners, including a delegation of members of Pequot lodge, I. O. O. F., of which order Mr. Fowler had been a member many years. The services were conducted by Rev. J. Romeyn Danforth. Members of Pequot lodge acted as bearers and conducted the committal service in Jordan cemetery.

Katie Kalinowski, 7, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Stephen Kalinowski, 7 Fourth street, died at Home Memorial hospital Saturday night. The funeral was held this morning at 8 o'clock when Rev. Joseph Raniszewski celebrated mass at Our Lady of Perpetual Help church. Burial was in St. Mary's cemetery.

John James Jr., infant son of Mr. and Mrs. John J. Repetti, died Saturday night at the residence of his parents, Broad street extension, Waterford. The funeral occurred this afternoon at 2 o'clock at the residence of the child's parents, Rev. Joseph A. Elder, pastor of the Huntington street Baptist church, officiating. Burial was in Cedar Grove cemetery.

The funeral of Edward T. Drea was held this morning at 10 o'clock at St. Mary's church of the Sea chorus and was attended by a large gathering of mourners. A mass of requiem was celebrated by Rev. Michael Keegan. The bearers were Frank Kelley, Edward Smith, John Daw, Richard Dolan, Frank Miller and Peter Feraci. At the close of the mass Edward S. Murray sang, Beautiful Land on High. Burial was in St. Mary's cemetery.

Mrs. Henrietta M. Peabody, about 55, wife of George W. Peabody, died this afternoon at her residence, 21 Franklin street. Mrs. Peabody had been ill [illegible] years.

The police department and the police court today cleaned out a disreputable place at 16 John street, when the woman who conducts it was fined $50 and the nearly a dozen frequenters were fined $10 each. Nina Bryan set up a defense that she occupied four rooms at the place just for her own comfort and that she might entertain friends who came there, and that she could show her hospitality without receiving any money and without fixing a price. She sang her sobsong to the court, but it did not have the effect of securing her release till she settled. She was powdered like a clown when she admitted that she was guilty as charged and then went on with the statement about occupying four rooms without having a use for them. She did admit that she supplied homebrew at times, but she did not come under accusation for violating the Volstead act. The frequenters were colored girls and men with one exception. They were each assessed something more than $20 to have their liberty restored. Mamie Holloway was the cause of the raid. She was looking for her husband and told the police that he was at the Bryan place and she represented that the crowd there was not particular as to what they said or did. Four policemen descended on the Bryan house and found that Mamie was probably telling the truth. The police officers have been keeping an eye on the Bryan place a long time for it has been on the suspected list. It is in a neighborhood that has been ploughed time and again, and neither Nina or Tenor or anyone else is to be permitted to continue there to the disturbance of the neighborhood and disregard of law.

Sunday and Saturday night brought half a dozen or more drunks and automobile law violators to the court. John Colletti of Norwich was fined $100 for the reckless operation of an auto and for using a car on which the brakes were defective. He admitted that he was guilty. He ran down the machine of Mrs. Henrietta Bowers and damaged it to a considerable extent when the machines met on Ocean avenue.

Francis Gunderson was sentenced to stay in jail three months for the theft of surgical instruments from the destroyer Fanning of the coast guard service. Gunderson had been employed as a water tender on that ship but he was discharged. Then the instruments were missed and search revealed them in the locker of the discharged man. He denied that he knew about the theft and said that when he went after his clothing on the ship he found that his locker had been broken open. The locker was intact when the stolen property was found there.

POLICE PAY INCREASE LEFT FOR CONSIDERATION

(Special to the Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, June 28—The members of the police department petitioned the city council this evening for an increase in pay. They did not get it, but their request was received for record and future consideration. The petition recited that the members of the department in New London were receiving less money for their services than are the policemen in any city in the state. The claim that New London officers do more work than do the officers of most cities in the state in that we have some 5,000 men of the navy here constantly and that conditions are such that the best efforts of the police department are required to cope with such conditions. Councilor May asked that consideration be given to the petition but at the suggestion of Mayor Fox the matter was received for consideration in the future, meaning that it must be considered at a later date to be taken care of in the budget, which has already been made up for the year.

The matter of the alleged encroachment by the Pequot Bath and Beach club was brought to the council in a report submitted to the city manager and to the council by the director of law, Thomas L. Tredand. It pointed out that the city since 1923 has collected taxes unlawfully from Lucius L. Walton and recommended that such taxes be returned to Walton. The report pointed out that James D. Leach had taken land that did not belong to him and had fenced in a portion of the highway. He declared that the city had a highway there of 66 feet as the previous director of law, Mr. Whittlesey, had represented. The report was referred to the committee on public works. The council agreed to meet at the close of the meeting that the matter might be taken up to that body after Councilor Stetter pointed out that the matter had been before the council several weeks.

Various applications for permits to put in gasoline pumps and tanks were granted.

Julius D. Nahas, through counsel, gave notice of a claim for damages because of injuries sustained by falling into a defective manhole in the sidewalk.

The commander of the U. S. S. Barry notified the council that the ship would be at this port from the 1st to the 4th of July and asked that a berth should be assigned for the ship. The request was referred to the city manager.

Councilor May complained that the fire alarm of the city could not be heard in all sections of New London, and said that as a result the firemen did not attend at fires as they should or as they would like to. Manager Holt represented that the whistle at present was operated by air whereas the city had a whistle that was operated by steam up to the time the Connecticut Power company made changes that necessitated the abandonment of the steam-blown whistle. He said he understood that the whistle was heard in all points of the city and that it was quite satisfactory.

Councilor Scott informed the council members that previously all the companies in the city attended fires where as now only three companies and the truck attend fires on the first alarm. He said this may be the reason for the diminished attendance at fires. The city manager promised to look into the matter.

The New London Kennel club was given permission to place a banner across State street advertising its annual show.

A request was made and granted for aid to textile strikers at Passaic, N. J. and textile strikers at Passaic, N. J., here, it was represented there were 10,000 children in need of aid.

The Municipal Baseball league asked for improvements at Cadwell park. The matter was referred to the city manager with power.

Councilor Scott asked for sidewalks and street improvements on Walden avenue. The manager said he had received a petition to that effect, but he did not have it to present to the council this evening and added that it would not be possible to make the improvements asked for this year. He said they would be made as soon as possible.

Charles Mildrum and his uncle Addison T. Chapman of Middletown motored to the Submarine Base and were guests at dinner of Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Colver, boat race day.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Retail Merchants Are More Than Sellers of Goods

"In traveling from coast to coast," says Mr. F. O. Moburg, "and interviewing retailers, I find a real desire on their part to be of service to the community in which they are located."

"Most retailers, especially the more progressive, give special attention to products that will improve the living conditions of their customers. To illustrate — during the summer time, the menace of disease carrying insects is ever present. Recently much publicity has been given to this subject and this season marks the high tide of effort along this particular line."

"It is only within the last few months that retailers in particular, the public in general, have been informed of the real nature of the most filthy of insects, the common housefly."

"Many manufacturers, the manufacturers of Fly-Tox, feel it an obligation to tell the people the exact nature of the conditions and we are receiving earnest cooperation from the retail dealer on this message."

"Not many people have known that the fly has a double method of carrying disease germs. It is well known that flies are found in most unspeakable, unclean places. Being covered with tiny hairs upon the body of the fly, this filth is soon gathered. Science, the study reveals the fact that the foot of the fly is nothing more than a soft, spongy pad, which literally soaks up the filth upon which a fly lights. Then laden down with germs and bacteria, flies enter our homes. They walk upon the food intended for our consumption. They leave their filthy bodies across the clean dishes and thereby contaminate even the utensils upon which our food is served."

"This is not the only way the fly carries disease germs. Even more dangerous are the germs carried in the alimentary canal and later voided not only in the excrement of the fly, but also in the small droplets of regurgitated matter which have been called vomit spots."

"Typhoid germs are carried from excrement to food by flies. In the same way other intestinal germ diseases, such as enteritis (inflammation of the intestine,) and infantile diarrhea, are all so carried. In the case of over 30 different disease organisms and parasitic worms, actual laboratory proof exists."

"Since these facts have been exposed, retailers everywhere are showing a renewed enthusiasm in the sale of Fly-Tox."

"In times past, the killing of flies, or the use of Fly-Tox has been considered primarily from the standpoint of relieving the discomfort that comes from the buzzing of flies. But this fact passes into significance when we realize that it is now known that flies are directly responsible for at least 40,000 deaths each year. The more the retailers realize these truths, the more enthusiastic they are about the sale of Fly-Tox, not merely as a means of making profit, but more to bring about a relief in every community of the terrible results that are inevitable if these filthy insects are tolerated."

"The renewed enthusiasm shown by retail dealers demonstrates clearly to me that these sellers of merchandise appreciate their responsibility in serving the communities."

"The house fly is not the only elusive insect one may with which we have to contend. The mosquito is no less an assassin. Their attack is most agressive during the night when we lay unconscious and defenseless. Their bite is painful and poisonous. To many, especially little children, it becomes a feverish, fiending torment. Not to mention the germ actually carried by the mosquito, but by blood poisoning which may result from unconsciously scratching the mosquito bite, this insect is the cause of much suffering and sometimes death."

"Knowing these facts, we feel it our obligation to tell people everywhere. We are broadcasting this information through the local newspapers and national magazines, and we find the retailers carrying the story on to their customers."

We are glad to carry Fly-Tox publicity in The Bulletin. We feel that one of our biggest battles is to educate all of the people to the danger of disease carrying insects. We are proud of the business we are in. Fly-Tox provides the most efficient means so far developed, that enables the housewife to protect herself and her loved ones from these tormentors. We feel very grateful to the newspapers, to the wholesalers and retailers who are cooperating with us in making their particular communities healthier and happier ones in which to live."

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Broadway Theater

At last, a plausible farce, a farce that is fast, funny and furious, yet convincing and possible. We refer to the latest Universal-Jewel, Skinner's Dress Suit, which is being shown at the Broadway theater.

The picture is a photoplay version of the famous book that was one of the season's best sellers, and is still one of the most popular of the works of Henry Irving Dodge.

It is a story of the mishaps and adventures of a young married couple, the Skinners, and of their eventful rise in the social and business world. Skinner is an underpaid clerk. Honey his wife, sees in her handsome husband a paragon of commercial acumen and forces him to ask his boss for a raise in salary.

Unfortunately, the time selected by Skinner to brace his employer for the increase is a most unhappy one, as that particular moment was chosen by one of the firm's best customers to announce that he would not renew his next year's contract. And poor Skinner is denied his request.

Crowded houses rocked at the efforts of poor Skinner to justify his wife's belief in his greatness. Reginald Denny, as the star, gave a wonderful performance, in one of the best pictures he has ever done.

Laura LaPlante, as "Honey," his wife, is perfect in this role, which is different from anything she has yet done. Hedda Hopper and Arthur Lake as well as E. J. Ratcliffe and Ben Hendricks, Jr., give eminently satisfying performances. The rest of the cast is ideally suited to their various roles. It includes Lionel Braham, Betty Morrissey, Henry A. Barrow, William A. Strauss, Lisle Leslie, Broderick O'Farrell and Lucille Ward.

A Mermaid comedy and News are the short subjects.

POETRY

June Roses

"June is the month of roses!" And they bloom
In rare fulfillment on my window-sill.
Their delicate petals with June's breath a-thrill,
Filling with loveliness this little room;
Their texture weft upon the young Dawn's loom,
And tinged with colors from the Rose sky spill,
When o'er the battlements of Great Rose Hill
The shafts of the Far Darter drive night's gloom.
And those green fields of which my heart is dreaming,
A river—and the silver-sheathed Reef Shore,
Sunlight through pines like spinsters' lances gleaming,
A twist of road, wind-fretted dunes flung o'er,
Live through their magic in a mystic seeming—
June roses—yes! But oh, much more—much more!

—Frances Bartlett.

My Road

There's a grassy road a-winding
In my Land of Long Ago,
It leads around the barnyard
To the river bank below;
On it wanders through the "Round Field"
Down a rocky hill I know
Till it seems to gently linger
Where the salt marsh sedges grow.

Ah, the tang and scent of marshes,
With the South wind blowing free!
Come the gray tides' deep'ning channels
Creeping inland from the sea;
With my road I pause a moment
In the view that comes to me:
One clear line of western hillsides
Reaching far as eye can see.

"Heartbreak Hill," where ancient legend
Brings forgotten tales to mind,
Of Winona, Indian maiden,
"Sagamore," another hill crest
Named for Indian chieftain kind;
And below, I watch the river
Through the age-old marshes, wind.

Grassy road, you oft have called me,
And I never questioned why!
I would follow you at morning
Ere the new-mown hay sunned dry;
When your sunsets, o'er the hilltops
Barred with gold your evening sky,
There the lengthening shadows found me—
We were pals, Road, you and I!

—Agnes Choate Wesson.

HUMOR OF THE DAY

I don't know, she's dead.—Tit-Bits

Doctor—Your voice is very weak. How was it before you became ill?

Patient—I was a foreman in a boiler factory, doc, and used to whisper my orders.—Cincinnati Times-Star.

Robert—I've a question to ask you.

Leo—All right, shoot.

Robert—If a boy is a lad and the lad had a stepfather—

Leo (deeply interested)—Go on.

Robert (walking away)—Does that make the lad a stepladder?—Washington Star.

A new use to which radium has been put to is to show the rate of flow of blood in the veins. The method adopted is to put the animal used in the experiment into a lead box with one foot sticking out of a hole in the side. A solution of salt in water to which is added a small portion of a radioactive compound of radium is then injected into a vein in the animal's ear. The time is noted and a careful watch kept on an electrical device attached tothe foot. When this device reveals the radioactive rays are being given off from the foot, the time is again noted and the difference between the two times gives the rate of flow of the blood from ear to foot.

A chance waterworn pebble, picked up in the valley of the Lamar river in Yellowstone National park, has told the story of the former existence there of a peculiar species of pine tree, long ago extinct. Professor H. S. Conrad, of the Grinnell college, who is head of the nature guide and lecture work of the national park service at Yellowstone, has had a section of the petrified wood ground thin for microscopic examination, and from the minute structure of the stone that ages ago replaced the wood, detail for detail, he has been able to determine the kind of tree that grew on the side of a hill that ages ago weathered away.

TOO FAT?
Guaranteed HARMLESS

SILPH is a most pleasant way to reduce. It comes in the form of a refreshing chewing gum. It does not contain dangerous drugs. If you are too FAT chew regularly three or four pieces of SILPH a day and see what it can do. If you are not too fat but only a little too plump, it is easy to have a box of SILPH handy, and instead of chewing ordinary gum why not chew from time to time one or two pieces of SILPH and try to avoid that dreaded enemy, FAT. Many of New York's most beautiful actresses and chorus girls are chewing SILPH to keep trim and slender because they have found it easy, safe and inexpensive.

Exercises may reduce, but they are strenuous. Diets succeed with some people, but they are generally weakening—how much easier SILPH is. You can get SILPH (beware of cheaper imitations) at all good drug or department stores. It sells for 50 cents—comes in a handy GREEN box. If your druggist is out of it send direct to the SILPH CO., 9 West 60th Street, New York City.

On sale at Lee & Osgood's, Dunn's or Morgan's drug stores.

Cotton: Barely steady; bearish crop estimates.

Sugar: Steady; Cuban buying.

Coffee: Easy; disappointing cables.

Wheat: Easy; heavy interior receipts.

Hogs: Lower; slow demand.

MARKET CLOSED STRONG

NEW YORK, June 28.—(AP)—Stiffer call money rates, foreshadowing a heavy demand for funds in connection with month-end dividend and interest requirement, curtailed activity in the stock market today but failed to halt the upward movement of prices. Trading was colorless until the final hour when a last minute spurt accounted for most of the day's gains. Total sales fell below a million shares.

In view of the forthcoming mid-year settlements, the rise in call money to a new 1926 high level since the first of June, was considered a natural development and it failed to dampen bullish sentiment in a selected list of rails and upper industrials. Elsewhere, however, a more cautious attitude was adopted and the main body of stocks united aimlessly.

The most impressive feature of the day's trading was the sustained investment demand for the rail shares. Buying in that list was quickened by another series of excellent earnings reports for May with the prospect of still further improvement with the beginning of the crop moving season. The gain average of 20 representative issues reached the highest mark in several years, with individual gains of two to 3 1-4 points recorded by Atlantic Coast Line, Atchison, Baltimore and Ohio, New York, Chicago and St. Louis, Chesapeake and Ohio, Chicago and Great Western preferred, Norfolk and Western and Pere Marquette, several of which reached new peaks.

Interspersed in the industrial [illegible] irregularity, with the oils [illegible] the best exhibition of group strength.

Activity was strengthened by reports that the company planned to expand through the acquisition of other important producers, while General Petroleum, Union Oil of California and General Asphalt worked moderately higher.

Motors fluctuations in the motor shares reflected existing uncertainty over the immediate sales outlook. General Motors, after marking time most of the day, spurted ahead at the close to 143 7-8, a net gain of 3 1-8, while sympathetic advances of 2 to 4 points took place in Fisher Body and Dupont. Short covering held Hudson firm in the face of an unsatisfactory earnings report and Willys-Overland was strengthened by the favorable response to the introduction of low price models. U. S. Rubber, Fisk and other tires were under pressure.

Speculative operations in most of the commodities and specialties were on a restricted scale, but little progress was recorded. U. S. Steel rose fractionally above 168 and gains of 1 to 3-4 points were registered by U. S. Cast Iron Pipe, American Locomotive, Baldwin, Allied Chemical, American Smelting, Fox Film and Coca Cola.

Commodity prices generally were lower. July wheat dropped about 2 cents, while most the other delivery reached sharply. Favorable weather reports stopped recessions of as much as 10 points in cotton futures. Coffee and sugar also fell back but support developed.

Trading in foreign exchanges was extremely dull. Demand sterling held around 4.85 1-4 cents. French francs hovered in the other continental currencies.

In line with the hardening tendency of the market, time funds were less freely offered, but the rates for all maturities as well as for commercial paper remained unchanged.

UNDERTAKER SUES FOR PERRY FUNERAL EXPENSES

Evidence in a suit for recovery of funeral expenses by Samuel M. Prentis of New London, funeral director, against John W. Perry, of that city, executor of the estate of his father, John F. Perry, was heard Monday morning in the court of common pleas at New London before Judge Charles B. Waller. At the conclusion of testimony, Judge Waller took the papers and reserved decision.

The suit was brought by Mr. Prentis against Perry through his counsel, George Curtis Morgan and Abel P. Tanner. It is alleged that Perry has failed to meet the expenses of the funeral which was arranged by the decendent's daughter, Mrs. Rita K. Oliver of 82 Crystal avenue, New London at whose home the father died. The bill was rendered to John W. Perry as executor of the father's will, with the approval of Mrs. Oliver.

According to testimony given by Mrs. Oliver, John F. Perry died on the night of Sept. 10 1925 and the funeral was held Sept. 12. The funeral was carried out with Roman Catholic services at St. Mary's Star of the Sea church and the body was buried in St. Mary's cemetery.

An alleged copy of the will made by John F. Perry dated July 29, 1925, was read in court, including provisions that the funeral services be held at St. James Episcopal church, with the rites conducted by a minister or rector of the church. The will also provided that the estate be divided in three equal portions among the three surviving children, John W. Perry, Joseph N. Perry and Mrs. Rita K. Oliver.

It was brought out in the testimony of Mrs. Oliver while under examination by Atty. Charles L. Stewart for the defense, that she did not notify either of her brothers immediately of the death of their father.

Mrs. O'iver said that her father came to live at her home on June 15 prior to his death and before that time had resided with his son, John W. Perry for 14 months. She also stated that the body is now buried in his own lot in St. Mary's cemetery, beside the grave of his wife.

Counsel for the defense pointed out that the will bearing the signature of the deceased provided that burial take place in Jordan cemetery. Waterford. Testimony was also given to show that prior to his death, arrangements were pending for a codicil revoking the clause involving funeral and burial arrangements but this was not signed by the decedent. Mrs. Oliver stated that during the time of her father's illness at her home she had heard her father express a wish that after his death he be buried beside the grave of his wife.

PLAYGROUNDS SEASON IS STARTING TODAY

The Norwich playgrounds season will be officially opened at the playgrounds today (Tuesday).

Registration of all children of playground age will be effected starting at 9 o'clock. Superintendent Charles E. Brainard, assisted by his co-workers, has been engaged in putting the respective playgrounds in ship-shape order so that everything should be in A-1 condition for the official opening. One new center, namely the Jail Hill playground, is to be opened this year and from the interest shown by the boys and girls of that section, this will look well up with the leaders in the season's work. Apparatus for this playground has been ordered and is expected to arrive within a day or two.

Parents and guardians of children of playground age are requested by the officials to see that children report at the various centers for registration today. Attendance of the children at the daily sessions will be very beneficial in keeping them out of danger and off the streets and highways. There will be something new in store for the children every day of the playgrounds and there is no reason why the majority of Norwich's younger generation should not be regular playground attendants.

Motorists are cautioned to exercise care in driving past the city playgrounds in order to lessen the danger of accidents. This is especially true of the Greeneville playgrounds on North Main street. Fifteen miles an hour should be the speed used by motorists in passing the playgrounds.

The city playgrounds and instructors and instructresses in charge follow: Academy, John Murphy; Greeneville, Edward Sullivan, Miss Constance Raymond; Elizabeth street, Matthew Sheridan, Miss Geraldine Moore; Jail Hill, Miss Beatrice Ableman; Laurel Hill, Miss Eleanor Counihan; Thamesville, Miss Madeline Thune; Lake street, Terrence Finnegan, Miss Irene Werth; Hobart avenue, Miss Teresa Fitzgerald; Falls, Miss Marcia Stanton; East Side, Miss Mildred Peckham; Industrial work, Miss Katherine Farrell; Office, Thomas Winters.

CONNECTICUT TO HAVE COMMERCIAL AIR SERVICE

The Connecticut chamber of commerce has sent the following letter entitled "Commercial Aviation for Cnonecticut," to its entire membership over the signature of Clark Belden, acting secretary:

"On July 1st, the Colonial Air Transport—of which Governor Trumbull is chairman—inaugurates commercial aviation between Boston and New York where connections will be made with air lines to the south and west.

"The enclosed reprint of an article from "The Financial Digest" describes the plans and facilities of the Colonial Air Transport.

"The State Chamber is glad to place before its members this data regarding commercial aviation because of the importance to Connecticut business interests of the establishment of this new arm of transportation. It is confidently expected that Connecticut business will patronize the new commercial air service which cannot but prove of increasing utility.

"President Rogers recently appointed an able committee of men interested in and experienced in aviation headed by E. G. Buckland, vice president of the "New Haven" road, to render commercial aviation such cooperation as may be deemed helpful and practical."

THIRTEEN APPEARED IN NORWICH CITY COURT

Thirteen defendants, ten charged with intoxication, two with breach of the peace and one with violation of a city ordinance, were before the Monday morning session of the city court. A local truck man, and a Norwich colored man paid $5 each on breach of the peace charges.

The latter two were arrested Saturday after they engaged in an altercation. The colored man, it is claimed, climbed onto the truck and was told to get off. An argument followed and it is said blows were struck.

A local man, 61, charged with intoxication, failed to appear and the bond in his case, $25 put up by his wife, was forfeited.

Therefore whosoever heareth these sayings of Mine, and doeth them, I will liken him unto a wise man which built his house upon a rock; and the rain descended, and the floods came, and the winds blew and beat upon that house and it fell not: for it was founded upon a rock. And every one that heareth these sayings of Mine, and doeth them not, shall be likened unto a foolish man, which built his house upon the sand: and the rain descended, and the floods came, and the winds blew and beat upon that house and it fell; and great was the fall of it.

Cleveland, Ohio.—"After having my first baby, I lost weight, no matter what I did. Then a doctor told me I would be better if I had another baby, which I did. But I got worse, was always sickly and went down to 98 pounds. My neighbor told me about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, as it helped her very much, so I tried it. After taking four bottles, I weigh 116 pounds. It has just done wonders for me and I can do my housework now without one bit of trouble."—Mrs. M. Rubenstein, 10004 Nelson Ave., Cleveland, Ohio.

If some good fairy should appear, and offer to grant your heart's desire, what would you choose?

Wealth? It's a transient thing that brings its own cares.

Happiness? It's an elusive thing which we keep by giving away.

Health? That's the best gift. Health is riches that gold cannot buy and surely health is cause enough for happiness.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound may be the good fairy who offers you better health.

BRIAND'S NEW GOVERNMENT GIVEN VOTE OF CONFIDENCE

Vote Was 292 to 130, With 100 Deputies Absent or Not Voting—Financial Question Will Come Before Parliament Next Tuesday—Matter Deferred Pending Negotiations With Governor of Federal Reserve Bank of New York and the Governor of the Bank of England With Reference to Credits to Uphold the Franc When Once It Was Stabilized.

PARIS, June 29—(AP)—M. Briand's new cabinet, the tenth that he has formed, was presented to the chamber of deputies today and received a vote of confidence. The ministerial declaration, the essential feature of which is the stabilization of the franc, involving ratification of the inter-allied debt settlements, was read, and the premier demanded that the interpellations on financial situations should be postponed for the one week.

The question was made one of confidence, and M. Briand's wishes were met by a vote of 292 to 130, with 100 deputies absent or not voting. Thus the new government has obtained a lease of life until Tuesday next, when the all important financial question will be debated.

The ministerial declaration, which was composed by the cabinet declares that the French government proposes to open negotiations respecting England's debts, with the greatest energy, in order that at an early date the matter may come before parliament. Such ratification of debt agreements the new ministry considers indispensable for the establishment of the currency on a stable basis.

Increased production and reduced consumption are mentioned as necessary to France's prosperity, and the statement indicated that the government proposed to make good the deficit set up for it as one that means business.

Negotiations which were opened by telephone today between the bank of France and Benjamin Strong, governor of the federal reserve bank, New York, and Montagu Norman, governor of the bank of England, who are on a holiday together at Antibes, with reference to eventual credits to uphold the franc when once it was stabilized, were referred to in the debate.

M. Tardieu demanded of the premier that pending discussion of the interpellations nothing should be done in the way of definite negotiations toward a foreign loan.

Premier Briand refused to discuss the negotiations and directed M. Tardieu to the ministerial declaration, in which it was stated parliament would have ample opportunity to discuss every feature of financial stabilization.

M. Cachin, the communist leader, raised the question of "eventual financial servitude of France to Anglo-Saxon banking interests," and M. Briand replied that no country had demanded of France conditions that could be regarded as in any way encroaching on French sovereignty.

Parliament was informed the time had gone by for talk, the fate of the country was at stake, and action was necessary. The premier appealed in his declaration to the parties to forget politics and save the franc.

The socialists announced their hostility to the government, while the radicals declared they were ready to give their support to an acceptable programme, but could not give the government carte blanche. The remainder of the chamber is divided in its opinions.

PLANS FOR OPENING NEW YORK-BOSTON AIR MAIL

HARTFORD, June 29—(AP)—Detailed plans for the opening Thursday of the New York-Boston air mail by way of Hartford, were announced tonight. Ceremonies will be held at Boston, Hartford and Petersboro, just outside New York state, in which will participate Governor Trumbull of Connecticut, Governor A. Smith of New York, Governor Moore of New Jersey and Governor Fuller of Massachusetts, as well as Mayor Nichols of Boston, Mayor Walker of New York and Acting Mayor Ryan of Hartford, and local officials.

Governor Trumbull who is chairman of the board of directors of the Colonial Air Transport, Inc., holders of the government contract for the mail, will make the trip with the first mail from Boston to New York. The airplane will be piloted on the official trip over the Hartford-Petersboro route in New York by Major Talbot O. Freeman, manager of the company, who is also a flight inspector and a World war veteran with a notable record. No passengers will be carried at present, the plane to be used has a capacity of four passengers and 1,000 pounds of mail or other cargo.

1 A. M. CURFEW LAW FOR NIGHT CLUBS IN NEW YORK

NEW YORK, June 29—(AP)—Mayor Walker, weary of out-of-towners besmirching the big city's reputation, threw this today as his reason for insisting upon a 3 a. m. curfew ordinance for night clubs. People from all over the world patronize the places ridiculed by the order, he said, and then go away to criticize the conditions they enjoyed.

"There's no other city in the United States where citizens stay in night clubs until 5 o'clock in the morning," he added, told the Dusk and Dawn club representatives. "They come to New York to do that sort of thing. And then they go home and tell every one they meet what a wicked place New York is."

The mayor would not be convinced that cabaret and night clubs were similar to lodges such as Elks and Masons and turned his thumb down on a plea that the clubs and cabarets be granted the same privileges as lodges. The representatives having failed to convince the mayor that he should modify his bill proposing the clubs and cabarets be closed at 3 o'clock, the meeting adjourned. The next move will come when the board of estimate considers the matter in executive session.

WARMEST DAY THIS SUMMER IN NEW ENGLAND

BOSTON, June 29.—(AP)—New England today experienced the warmest summer day of the 1926 season, to date. Boston recorded a temperature of 86 and had one heat prostration. At Portland, Me., the mercury climbed to 81, four degrees higher than the highest previous mark, before cooling sea breezes broke the hot wave.

Boston's maximum today exceeded by two degrees the warmest previous day of the season. It fell far short of the warmest June day last year, however when the mercury touched the 100 mark and scores were overcome.

SANTA BARBARA WAS SHAKEN BY EARTHQUAKE

SANTA BARBARA, Calif., June 29—(AP)—Several walls, cracked by last years earthquake here, reopened in a light earth tremor felt here about 3:20 p. m., today. The Central building and Masonic Temple, repaired with new plaster, reopened.

Several plate glass windows were broken in a furniture store. Ruins of the old court house and sheriff's office were not affected apparently by today's shake. No buildings constructed since last year's quake were damaged.

GAINES CHARGED WITH MURDER OF HIS DAUGHTER

SEATTLE, Washn., June 29.—(AP)—Wallace Cloves Gaines was arrested today, accused of beating and choking his daughter, Sylvia Howard Gaines, to death about an hour after she left his home here the night of June 16 for a solitary walk. He will be held without bail.

Louis Stern, a friend of Gaines' was arrested as a material witness.

Miss Gaines, 22 years old, and a graduate last year of Smith college, Northampton, Mass., was the daughter of Gaines and Mrs. H. B. Maynard, Lynnfield, Mass. Gaines and Sylvia's mother separated 18 years ago and five years ago he married another woman. Last September, Sylvia, having found her father through a search started by a clue in a newspaper, came here to live with him.

Miss Gaines' body was found badly mutilated 12 hours after she had left her home. She had been criminally assaulted.

Information filed by Prosecutor Colvin charged that Gaines, whose wife was about to return from San Francisco, after four months' separation, "with premeditated design, did effect the death of Sylvia, Gaines took a rock or some other instrument unknown."

These latest developments were made known at the state house late today.

Soon afer Governor Fuller signed the requisition for Ponzi's extradition from Houston, Tex., where the fugitive was taken following his arrest, Ponzi called the state house on the telephone and asked for permission to come to Massachusetts in custody of a Houston deputy sheriff.

"Go ahead, let's have a good fight," replied Mitchell, and the conversation ended.

The extradition papers were given to Mitchell and he will leave for Houston at midnight tonight.

North Dakota Enters The Senate Inquiry

WASHINGTON, June 29. — (AP) — Testimony, arguments and dissertations on prohibition enlivened proceedings today before the senate campaign funds committee as more light was brought on the expenditure of the $130,000 enforcement fund raised in Pennsylvania by the Women's Christian Temperance union.

There were frequent clashes between Senator Reed, democrat, Missouri, the chairman, and William B. Wright, special counsel to Governor Pinchot in expending the fund, with a blanket charge by the witness that the federal government has failed to do its duty in prohibition enforcement.

While pursuing this line of inquiry at a brief morning session and again tonight, the committee found its prospective field of investigation broadening with the filing of formal allegations on the raising of a slush fund for use in the North Dakota republican primary tomorrow.

These charges were made in writing on behalf of Senator Nye, a candidate for renomination against L. B. Hanna, who was campaign manager for President Coolidge in North Dakota in 1924. The statement asserted there were indications that "a huge slush fund had been obtained through administration channels of support" for Hanna in getting out the vote in the primary tomorrow.

Immediately upon the assembling of the committee today, the prohibition subject was brought up by Senator Pepper, who was defeated in the three cornered senatorial race in Pennsylvania. He denied emphatically he had had anything to do with the removal from Pittsburgh to Philadelphia of Frederick C. Baird, prohibition administrator, just before the primary.

Testimony before the committee has been that after Baird left, the beer got better in the Mellon-Pepper stronghold in the western part of the state. Senator Popper declared that the first he knew of Baird's removal was when he read of it in newspapers.

Wright followed Pepper to the stand and Chairman Reed immediately developed that some of the special agents employed with the Women's Christian Temperance union fund in Pennsylvania formerly had been in the government prohibition unit and somehad been dismissed "for the good of the service." J. A. Tatro, was one of these, going out after 16 years of federal service. Wright said Tatro was doing "amazingly good work in Chicago" when he was dismissed.

Wright testified that one of his "under cover," men, known to the committee as "Mr. Z" got into some difficulties with the authorities while he was on the Women's Christian Temperance union fund payroll in Pennsylvania. The witness was vague, but said as he understood it "A" was interested in a garage and liquor was found in a car there.

"He was brought up and discharged on the trial," he said.

"He was charged with bootlegging himself?" asked Reed.

"Not at all."

"Well, possession of liquor?"

"Of that I cannot answer."

After Wright had said the federal government had failed to do its duty in Pennsylvania, Reed remarked:

"And you had to get the railroad over there owned by Gary to put in one of the railroad employes."

He referred to Frederick C. Baird, employed by the Bessmer and Lake Erie railroad, a subsidiary of the United States Steel corporation.

"Life is an excellent man," retorted Wright.

"Employed by a private company to enforce the public laws of the commonwealth," Reed came back.

"He did amazingly good work," Wright insisted.

"Which I rise to remark," Reed said, "is about as illegal a proposition as has ever been presented to me in my life. It is destructive of all public government, because it becomes private government; but I am not going to argue the question."

"If you will give me the privilege," said Wright, "I would like to say that I personally cannot see the difference in Mr. Baird being loaned, as he was, and partially paid by drawing his salary, from what was done throughout the war, nor can I see the difference from what George Washington himself did in giving his services to the nation as commander-in-chief of the Revolutionary forces."

"Yes," interposed Reed, "but George Washington was not working for the Ku Klux Klan nor the Anti-Saloon league nor the Women's Christian Temperance union. He was working for the people of the United States."

Presented $100,000 To Hungarian People

Jeremiah Smith, American Economist, Who Reorganized Hungary's Finances, Donates Salary.

BUDAPEST, Hungary, June 29—(AP)—Jeremiah Smith, American economist who recently completed his work of reorganizing Hungary's finances, today presened his salary of $100,000 for his two year's work to the Hungarian people. The Boston financial expert told Chancellor Bethlan that the friendship and appreciation of the Hungarian people was all that he wished for his services.

When Mr. Smith called on Premier Bethlan today to take final leave, Count Bethlan handed him a check for $100,000 representing two years salary as legal supervisor of Hungary's finances.

"Give it to charity," said the American lawyer as he handed the check back to the astonished prime minister. "Your poor need it more than I do."

"But it is your compensation for your two years service to us," argued Count Bethlen.

"The only compensation I desire for my work is the appreciation and the friendship of the Hungarian people," answered Mr. Smith, who, although by no means wealthy himself, felt that he could not conscientiously accept even his salary from a people in so straightened circumstances as the Hungarians.

"But the vouchers already have been issued by the state and their entry cannot be altered in the treasury books," persisted Count Bethlen.

"Then reenter it in your books as a gift from the American people to the people of Hungary," Mr. Smith rejoined, declining definitely to accept the money.

Not only has Mr. Smith refused any salary from the Hungarian government, but he has declined to accept any part of his living expenses in Budapest during his two years stay there. When Count Bethlen suggested that the Hungarian government would like to honor him with a high decoration, the Boston lawyer answered, "If you do, then I shall never forgive you. Your friendship and gratitude are more precious to me than any decoration."

Jeremiah Smith was appointed league of nations commissioner for Hungary on April 5, 1924 and after began his work of rehabilitating Hungary's finances. He predicted that Hungary would be self supporting within two years and his work was so successful that on June 5 of this year he was able to report to the league of nations that Hungary's finances were in excellent condition. The league committee decided on June 5 to grant his request that he be relieved of his post.

Only a week ago the Hungarian parliament hailed him as the saviour of their country.

USED HYDROPLANE TO SAVE DROWNING SOLDIER

NEW YORK, June 29—(AP)—The first "flying life saver" bobbed up in the news today.

Private James Stanley was seized with cramps 500 yards from shore after he had sought relief from the heat in the waters of Long Island sound with a number of other soldiers from Fort Slocum.

Overhead bumbled the privately owned hydroplane Turtle II. The pilot looking down from the cockpit saw the soldier drowning and swooped to the water. Jockeying his ship toward the helpless swimmer the aviator leaned out and pulled Stanley across one of the wings.

The crews of the government launch Q-12 who had heard Stanley's cries removed the soldier from the hydroplane to the Post hospital where it was said he would recover. The plane disappeared before the identity of its pilot could be learned.

Special governmental aid is given for the building of cheap houses for employes of large industrial establishments.

(5) Announcement that agreements have been reached for the reduction in price, without hurting the quality of iron, cements, bricks and plaster.

(6) Announcement that steps have been taken to help large employes open canteens in order to sell food to their employes at the lowest possible prices.

SENATE VOTED DOWN FESS FARM CREDITS BILL 54-26 LATER PASSED HOUSE BILL

Would Have Created a Revolving Fund of $100,000,000 To Be Loaned to Cooperative Marketing Groups—Fund Would Have Been Administered By a Commission of Agricultural Experts—It Was an Administration Measure—House Bill, Also Sponsored By the Administration, Would Authorize $225,000 For a Cooperative Marketing Division in the Agricultural Department.

WASHINGTON, June 29—(AP)—After rejecting the Fess farm credits bill, which had been endorsed by President Coolidge, the senate tonight, without a record vote, passed the house cooperative marketing measure.

The proposal approved, which also was sponsored by the administration, would authorize a $225,000 appropriation for the creation of a co-operative marketing division in the agricultural department.

The Fess proposal, offered by the Ohio senator as a rider to the co-operative marketing measure, would have authorized an appropiation of $100,000,000 for loans to farmers co-operatives. It was snowed under by a vote of 54 to 26.

Its defeat was more crushing that that administered in the senate last week to the McNary Equalization fee bill, which was opposed by the administration, and was rejected by a six vote margin.

The tide definitely turned against the Fess proposal when it became known that several administration republicans had turned a deaf ear to the pleas of party leaders to stand by the president. The opposition grew as the defeat proceeded and fresh impetus was given it by an amendment, inserted by Senator Fess, republican, Ohio, its sponsor, providing for the collection of an amortization charge and giving 33 years for repayment of loans to farmers' organizations. The bill would have authorized a $100,000,000 appropriation for the purpose.

The roll call on the Fess bill found only three democrats voting for it along with 23 republicans, while 21 republicans joined with 32 democrats and the one farmer-labor member in opposition.

Democrats: George, Harris and Neely—3.

Totals—26.

Democrats: Ashurst, Bayard, Blease, Bratton, Broussard, Bruce, Carraway, Copeland, Dill, Edwards, Gerry, Glass, Heflin, Jones of New Mexico, Kendrick, King, McKellar, Mayfield, Overman, Pittman, Reed of Missouri, Robinson of Arkansas, Sheppard, Simmons, Slemp, Stephens, Swanson, Trammell, Tyson, Underwood Walsh and Wheeler—32.

Total—54.

Senators announced as paired for the Fess bill were: Dupont, Keyes, Lenroot, McLean and Means, republicans; and Ransdell, democrat, those paired against were: Frazier and Nye, republicans; and Ferris, Fletcher, Harris and Smith democrats.

Senators Smoot, Greene, McKinley and Phipps were absent and were without pairs.

The vote on the cooperative marketing bill came after ten hours continuous session during which a wide range of proposals, to change tariff and railroad rates for the benefit of the farmer and to aid him by other methods had been thrown in the discard.

The measure carried a total of $45,014,000 of which $14,136,000 is for 73 new public building projects throughout the country, all of which were approved without change.

JEWETT CITY

IRONED BIG SWORD FISH BUT FINALLY LOST HIM

JEWETT CITY, June 29—The deep sea sword fishing aggregation, Charles Palmer, Ross Cook, Bill Ford, Lloyd Congdon, Carl Gallup and Old Salt "Doc" Wallace, are home from a two days ocean cruise 30 miles southeast of Block Island.

Captain Joe, from the crow's nest, sighted one at 3:30 Saturday afternoon. Instantly all was excitement with every member of the fishing crew at his post. Captain Joe took his place in the pulpit at the tip of the bow sprit and directed all movements. The sea was running high and even Mid-shipman Carl Gallup was on his job with everything awash. He don't remember what became of the lemon he was holding in his hand.

After "getting the iron" from the unerring hand of the skipper, the big fish took out 150 feet of 3-8 rope and a 25 gal. buoy keg. For an hour and a half he pulled the float around Block Island sound, and, finally giving in, he was hauled alongside and gaffed twice. Quick as a flash he sounded and the line parted, and the fish was lost.

Captain Joe said he was the largest one he had seen in all his years of deep sea sword fishing. He estimated his weight at from 7 to 9 hundred pounds. No record shows that ever a sword fishing party of all Jewett City men ever made a trip before. The boys brought home 142 pounds of fine mackerel. Carl Gallup said Monday he didn't believe all that the ship's doctor told him about stomach pumps. Another trip is planned in a few weeks.

Those who attended the tenth wed- ding anniversary reception of Rev. and Mrs. W. J. Reynolds of Newent from Jewett City and Sylvandale Monday evening were Rev. and Mrs. J. W. Carter, Rev. and Mrs. E. DANIELSON

GEORGE B. THAYER IS VISITING WAR ORPHANS

(Special to the Bulletin)

DANIELSON, June 29—Writing from Nice, France, under date of June 8, Attorney George B. Thayer, well known in eastern Connecticut, tells of the French war orphans, numbering 300,000, and of the 11 families in which he became interested as god-father, these families having 25 orphans. He is making one of a series of trips that I ave taken him back to France since he served there with the Y. during the great war. Mr. Thayer has been visiting at the homes of orphans he adopted in various parts of France, riding at times, but at others indulging himself in his favorite pastime of hiking. He makes mention of one journey of 56 miles he made on foot to reach a small city north of Lyons. Detailing his visits with the orphans, now in some cases grown to young manhood and young womanhood, Thayer tells also in his interesting manner of his walk for many miles along the picturesque mountain Route Les Echarmeaux. He mentioned his stay at the ancient of Nimes and tells of a sight that impressed him greatly, the Roman viaduct over the Gardon river, a work that has stood for centuries. "This sight alone repaid me for the dusty walk," Mr. Thayer says.

Someone is getting a bit careless with his ammunition. Maybe more than one. Chief John McFarland picked up a .32 calibre bullet on Main street Tuesday. Only recently four similar bullets were picked up by a man coming over from the Riverview section. There is something passing strange about this and it has aroused the curiosity of those who have heard about it.

Tearing away of such parts of the north side of the high school building as becomes necessary incident to the building of additions to the structure is underway. The work on this north wing is now so far advanced that an observer may gain some definite idea as to how the enlarged building will look when the work is completed.

Railroad Officer John Murray of Put-nam is on daily duty in Putnam this week in an effort to prevent hundreds of people who might be tempted to use the route from walking along the railroad tracks on their way to Franklin street to the band concerts or any other attract in calling people into the streets. Trespassing on railroad property is forbidden and those who disobey the regulation are subject to arrest. Officer Murray is combining his efforts to warn people off the railroad right of way, this in a laudable effort to prevent accidents.

Principal Ernest R. Warren has an-nounced a gift of $60 from the class of 1926, Killingly high school, to be added to the sum of $300 given last year by the class of 1925, for the establishing of a fund to promote public speaking at the school. The income from these gifts is used to provide awards for those who excel in the public speaking events arranged during the course of the school year.

It appeared late Tuesday afternoon as though no half-holiday will be generally observed in Danielson tomorrow, Thursday, July 1. Some business men were in favor of starting the half-holiday season for July and August with the first of the month, but others were decidedly opposed. Because the coming week brings a full holiday for store workers, the observance next Monday of Independence day, there will be no Thursday half-holiday next week, the first of these brief respites at mid-week from the daily round of labor coming on Thursday, July 15.

A group who are enthusiastic over boxing exhibitions made the journey to Hartford Monday evening to see the featherweight world's title bout in which Kid Kaplan so decisively defended his crown in a battle with Bobby Garcia.

Appreciative of the manner in which Young America has so far restrained itself from trying out fireworks purchases, Chief John McFarland gives due warning that use of any sort of noise-making devices during the present week will be the cause of prompt action on the part of the police.

With from a dozen to 15 trains scheduled to run through Danielson between 11:45 p. m. and daylight from now until the end of the summer there is need of particular care on the part of all drivers in getting over grade crossings that are unprotected up and down the line, or protected only by electric or operated warning gongs. This service both the State of Maine and Bar Harbor expresses are routed through Danielson, in addition there are many freights running up and down the line. There will be hardly a night with less than a dozen trains operating through here in the hours mentioned. Excepting for a signal bell, Danielson's Main street crossing, has no protection after 10 p. m. until the following morning, yet this crossing is on a double trunk line highway—The Norwich-Worcester route and the Providence-Hartford route. With the big expresses running on many nights in several sections, this crossing constitutes a real danger point for motorists.

Members of the Service battery who are to make next week's trip to Tobyhanna, Pa., with the motor truck convoy will get their meals from a rolling kitchen that is part of the battery equipment. This equipment is towed by one of the trucks. It was demonstrated last year that this device operated by experienced men of the outfit is fully capable of providing well cooked meals for the soldiers. It is even possible to have a meal cooking while the convoy is underway.

Loose shingles went slithering off roofs, broken branches rattled down from trees and there was plenty of dust to get into bad men's eyes during Tuesday when half a gale out of the southwest held away, not to mention what happened to men's straw hats of the sailor variety that went sailing and rolling about. It was another peculiar weather performance for a very peculiar June.

While no municipal display of fire-works has been arranged for Danielson on the Fourth, there will be many displays by individuals. Sales of fireworks are already brisk here, and finding a particularly ready sale are those pieces intended for night displays.

Rev. Augustin Chapignac, M. S., of Hartford and formerly of Danielson, is at St. Joseph's church in Dayville substituting for the pastor Rev. Ignatius Keet, who is in Europe.

Mrs. E. H. Keach is to spend the summer at the Keach cottage at Kelsey Point, near Westbrook. Postmaster Keach will go there week ends.

James Thompson, formerly a resident at Danielson, died recently at Bennington, Vt. He had been in poor health for the past three years.

The Buddies—The American legion team—are leading Danielson's Twilight league. This team will be weakened temporarily by the absence in camp for a fortnight in July of its players who happen to be members of the Service battery.

Camp sites for motor tourists in the vicinity of Danielson are attracting more campers these days than in any past season.

A sparrow that alighted on the shoulder of William Harklot while he was in the business section and was content to remain there while Mr. Harklot sauntered about on various errands was a sight of appealing interest to numbers of people.

Byron Wood has purchased of John Sault a dwelling house on Mechanic street, near Oak street.

Banks in Danielson will observe next Monday as a holiday, closing for the day.

Brooklyn's colony of summer visitors is growing steadily and will have about reached its peak in another fortnight.

Some band concerts on Davis park are in prospect for July and August.

That there is no dearth of farm labor this summer is indicated by the numerous responses to farm help want advertisements that have appeared in this paper from farmers in Windham county.

At the home on Academy street Tuesday afternoon at 3 o'clock funeral services for Mrs. Josephine Maine Franklin, wife of Vine R. Franklin were conducted by Rev. John R. Pratt of the Brooklyn Congregational church. There was a very large attendance, numbers of those present representing organizations of which Mrs. Franklin was a member. The floral remembrances were many and very beautiful. Burial was in the South cemetery at Brooklyn. The bearers were H. D. Crosby, Franklin Crosby, John Crosby, Daniel F. Holmes, Providence, Alfred C. Cutler of East Hartford and Fred A. McComb of Worcester. A. F. Wood was in charge of the arrangements.

MRS. ADOLPH HANSEN
HOLMQUIST, SOUTH DAKOTA

Holmquist, South Dakota.—"I can not begin to tell you how much good Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done for me. I was sick for about four years. I could not sleep, and I was always worrying, so one day we saw your advertisement in a paper, and I made up my mind to try the Vegetable Compound. I bought one bottle and did not see any change, so I got another bottle. At the second bottle I began to feel better and I have used the Vegetable Compound ever since, whenever I feel badly. I recommend it and I will answer any letters asking about it."—Mrs. Adolph Hansen, Holmquist, South Dakota.

Could Work Only Two Hours

Encanto, Calif.—"I bless the day I began taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I was so weak and tired all the time I could not work more than two hours each day, then had to go to bed for the rest of the day. I read so much about the Vegetable Compound and I was so weak that I decided to try it. I now do my own housework—washing, scrubbing, and ironing—and then help my husband with his garden. I do not have that worn-out feeling now. I advise every woman to give your wonderful medicine a trial, and I will answer any letters I receive from women asking about it."—Mrs. Stella Lay, 700 Jamacha Road, Encanto, Calif.

A woman who is fighting for her health and her family's happiness is a valiant soldier. She wages her battle in her own kitchen. She has no thrilling bugles to cheer her on, no waving banners.

SOUTHERN NEW ENGLAND FARMING

According to statistics which the [illegible] Department has been studying [illegible] that southern New England has more farm tractors per acre than any other part of the United States with the exception of New Jersey and Connecticut. In the United States the [illegible] for tractors is 190 to every [illegible] of improved farm land. [illegible] between New England and the aver[illegible] 280 and Connecticut stands [illegible] In the list of states.

[illegible] seem a bit surprising as [illegible] Franklin [illegible] and [illegible] second least number of tractors [illegible] South Dakota would have [illegible] receive in tractors [illegible] [illegible] of course [illegible] [illegible] farmers [illegible] to find [illegible] the farming which [illegible] been put [illegible] benefit of in[illegible] [illegible] That may not go [illegible] on the same scale as in other states, they may raise a greater diversity of crops and they may have different soil problems to contend with but if the tractor is [illegible] they are going [illegible]

[illegible] enterprise. The farmer what [illegible] is doing for the [illegible] is making it [illegible] [illegible] and under old [illegible] methods of cultivation.

[illegible] is a question of doing much [illegible] situation which was aris[illegible] the difficulties [illegible] to secure sufficient farm [illegible] The tractor isn't human but it [illegible] without getting tired and it is [illegible] matter to drive a trac[illegible] day while it was to hold a plow [illegible] horses from sunrise [illegible]

[illegible] New England is turning [illegible] farmers at we can judge [illegible] figures. It is display[illegible] a reward for its opportunities to [illegible] the many nearby markets. [illegible] New England appears to be [illegible] to a greater degree than [illegible] section [illegible] enough for [illegible] that there's room left for [illegible] [illegible] impressed as satisfactory.

MARKING VETERANS' GRAVES

When the question of marking the graves of the American soldiers, who [illegible] lives in Europe and are [illegible] in cemeteries across the water, was faced there was involved the matter of expense in determining the character of the monuments. Naturally the desire was to have American granite for the bronze stones, and prices were obtained on American granite. But after that was purchased there remained the matter of transportation and the result was that markers from American marble would cost several times what markers from French stone or Italian marble would delivered at the cemeteries.

There is in fact a considerable difference in favor of the Carrara marble when it is noted that delivered headstones of such would cost $14.50 while French white stone markers would cost $10 each. Decision has not been reached as to which of these will be selected, but it is not to be overlooked in making the decision that the marble might not last for more than 40 years while the French stone would last forever and not have to be renewed.

It is because no more satisfactory results would be obtained through the placing of American granite markers on the veterans graves at several times the cost that the American battle monuments commission, General Pershing chairman, has recommended that either the Italian marble or the French stone be used. It is a well reasoned recommendation and on the basis of durability it would seem that the final decision would be for the French stone.

The commission is committed to fitting and lasting markers, with each one containing the proper inscription and all uniform. That the cemeteries will always be well taken care of is to be expected, even to the replacement of stones if that becomes necessary, but when the decision is being made it is good judgment that leans toward the material that is the most indestructible under the effects of the elements. The commission's report concerning markers indicates that the work has been placed in good hands.

CREATING A NUISANCE

In common with others, complaints have come from New York beaches about the detrimental effects of oil waste being washed upon them. The protests are justified, and some day there may be relief. But that is not the only nuisance which is experienced at the New York beaches, and along the Jersey shore. Every year there is the annoyance from the refuse which is dumped at sea being blown and carried back upon these beaches. This isn't due to the refuse that is dumped overboard by ships but to the garbage and other waste that is deliberately carried to sea for disposal by the city of New York, only to be brought back by wind and tide.

While the oil may not be attributed to New York the garbage and other debris can be, and it rests with New York to correct its own bad practices. Just now the complaints have to do with much driftwood which is being found along the beaches. That would seem to be about the least objectionable of anything that might be experienced. It is not a contribution to the attractiveness of the beaches or to the comfort of the swimmers for large quantities of driftwood to be moving along the water's edge with each tide, but it is nothing as compared to garbage and really not difficult to get rid of.

But all this nuisance can be eliminated by the abandonment of the practice of carrying garbage and rubbish to sea by the bargeful and leaving that which will float to the action of the wind and tide. It represents the easy means of disposal but in view of the objectionable results it bids fair to be stopped as soon as the protest becomes loud and long enough.

Garbage disposal plants would meet the situation in New York city quite the same as it does elsewhere. Probably it is time that the change was made, but New York moves in such matters much like other communities. Little thought is given by any community to its sewer disposal if it is convenient to a river until the bad effects of such a method reveal themselves. The same thing is happening to New York in regard to its garbage.

SCHOOL CHILDREN'S SAVINGS

When it is reported that the school children of the United States have on deposit in the banking institutions the sum of $20,000,000 it reveals the excellent results which have been gained through the urging of systematic savings and thrift.

In connection with the other training in the schools there is nothing more valuable than that which encourages the importance of saving, fighting worthlessness and putting aside regularly certain sums for future use. It is guidance which too many of them might never get otherwise. It is a help that can do much toward getting them started in the right channel relative to such funds as they may handle, whether they are large or small.

Through knowing how to handle money and becoming familiar with the idea of saving a part of it for the unexpected demands that may arise there is an insight gained and a habit formed that will mean an immeasurable amount for the days that are to come. It means the beginning of a practice that can be expected in most cases to be carried on through life, and that is a practice that everyone should not only indulge in but encourage.

The idea of thrift is an old one. Savings banks have existed for many years but where there was $14,000,000 in the 61 savings bank in the country about 85 years ago, there are now $14,000,000,000 in such institutions. The practice of saving tells its own story if given a chance, but in spite of the many who are systematically preparing for the rainy day there are still too many who are negligent in this respect. Such neglicence is invariably found out in time, through bitter experience, but by then it is too late to correct the mistake.

GOT CRIMINALS WORRIED

If there are those who think that the lenient manner in which criminals are dealt with by courts, parole commissions and pardon boards doesn't have its influence upon the new recruits and the keeping of old hands at the game, it will be well to study the situation that has developed in New York state within the present month.

With the first of July there goes into effect in that state a new law under which crime is more severely dealt with and it is not as easy to obtain parole as in the past. This is appreciated not only by those who have long demanded this protection, but by the criminal class also. The latter, according to reports, are breaking their necks in getting a chance to plead guilty and get into Sing Sing to pay the penalty for the crimes they have committed before the new laws go into effect. They are anxious to get back of the bars this month so that they can get the benefits of the present law with all the favors in their behalf and escape the effects of the work which they know has been done through the new legislation to make crime less attractive.

It goes to show the studied manner in which the criminals have been carrying on their business. They have snapped their fingers at laws, gone to prison when it was so decreed but knowing all the time that there were ways in which they could bear the laws, get away from the prison and back to their old pursuits without seriously interfering with their pleasure or keeping their hands out of practice for any great length of time.

From all indications they are not welcoming the change. Whether it will actually accomplish what is aimed at, or whether sufficient loopholes will be discovered to circumvent it will be awaited with interest. Perhaps the criminal class is worried only temporarily.

IN THE PUBLIC EYE

Louis B. Hanna, who is the standard bearer of the regular republicans in the contest for the United States senatorial nomination in todays primary in North Dakota, has long been a conspicuous figure in politics in that state. Some ten years ago he came into the national limelight as Governor of North Dakota at the time when the nonpartisan league was organized and was introducing its innovations in the conduct of public affairs. Mr. Hanna is a native of Pennsylvania who removed to what was then Dakota territory soon after completing his public school education. In his new home he met with prosperity and in due time became prominent as a banker and business man. His entry into politics came in 1890, when he was elected to the lower house of the state legislature. Several terms in the state senate and two terms in congress were followed by his election to the governorship in 1913.

HER CAMPAIGN

"Men," pronounced the languid girl with too much lipstick, "are certainly the queerest! The more you do for them the less they appreciate it. They —"

"Whom are you talking about besides Albert?" inquired her friend with the slicked-backed hair. "You haven't been able to see or hear or think of any one but Albert for ages."

"How ridiculous!" declared the young woman with vivid lips. "I've merely been interested in Albert because he came to the house to see my cousin, although nothing ever will make me think that if I were not so shy naturally and always letting somebody else step forward while I stayed in the background it would be I that Albert was so crazy about!

"Back where she comes from they think the Charleston is something to do with the Civil war and she is so—so plain and quiet and behind the times—you know! No brilliancy or chatter or up-to-dateness! Of course Lil had never seen anything quite like Albert and her big-eyed, open admiration for him was what he fell for—men are so vain!"

"If there only were some way of convincing him that your interest was so self-sacrificing and kindly," purred her friend with the patent-leather hair, "It is noble of you, but the trouble is that he doesn't notice it. This is a case where all politeness ceases—why don't you step right in and firmly but kindly obliterate her—"

"Oh, dear!" the girl with the red lips protested in perfectly shocked tones, "I'm too retiring ever to do a thing like that! If Lil had a bit of sense she would take a hint. I am as certain as anything that when Albert called up that day he intended to ask me to go to the charity cabaret affair we had talked about weeks before—no, he didn't exactly ask me then, but you know you can sort of tell. I had said how much I wanted to go and he had said sure I would. What more could any one want? I got a new black velvet evening dress and coral feather fan that were simply stunning—and didn't I come into the house just in time to hear Lil at the phone gasping that oh, she had never been to an affair like that and did he really mean to take her, how lovely!

"I resolved right then and there to get Albert out of his predicament. I could almost tell just what was happening. Lil became more an more excited, and I knew that when she accepted she thought he meant for me and Lil inquired if there was any message and he went away and said something about his party and the girl at the office to misunderstand him—and so what could the poor boy do?"

"'Now, Lil,' I said to her, 'you know I want you to have the best sort of time on this visit to Chicago, but do you really think you should try to go to a fashionable affair like this cabaret charity party? The women there will all wear stunning clothes and all you have is that little white thing and do you think, dearie, you are enough up on the new steps not to embarrass Albert?' He wants to be nice to my guest. He practically had asked me to go to this same party weeks ago!

"Lil just sort of drew up frigidly and said she certainly didn't and she would leave the matter entirely in my hands and walked out of the room. So I called up Albert and I must say I was diplomatic in the way I told him Lil had been mistaken about going to the charity dance and that anyhow other things were taking up her attention but that I didn't want him left high and dry after his kindness and I should be glad to fill in her place.

"Well, that man just jammed up the receiver and an hour later he was at our house demanding to see Lil. And of course the silly little thing dissolved in tears and simply told him why she wasn't going with him. And you should have seen Albert when he met me in the hall after leaving Lil! I certainly have been deceived about that man! He just glared in the most hateful way and said I might be interested to know that not only was Lil going with him to the party in her rag of a white gown but that she was engaged to him and maybe I could use my dress at the wedding! And slammed out of the front door!"

"Well, what do you think of that?" said the friend with the extreme hair, registering complete satisfaction.—Exchange.

High Taxes and Unjust Competition

Mr. Editor: I was very much interested in Citizen's letter. I am a direct taxpayer of 5 per cent to city and town. Also an indirect taxpayer, paying 10 per cent on an investment of $9,000 a year for a place to do business and live in. I am also liable to the extent of my business inventory for the debts of the gas and electrical department and at the same time up against such competition for instance as "Gas heaters installed on range boilers, $3 cents down and a small weekly payment. Electric flat irons, sweepers, light bulbs, gas and electric stoves, washing machines and every appliance that applies to gas and electricity on the same terms."

Some condition for the merchant in that line to run up against who is paying 5 per cent tax for the right to do business and 10 per cent for a place to do it in.

If the conditions could be eliminated whereby my neighbor with every convenience that I have would be liable for the same amount of taxation and liability as I am it would be an object for right and justice for me and thousands of others.

We read in the report of Alexander H. Manes, city auditor for 1924-25: Receipts from gas and electric department see exhibit B $774,412.42; Payments for gas and electric department see exhibit C $717,820.93; excess of payments over receipts $3,-811.71, also fine for speeding incurred by Earl G. Taggart, voucher 1-224 $28.92, voucher 251, Charles W. Taggart, traveling expenses, Detroit $98.-91; voucher 293, Charles W. Taggart, traveling expenses, Philadelphia-Boston $97.50; voucher 302, Charles W. Taggart, traveling expenses, Detroit $158.70; voucher 306, Earl G. Taggart, traveling expenses, Little Falls $15.61, Vouchers 1-306, Earl G. Taggart, traveling expenses, Albany $6.95; voucher 1-308, Earl G. Taggart, traveling expenses, Boston $8.00; voucher 1-285, Earl G. Taggart, traveling expenses, Hartford $6.65; voucher 1-312 Earl G. Taggart, commissions $103.30; voucher 1-313 Earl G. Taggart, traveling expenses, Boston $13.00; voucher 3-275, Earl G. Taggart, traveling expense, New York $11.40, voucher 3-281, Earl G. Taggart, commission $110.05, total $825.41.

I think it would be nice if the chamber of commerce would look into matter up and tell us owners of the gas and electrical department in their monthly letter who this Earl G. Taggart is, what position he occupies in the department and what the traveling expenses and commissions are for and just how they are making money when the payments are $3,811.71 more than they took in according to city auditor of the treasurer's office.

The conditions seem to border on the words of Commodore Vanderbilt who when pleaded with in the interests of the public utilities he controlled said: "The public be d——". That seems to be about our fix at the present time as stock holders of the gas and electrical department looking for information.

An Appeal to the Friends of Edward Randall.

Mr. Editor: Doubtless there are many people in Putnam and surrounding towns who remember Edward Randall. For many years he made his home in East Putnam, an honest hard working citizen.

In Oct. 1923 he fell 40 feet to the pavement when the ladder from which he was painting broke suddenly.

He is now practically penniless and in a helpless condition.

We earnestly appeal to the friends of Edward Randall and to all friends of humanity to put your change in it home and send it to some financial aid, however small, to help him over till he can once more earn his own living.

Let this shower of aid be a real "shower of blessing". Send all contributions to Edward Randall Abington Conn., care the Haven.

Military Training

Mr. Editor: I [illegible] read to [illegible] "Well, Stephen [illegible]" and there has been so much [illegible] lately about outlawing War, "A Warless World," "Military Training," "Training Camps" etc. that I want to say a word, in a conversation lately with a man who had been in two training camps—since he returned from "over seas"—(he was in the "World war") and his experience coincided with my judgment, that military training in these training camps is a good thing for all who take advantage of the opportunity to attend. The statement that anything that savors at all of war by those opposed to the camps, is not borne out by his experience or fear by anyone of things we see in every day life. They say it makes them all "warriors". It has just the opposite effect; and if they will take the pains to really inquire into the matter they will be very much disillusioned.

I make the claim that of every 100 men trained only five want to ever see war or even go into the regular army, and more than half of that five will not be fully normal or they would not want to go into the army even in time of peace when there is no likelihood of a war. We all know that the government tries to obtain fully normal men in the camp material but they have not time enough for full investigation. Most of these men are as anxious as war with for the U. S. to keep out of war and not bring them into it by any means. Does any one think for a minute General Wood or Pershing are trying to get into even a skirmish or want to see one? Because you have an insurance policy, life, accident or fire, are you unless you are depraved or subnormal or crazy, going to put yourself "out of the way", in danger or set your house afire? Military training corresponds to the insurance policy. You know that and further you see our country needs not any large standing force to keep peace at home, but some time in the near future may want a trained force to defend us. How many lives it will save if such a contingency should occur.

I had some military training as a young man and wish I had more.

Bourke Cockran, Immigrant; Great Orator

It is hard to believe that Bourke Cockran, the "silver-tongued" orator, the master of politics and of men, had to work his way up the ladder of high reputation. Any one who has heard him speak thinks of him as a man to whom good luck must come by a sort of divine gift. The hard grindstones of life helped to polish his oratory and to make him a great man.

Bourke Cockran was born in Ireland, a land where good public speakers and men of ability grow. He had the good luck to go to good schools, and the good sense to make use of his opportunities to learn. Then like so many other Irish boys, he came to America. He was 17 when he walked from the steamer, keeping his hand on the little sum of money that had been sufficient to guarantee his entrance into the land of opportunity for those who are willing to work. He was 17, strong, healthy, vigorous, with a twinkle in his eyes, and a good active mind. He had the best of passports to fame. At that time A. T. Stewart, who had himself come from Ireland as a boy looking hopefully to the future, was the leading merchant in New York. In his store Bourke Cockran found a humble job selling cheap soft goods. That does not seem a preparation for oratory and political life, but Bourke Cockran made it a good preparation. He earned money and supported himself. Then he found a place as teacher and did so well that he became a school principal. Still looking to the future, he spent his evenings in studying law, and at 22 he was admitted to the bar.

Now he had really found himself. As a lawyer he had the chance to speak in public, to use his fluent Irish wit and his keen brain and to try cases with men as keen as himself. He won clients and popularity so that by the time he was 32 he was sent to congress and reelected several times. He had also a natural gift of oratory that made him one of the most prominent men in his party, and a national figure. When measures were to be put before the people in the course of political campaigns Bourke Cockran was sent to speak, and he won his audiences. If he had been satisfied with a small life he might have remained a state orator; he chose to make the hard effort, and he won his way to real reputation.

Stories That Recall Others

Not That Cruel

It was Mary's first week at school. [illegible] why she hurried home with a [illegible] to tell mother of the day's occurrences.

One evening she rushed into the house, saying to her mother: "Mother, you don't know what the teacher wants us children to bring her tomorrow? Cat tails! She told everyone she could bring some to raise her hand. But, mother, I didn't raise my hand, cause we haven't any cats, and anyway, I knew you wouldn't let me cut their tails off."

A Big Turnout

A well known and popular republican stopped into a store for his favorite smoke and was kidded by the proprietor, a democrat, on the apparent apathy of the republicans in the coming campaign.

"Why," said the republican "we started to have a most enthusiastic meeting."

"Before or after," inquired the teaser.

"Before," said the smoker after taking two or three puffs. "We met in a telephone booth."

JUDGE RENDERS DECISION IN PLAINTIFF'S FAVOR

According to a decision filed Tuesday with the clerk of the court of common pleas in this city by Judge Arthur L. Libby, Gustav R. Hubbard of the town of Waterford is given judgment in the amount of $49 and it is also ordered that he recover from the defendants in the case, William K. and Edward P. Beckwith, both of East Lyme, possession of the premises located on the shores of the Niantic river, near the bridge. In his decision Judge Libby says in part:

This is an action in ejectment. It appears that the premises claimed by the plaintiff are premises which came to the plaintiff by warrant dead dated Aug. 9, 1926, in which Fred A. Beckwith and the grantor, Beckwith quit claim to the plaintiff all his right, title and interest in or to that certain tract of land situated in the town of East Lyme. The plaintiff also claimed as part of the premises certain land and rights given to the plaintiff under a quit claim deed of New London county dated April 21, 1921 being the land heretofore used as the west approach to the Niantic bay bridge connecting the towns of East Lyme and Waterford together with all riparian or other rights or privileges appurtenant thereto and appurtenant.

To this action the plaintiff claims title by deed and also by adverse possession. The deeds offered in the plaintiff's chain of title begin with the quit claim deed of Valentine A. Smith, dated Jan. 7, 1876. By a series of conveyances this property came into the hands of the plaintiff and it is claimed by him that the plaintiff, with his predecessors in title, have held the open, notorious, uninterrupted, continuous, undisputed, peaceable and adverse possession of the land described in the plaintiffs complaint for a period of about 50 years under a claim of right excepting the highway across the same, which is not now in use which the plaintiff claims by the county's deed and which has never been occupied by the defendants. By stipulation it was stipulated and agreed between the parties as follows: "That Fred A. Beckwith by his deed of Aug. 6th, 1926, intended to convey to the plaintiff all of the property in question which he owned and was possessed of."

The defendants in the above entitled action became tenants at will of the above described premises under a "permissive possession" given to them by said Fred Beckwith to whom the defendants from time to time paid rent in merchandise or money and whom they recognized as landlord.

The said defendants offered no evidence at the trial or the case and made no attempt to establish any title to said premises in themselves. While the defendants were in the "permissive possession" of the premises they attorned as tenants to said Fred A. Beckwith and would be estopped to deny the landlord's title and would continue until they relinquished possession adn they never at any time made a surrender of said premises.

A tenancy at will is a tenancy which is terminable at the volition of either the landlord or the tenant. A conveyance by the landlord will terminate the tenancy as soon as the making of the coveyance is known to the tenant. The tenants and defendants herein received notice of the conveyance and a demand notice of the conveyance and a demand made of them for the premises by the plaintiff.

I find the issues for the plaintiff and direct that a judgment be entertained that the plaintiff recover of the defendants possession of the premises hereinbefore described and $10 damages.

W. S. ALLIS RESIGNS FROM TUBERCULOSIS COM.

Governor Trumbull has accepted the resignation of Wallace S. Allis of this city as a member of the state tuberculosis commission. The reason for the resignation of Mr. Allis is the state of his health, which has been impaired for some time.

Mr. Allis is a native of Vermont and is in his sixty-third year. He has been a member of the tuberculosis commission for about eight years. Governor Holcomb appointed him a member of the commission to revise the state statutes in 1915, but Mr. Allis resigned his position on that commission. He was afterwards appointed by the same chief executive on the tuberculosis commission. He was a member of the state senate at the session of 1901. Members of the commission expressed regret Tuesday at his resignation.

FOUND YOUNG COPPERHEAD SNAKE ON HIS FARM

A young copper-head snake, Connecticut's most poisonous reptile was caught by Edward Bushnell Monday afternoon on his farm on the Canterbury turnpike. Mr. Bushnell found the snake in one of his pastures and at first thought it was a striped adder. After picking it up he saw that it was a copper-head. The fact that the snake is small would indicate that there must be a pair of large ones and more small ones in that vicinity. The copper-head is being exhibited in the window of Weller's store, Taftville.

Judgment For $171 On Note

Judgment in the sum of $171 was awarded the Windhrop Trust Co. by Judge S. Victor Prince, following a hearing in a suit to recover payment on a promissory note from Arthur L. Artesani of New London Monday afternoon in the court of common pleas at New London. The note was made out for $400 by the Symon Furniture Co., formerly in that city, and endorsed by Artesani. In default of payment action for recovery was brought against Artesani. The sum named in judgment was fixed according to the terms of the defendant.

CLAIMS MONTVILLE FARM WAS DEEDED TO SON TO AVOID ATTACHMENT

Ignatz Neiderman, Regina Neiderman of New London and Edward Neiderman of Norwich have been made defendants in a $4,000 damage action brought by Frank Ferry of Norwich. Plaintiff claims he sold to the defandants about December 7, 1925, a farm in Montville and received payment therefore by deed of real estate located in Norwich from Ignatz and Regina Neiderman. There was a mortgage on the farm from the plaintiff to Maria Teresa Molinaro for $5,450.

Plaintiff claims Ignatz and Regina Neiderman agreed to pay the mortgage but failed to do so. Maria Teresa Molinaro brought suit against the plaintiff about June 12th, this month to collect on the mortgage. The plaintiff claims from the defendants, Ignatz and Regina Neiderman, the amount of judgment with cost which Maria Teresa Molinaro shall hereafter obtain against him, the plaintiff. The plaintiff claims $4,000 damages.

On a second count it is claimed Ignatz and Regina Neiderman about June 1, 1926, deeded the property to their son, Edward Neiderman without consideration, for the purpose of preventing the plaintiff from attaching the property. Plaintiff asks that the deed to Edward Neiderman be declared void.

SEA SLED WAS FOUND ON THAMESVILLE BEACH

The disappearance early Monday morning of Paddy Fenton, 26, of Poquonnock from the Groton plant of the Sea Sled Corp., where he was employed as night watchman, is still shrouded in mystery, although the $8,000 sea sled which was taken from the pier of the plant, was recovered Tuesday morning on a sandy beach at Thamesville, Norwich and New London police officials were making every attempt Tuesday to find some trace of the missing watchman.

The sea sled was found by Mrs. D. J. O'Connell of 11 Bushnell place whose residence at Thamesville borders on the Thames river. She notified the Norwich police officials. A tug was sent by the Merritt, Chapman & Scott Corp., Tuesday afternoon to tow the sled back.

That there were more than one man in the speed boat was made known by Mrs. O'Connell, who said that shortly before dawn Monday morning she heard men talking and laughing boisterously in the rear of her home, and upon locking out the window saw several men walking up from the spot where the sea sled was later found. Their boisterous conduct has led investigating officials to believe that the men who took the sea sled were intoxicated. At Fenton's home in Poquonnock it was said that he had not been home since Sunday afternoon. He reported for duty at 7 oclock Sunday night and disappeared some time after 1 o'clock Monday morning. An examination of his watch clock showed that he had punched in on it at that time. Whether he was one of the men seen by Mrs. O'Connell is yet to be determined.

NORWICH PLAYGROUNDS OPENED ON TUESDAY

The Norwich playgrounds have opened for the 1926 season and the work carried on in the different centers will again come before the public eye. Instructors, instructresses, members of the playground commission and all others affiliated with the work of the playgrounds anticipate the most successful term in the history of playground activity in this city.

The remainder of the week will be devoted to organizing the children at the different playcenters so that regularly scheduled contests in the various athletics along with the classes in industrial work can be gotten underway by Monday of next week.

All athletic contests will be staged at the academy campus, this year as was the case last season. This is done to avoid all disputes as far as possible the campus being a neutral field for all teams. John Murphy, in the role of official playground referee and umpire, will have charge at the campus.

With close to 2,000 children estimated at being present at the official opening sessions of the ten playgrounds on Tuesday it can readily be seen that there is an exceptional amount of interest shown in the playgrounds by the Norwich children and all indications at the present time point to a banner year.

MONTHLY LETTER OF CHAMBER OF COMMERCE

Secretary John J. O'Rourke of the Norwich chamber of commerce mailed out Tuesday the monthly membership letter to the members of the chamber. The letter, an unusually interesting one, deals with transportation, activities of the chamber's street committee, etc., and also makes reference to a "Welcome to Norwich" card which the chamber has gotten up for distribution at various state conventions. The letter is as follows:

Transportation Matters.

The traffic bureau of the chamber has recently given its attention to the local freight deliveries from New York. Tonnages shipped to Norwich via the New England Steamship company were not delivered by the New Haven company for about 36 hours. The first freight train on the Central Vermont line left too early to carry the tonnages from their boat.

Conferences were held with officials of bothe companies, the result of which gave Norwich an earlier delivery of freight. Both companies made special arrangements to improve the service.

The first New York daily freight delivery via the boat lines of both companies, is 8:30 a. m. by the Central Vermont, and 11:30 a. m. by the New Haven.

The following notice was recently sent to the traffic bureau by the Central Vermont company:

"The Central Vermont company has at the present time a delivery arranged with the Newark Terminal & Transportation company whereby freight is handled daily between Pier 29 East River, N. Y., and Newark, N. J. This service makes excellent time. Their dock is located at the foot of Madison street which is convenient and they do considerable local trucking in Newark. The rates which are given below are a few cents lower than the all rail rates and the time made is considerably better. Tariff I.V.V. A-7844 governs. Class rates—1st, 63.5; 2nd, 54; 3rd, 46; 4th, 36.5; 5th, 31; 6th, 28; R25, 46; R26, 37."

Instances have occurred where the unloading of freight cars has been delayed at the local freight house of the New Haven company.

Investigation showed that this happened because of the necessity of giving attention to the unloading of the perishable tonnages first, and th elack of storage space for loaded cars at the local terminal. This condition causes the unloaded cars to be taken from the terminal and stored at some convenient place nearby. These cars are given first attention as soon as it is possible for the handlers to do so.

Streets Committee.

This committee has taken up with the New Haven company's officials the question of a new thoroughfare which, it was believed, would help to relieve traffic congestion in Franklin square.

It was proposed to open up a one way thoroughfare from Rose place, passing the rear of the Palace theatre and ending at the approach to the New Haven station, at the rear of the McGeary building.

The removal of one of three tracks located in this territory, to the Laurel Hill freight yard, was contemplated so that a good width of roadway could be provided for the proposed thoroughfare. This track is used for the handling of perishable freight and would remove the necessity for trucks passing through Franklin square and Main street to the wholesale district on Commerce and Water streets.

Plans of the proposed highway were submitted to the railroad officials for approval. They stated in their reply that certain developments were contemplated in the next few years for this section which would be jeopardized if this right of way was given, or leased, to the city at the present time.

Road Signs.

Have you seen the new road signs placed by the chamber? One hundred signs have been contracted for which will be placed on all the principal routes coming to Norwich. Highways from Springfield, Worcester, Providence, Westerly, New London, New Haven, New Britain, Middletown, and Hartford will be covered. The signs indicate the direction to Norwich and the approximate mileage from any one given point. They are painted black and yellow and are of a convenient size so that they will be clear to the passing motorist.

Should any member know of any place where a sign should be placed, and is not, the suggestion will receive due attention from the officers of the chamber.

Welcome Cards.

You will find enclosed a copy of a welcome card which has been circulated at several conventions recently held at Eastern Point. They will be distributed at every large meeting when permissible, whether held in Norwich or elsewhere. This is another method of advertising Norwich. Nearly two thousand cards have already been dispensed with at various large public gatherings.

Industrial Matters.

During the past month the chamber was in communication with two industrial prospects, the representative of one of which came here to investigate our facilities. Both concerns are small, although one of them stated they would have a weekly payroll of $6,000.

Mention is made of this fact at this time to remind our members that this important phase of our work is not being overlooked or neglected. "Why don't we get some new industries?" is a question often in the minds of some.

REID PICKED TO WIN STATE AMATEUR GOLFING CROWN AT SHENECOSSETT

EASTERN POINT, Conn., June 29—(AP)—W. K. Reid, golfing star of the Farmington Country club, is looked upon by golfing experts watching the 27th annual tournament of the Connecticut Golf association at the Shenecossett Country club, as perhaps the strongest contender for the 1926 state golfing championship crown. They base their opinion on the consistant and winning golf displayed by the Farmington man in the four day tournament which will come to an end Thursday with a 36 hole championship match.

Reid, however, to capture the much desired prize, must overcome the stiffest kind of opposition in the round before the semi-finals and the semi-finals tomorrow and again in the finals on Thursday.

As his opponent in the round before the semi-finals tomorrow morning, Reid will have J. Sills, Jr., of Wethersfield, a golfer always at or near the top in tournament play, a hard and accurate driver and deadly with his putter on the greens. It is expected by experts to be one of the sensational matches of the tournament.

Reid to gain the round before the semi-finals, this morning defeated W. M. Goss of Pine Orchard, 2 and 1 and this afternoon took the measure of G. F. Smart of the Wethersfield club.

Sills, in his morning match downed F. S. Wilcox, Jr., of Norwich, 2 and 1 and then came back to defeat S. Brainard of Mill River.

The second match in the upper frame of the championship division tomorrow morning will find F. K. English of Waterbury playing against S. G. Smart of Goodwin Park. English this morning had no easy time with L. G. Sargent of New Haven, capturing the match seven up. C. C. Elwell, Jr., of New Haven, proved a tougher opponent in the afternoon but English came through with a 3 and 2 victory.

Smart's morning round against M. W. Goss of Waterbury also proved somewhat of a walkaway, the Goodwin Park golfer coming home with a 7 and 6 win. The match in the afternoon, however, with Smart having R. Cook, of Hartford, as his opponent, was one hard fought to the finish. They ended all even on the 18th green but at the 19th hole, Smart holed out one stroke under his competitor and earned the right to have his name carried forward on the championship chart.

In the lower frame of the championship division, play tomorrow morning will find H. B. Carey of Hartford battling against the youthful J. J. Geohegan of Manchester and F. D. Ross of Seguin having A. D. Dodge of Farmington as his opponent.

Carey this morning defeated W. D. Macdonald of Woodway 4 and 3 and gained a five and four advantage over W. S. Heyniger of Waterbury in the afternoon play.

Geohegan beat E. L. White of New Haven one up in the morning play and packed away a four and three win this afternoon in his match with M. P. Warner of Pine Orchard.

Ross gained his right to play tomorrow by defeating H. G. Wilkie of Goodwin Park 3 and 2 this morning and C. M. Aldrich of Hartford, 3 and 1 in the afternoon.

Dodge gained a five and four win over H. C. Banks of Greenwich this morning but was forced to go 20 holes before he could defeat W. J. Sweeney of Shuttle Meadow, this afternoon. This match proved the most interesting from the spectators' standpoint of any throughout the day. While the golf displayed by both men was not above the average, the finish was spectacular and drew a large gallery. Sweeney, the runner up in last year's championship, apparently had the match packed away in the golf bag when he was two up at the sixteenth hole. Then, however he suffered an acute attack of poor putting on the greens. Dodge took the seventeenth and eighteenth and they were all even.

The nineteenth hole takes the golfers around a bend in the course, the green being out of sight of the tee. Their drives were even, both reaching the turn in the course, and they were both on the green in two. Dodge's approach was a pretty one, the ball landing about a yard from the pin. Dodge, however, missed the putt and they both holed out in four.

Again their drives were even on the 20th, but on the approach shots, Sweeney landed to the left of the green, just missing a trap, while Dodge landed on the green, about 25 feet from the pin. Dodge was down in four, while Sweeney needed a five and thereby lost his opportunity to continue on in the championship play.

The championship contest has developed into apparently a Hartford battle. Of the eight men contesting in the round before the semi-finals, seven are from the Hartford district, the eighth being F. K. English of Waterbury.

Reid has been playing very consistent golf during the tournament. He led in the qualifying round yesterday was the lowest in the field of 140 golfers. His first round was made in 74 and the second round in 75. Today he bettered his mark, coming home with a 148 for the 36 holes. Par for the course for 36 holes is 144. In making his 148 today, he shot a 75 this morning and a 73 in the afternoon.

The reconstructed Shenecossett course, which tripped up many of the golfers, apparently does not frighten the Farmington man. He took part in an interstate match at Shenecossett Saturday between teams from Massachusetts and Connecticut and he had Francis Ouimet as his opponent. The Farmington golfer gave the Massachusetts star a battle and was but one down at the finish. Both Reid and Sills are members of the state team.

WAUREGAN BOASTS A SNAPPY JUNIOR TEAM

(Special to the Bulletin)

DANIELSON, June 29.—If you have not heard of the Pee Wees, you will hear of them as the summer wears on. They're a schoolboy baseball team with a squad of 22 players, ranging from 13 to 16 years of age, and they hail from Wauregan. Jerry Doyle of that place, an old-time player and ever enthusiastic booster of the game, is their sponsor. He says they can play baseball and that should be enough for those who know Jerry. This snappy aggregation of youngsters has been uniformed at a cost of about $150, through the efforts of Wauregan men who wanted to do something for the boys, the money raised through entertainments of one kind and another. There is but one thing lacking to make the summer a time of unadulterated joy for the Pee Wees. They want baseball games with teams made up of players of their own age, games anywhere in eastern Connecticut or other nearby territory. They are coming to Danielson at an early date to play the St. James' school team, another nifty outfit of junior players. Manager Doyle says he will be pleased to hear from teams that want games and that he can be reached by addressing him at Wauregan.

The Hammer Nine baseball team had only 15 minutes in which to get ready to play the Sea Sled team its second game of the series. The game was played at Rossie field and only a small crowd turned out because no one knew anything about the game until the last minute. At 6:30 o'clock Umpire McGrath said, "Play Ball," and the Hammer Nine went to bat. When the smoke cleared from the field nine runs had crossed the plate. After that everyone knew who was going to win. At the end of the game the score was Hammer Nine 27, Sea Sled team 2. The winners knocked two pitchers out of the box, geeting a total of 22 hits for an evening's work. Big right-hander, Ted Barry, goth 16 strike outs and held the sea-going team to 4 hits. He also hit a home run with 3 on in the fifth inning. Barry has rounded into a good pitcher This is his first year in the box and he has some mean curvesm and speed. Capt. Sullivan made a great running catch of a drive good for three bases, coming from the bat of Lowell of the Sea Sled team. Running to the wall in left field he nabbed the ball before it went over the wall. Every man on the Hammer Nine team hit the ball and kept the men of the sea going team from West Mystic chasing the ball all over the field. B. Patterson walked 6 times during the game. The Hammer Nine men did not make an error in the field but the Sea Sled team made 7 of them. Mgr. Crumb of the Hammer Nine benched himself to try out a new fielder. In the last inning, with three men on bases Mgr. Crumb went in to bat in the place of Sullivan. The first ball pitched he hit for two bases but was out at third base for trying to stretch it into a three base hit. This game was the Hammer Nine's 5th straight victory this season. The battery for the Sea Sled team was Brewer, McGown and Grant, pitch; Lowell, catch; for the Hammer Nine: Farry pitch; Speed Phelps, catch.

Leland Andrews driving a Marmon car towards Mystic ran into a Bergman ice truck at the curve at Bergman Ice House. The car was damaged badly but the truck was not harmed. This is a bad curve for when two cars pass one has to get close to the fence. No one was hurt and the car was towed away to a garage in Mystic. The axle and the front wheel was smashed.

BUILDING OPERATIONS IN NORWICH

With practically half of 1926 gone no startling building records in Norwich have been broken, in fact, the record for the first six months of the year is somewhat in the rear of the 1925 mark. There has been little done along building lines during the past week as regards new buildings, but fair progress has been made on work that is being done on buildings in the city in the process of construction.

The garage for Fontaine brothers on West Main street reached the completion stage as did the garage and service station for David Goldberg on Franklin street. A frame and stucco service station on North Main street has been completed and is ready for occupation.

Several houses being erected in the East Great Plain section of the city have been brought along at a fair state of progress. In Norwich Town there are a number of garages in the process of erection and the new home of the Lincoln Dairy on Town street is coming along with all possible speed.

Other projects in and around Norwich were brought toward completion during the past week but in looking over the past week the three best cases of building off as new construction will be lessened by completion of the small frame garages. There has been practically no large contracts let work in the city although contractors are managing to keep busy on the smaller jobs.

BONDS FOR NEW LONDON RESTAURANT PROPRIETOR NOW RAISED TO $7,500

(Special to the Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, June 29. — Athos Boodris, who until Monday morning was the manager and owner of the Sea Food restaurant on Bank street is in jail now unable to procure a bond of $7,500 that will give him his liberty till he is arraigned in the police court and explains that he is not guilty of having set fire to the restaurant for the purpose of collecting the big insurance he had upon his place. He is charged with having done just what the complaint against him says he did, and State Policeman Albright, who has been investigating the case is of the opinion that the evidence he has secured is all in the direction of showing the guilt of Boodris. The policeman is so confident of his ground that he asked the prosecutor today to have the bond holding Boodris increased from $5,000 to $7,500. Two men associated with Boodris in the restaurant and who are jointly accused with him, were released this Thursday, the date to which the Boodris hearing was adjourned, when they each furnished a bond of $1,000.

The state policeman does not feel so certain that Gregory Papas and James Stavros are guilty of the crime they are charged with. The state police were called into the case under the provisions of a state law which makes it mandatory for the fire marshal to call on the state police in the event that he desires investigation that he can not accomplish.

Hyman Tanenbaum and Charles Rakowsky, residents at Ocean beach during the summer season, became involved up in a war of words. The former claimed the latter assaulted him, but with all the disgust he could express in facial changes he denied what was said about him, declaring that the striking consisted of pointing his finger at his older accuser and accompanying that attitude with a command that Tanenbaum should not again talk disrespectfully or abusively to Rakowsky's mother. The matter seemed to be such as had no place in the court and which might have been adjusted had either man shown a disposition to avoid notoriety. Judge Prince ordered the case to be assigned for the 27th of November and told the complaining parties to discontinue their bickerings.

A sailor from the submarine base, Carl Angle, was charged with operating an automobile while his license was under suspension. He admitted that he had made a mistake which he regretted having resorted to that he might defeat the purpose of the state motor vehicle department in ordering the suspension. He was fined $50 just to convince him that he made a serious mistake in his action.

John L. McLean, who may be described as a "bummer" to distinguish him from the well known newspaper publisher of the same name, has been before the police court a great many times in a few years, but he will not be arraigned there again for four months anyhow and perhaps for a longer period. John yesterday stole an automobile belonging to Everett Denison, Jr., a carpenter's apprentice while the latter was at work on the roof of a building on Water street. McLean was seen as he departed with the car by Bartholomew Welsh, but notwithstanding that McLean denied that he was the man who made off with the car. He accused Joe the possession of the Kodak by saying it was given to him by a tramp named Ryan who had worked with him at Fisher's Island, but Ryan was in custody and he contradicted McLean, saying that he did not give him the picture machine nor was he in the company of McLean yesterday. McLean was sent to jail to stay until next November and to remain an even longer time if he does not raise the [illegible] of his arrest [illegible].

Half a dozen violators of the parking ordinance were arraigned, but they were just three offenders so they escaped penalty other than the [illegible] of arraignment in court. A couple of drunks were also subjects for warnings.

Mrs. George Brayne and infant [illegible] Bank street; Henry [illegible] Mrs. Frank Sayer[illegible], and infant daughter, 112 Howard street; Miss Betty Sargent, 2 [illegible] avenue; Edward Rowan, United States coast guard destroyer Cassin, state pier; Mrs. Lila Sousa, Thames View, Waterford; John Forrester, Ocean beach, and Miss Mary Donovan, 43 Jay street, patients at Lawrence hospital, were discharged Sunday, Monday and today.

Mrs. Joseph Kearney, Mystic; Miss Ruth Peskoff, 54 John street; Walter A. Finney, Waterford; Miss Beatrice Litinsky, 49 Linden street; Miss Shirley Wolfe, 51 Summer street; Miss Irene Soltz, 20 School street; Michael Friedman, 217 Huntington street; Alvin Soltz, School street; Miss Isabel Denison, 39 Moatauk avenue; Miss Marian Martel, 277 Pequot avenue; Mrs. James McKenna, 112 Riverview avenue; Miss Sophie Wiersorek, 9 West Colt street, and Mrs. George Hazens, Waterford, patients at Home Memorial hospital, were dismissed Monday and today.

Abbott L. Douglass has sold to Archibald S. MacFarlane a building lot, corner of Vauxhall street and Lewis lane.

SEVEN PEOPLE INJURED WHEN AUTO OVERTURNED

(Special to the Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, June 29. — Seven people were injured early this morning on the Hartford turnpike when the automobile in which they were riding got beyond the control of the driver and running off the side of the highway overturned. Although all of the occupants were brought to the Lawrence hospital it was stated that none of the injuries were serious.

The injured are Mrs. Lena Seigel and son, Edward, 13, 129 Barber street, Hartford. The former suffered lacerations of the back and the boy sustained a lacerated nose, laceration of the right groin and probable fractured ribs; Harry Koretsky, Hartford, bruises and lacerations; Mrs. Harry Koretsky, Hartford, abrasions of the right hand; Miss Fannie Miller, Chesterfield, fractured nose; Miss Lillie Miller, Chesterfield, lacerated scalp; Miss Rose Cezron, Chesterfield, bruises and lacerations of the body.

The automobile was driven by Louis Saul, 1557 Hoe street, Bronx, New York, who escaped injury.

Commissioner of Motor Vehicles Robbins B. Stoeckel today ordered the return of the drivers' licenses of James Duff, 167 Huntington street and Gerald Ludwig, 36 Starr street, which were recently suspended for violation of the motor vehicle law.

HUGH McPARTLAND, VETERAN PLUMBER, DIED TUESDAY

(Special to the Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, June 29. — Hugh McPartland, 70, well known veteran master plumber, died this morning at his residence, 288 Ocean avenue, death ending a lingering illness. He is survived by three sons, Charles J., Hugh, Jr., and William McPartland, and by two daughters, Mrs. John F. Hokanson and Mrs. John Siderwitz, all of this city. Mr McPartland had been engaged in the plumbing business his entire life, starting work as a journeyman and afterwards going into business for himself, he having conducted a plumbing establishment about 30 years. Mr. McPartland suffered a decline in health about a year ago and submitted to three operations in the hopes that the operations would bring about a return of his former health. A short time followed the last operation. Mr. McPartland was compelled to his bed and had remained there since. Mr. McPartland had also served as an alderman in the city council.

PLANNING FOR CEMENT FOR MONTAUK AVENUE

(Special to the Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, June 29—It seems to be conceded that Montauk avenue will not be permanently supplied with cement covering during the current year. The budget of funds needed for the city has been made up and improvement of Montauk avenue is not calculated upon. That the avenue will be laid in cement sooner or later is conceded. It is the principal drive of the city and one that is used more than any other. As an example of how the cement covering for roads will stand the wear reference is made to Methodist street, a highway of short distance, but on that street Benjamin L. Armstrong, when he was mayor, finished the street in cement. Not a dollar has been spent upon it since for repairs, and no expenditure for that purpose is anticipated for many years to come. The road was laid some dozen years ago.

Residents of Walden avenue have been clamoring for sidewalks and a rebuilt street for a long time, but their appeals have been in vain. Now they are informed that their petition may be granted when the next budget is made up. One councilor stated that the street had not had $5 laid out upon it since it was opened. That being the case property owners on Walden avenue, who have been paying taxes as have property owners on other streets, believe they have not had a square deal.

POLICE ARREST TRIO WANTED IN WESTFIELD

(Special to the Bulletin)

NEW LONDON, June 29—John Donovan, 22, Terryville, and Daniel White, 23, and Adam Zordick, 19, both of Bristol, this state, were arrested this afternoon by Sergeants Nelson Smith and John Cavanaugh as being fugitives from justice. They were made prisoners and are being held for the state police at Westfield, Mass.

The arrest of the trio was not planned by the officers, who went to a Fourth street residence on another mission, that of investigating a much more serious charge than will be placed against the young men when they are returned to Westfield. While at the Fourth street residence on another mission there and in their company were two young girls, one of whom resided in the house and declared that she was keeping company with Zordick. In the room where the quintet were seated was secured to the care of the officers a considerable quantity of miscellaneous goods. The officers questioned the youths as to how they came in possession of the same and of such quantity and finally aroused them of breaking into a store. One of the youths finally admitted that they had perpetrated a burglary, but stated that it was far from New London. When pressed for the place where the break was made the youth stated that the party entered a gasoline station at Westfield. After they had been arrested and locked up the state police at Westfield were communicated with and Sergeant Baro stated that the youths had told the truth regarding the burglary and that an officer would come to New London tomorrow and escort the prisoners back to Westfield for trial. After the arrest of the young men it was revealed that they had been in New London frequently and for several days at a time and apparently they had made their home at the Fourth street house whenever they came to this city. The police, however, were not successful in obtaining the evidence at the Fourth street house they had anticipated would be the outcome of their visit there.

The Edward Bloom Silk Co., Garfield avenue, where a strike of about 50 weavers occurred three months ago and which resulted in the throwing of 250 additional hands out of employment, made a partial attempt this morning to resume operations for about a dozen hands were persuaded to return to work. Whether additional hands will follow in the steps of those today remains to be seen. When President Bloom decided to resume work at the mill today he requested that he be given police protection as well as protection being given to those who went to work. Sergeant Nelson Smith and Patrolmen Braxton Hill and John Sullivan were detailed to provide peace and order at the mill, but there was not need for their services as the returning workers were not disturbed by the strikers, although some of the latter remained in the vicinity of the mill the greater part of the day.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Breed Theatre

One of Uncle Sam's model battleships plays a leading role in "Shore Leave," Richard Barthelmess' newest First National production which comes to the Breed theatre on Sunday. The warship is the Arkansas, pride of the United States navy.

"Shore Leave" is the comedy romance of a "gob" and the United States government offered Barthelmess and his producers, Inspiration Pictures, Inc., full cooperation. Thus for the first time in the history of the navy, scenes of a motion picture drama were filmed on board a battleship at sea. Many of the scenes were "shot" while the Arkansas was en route from New York to Newport News, Va.

Uncle Sam, too, loaned a squad of some fifty seamen, accompanied by two petty officers from Brooklyn Navy Yard during the filming of the "Shore Leave." He is surrounded by an excellent cast headed by Dorothy Mackaill, Ted McNamara, Nick Long, Marie Shotwell and Arthur Metcalfe.

Broadway Theater

It is doubtful if any newspaper story has ever been brought to the screen with such a vivid and true-to-life background as that which enhances Headlines, the new Encore drama with Alice Joyce, Malcom McGregor and Virginia Lee Corbin playing the leading roles. It is said that newspaper men with long training in this profession saw to it that the backgrounds and characters really represented the great newspaper profession.

P. H Griffith, the director, was a former newspaper man. Mr. Griffith went direct to the offices of the New York World for many big scenes. Bayard Swope, managing editor of the World, gave him much assistance. Raymond Harris, a former San Francisco newspaper man wrote the titles and was assisted by Herbert Roemer, another newspaper man. Peter Milne and Arthur Hoerl, who wrote the scenario were both newspaper men at one time. Some of the players have also had newspaper experience.

Alice Joyce has the leading role in this drama and she is capably assisted by Virginia Lee Corbin and Malcolm McGregor, as well as other leading players.

Five excellent variety acts of Keith Albee vaudeville are also featured.

"For 'In-or-out' side use the best varnish is none too good" — The Bay Stater

"GIVE me the toughest, most durable varnish ever made for outside or inside use," I demanded of my factory. "And they gave me Bay State Inorout Varnish.

"Thousands are using it on kitchen floors. And one of my friends used it on his garage. Unlike most 'all-purpose' varnishes, Inorout will prove satisfactory when used on floors. It is extremely elastic, brushes easily and evenly, and dries hard overnight. Anyone can apply it.

"Use Inorout Varnish and be satisfied. I will actually guarantee it to render satisfaction when applied according to directions.

"My illustrated booklet 'Just Across the Way' describes in detail the different Bay State Paint and Varnish Products and how to use them. Fill out the coupon below and take it to the nearest Bay State Agent. He will gladly give you a free copy."

There is a Bay State Paint and Varnish Product for every needbacked by 60 years manufacturing experience.

MARKET WAS BUOYANT

NEW YORK, June 29—(AP)—Spirited bidding for leading industrial shares imparted unusual buoyancy to the stock market today. Encouraged by the establishment of a new high record by U. S. Steel at 141 3-8, operators for the rise distributed buying orders for scores of other popular issues, lifting prices 1 to 6 points on a turnover of nearly 1,500,000 shares.

In its upward surge the market ignored a tightening of credit conditions resulting from withdrawals of funds to meet the mid year settlements. Call money renewed at 5 per cent, the highest opening rate since April 13, but this factor was only a temporary deterrent and the upward movement steadily gathered momentum until a few minutes before the close when scattered profit-taking caused slight recessions from the day's high levels.

The climb of U. S. Steel to record heights apparently was based on vague hopes of an increased distribution to stockholders as well as on exceptionally favorable trade reports. The demand for pig iron was said to be at a rate unequalled since 1924, while steel manufacturing operations have held around 80 per cent. of capacity with no prospects of an immediate recession. The trend toward higher prices also was reported to be spreading throughout the industry.

After attaining a peak price of 141 3-8, Steel common closed at 140 3-4, a net gain of 2 1-2 points. Other steel shares were correspondingly strong. Sloss-Sheffield rallied to a new high above 137 and closed 6 3-4 points higher at 136 3-4 while gains of 1 to 5 included Gulf States, Republic, Bethlehem, Lndium, Youngstown Sheet and Tube, Otis common and Sloss Sheffield preferred.

Another so-called Morgan stock—General Motors—shared with U. S. Steel the leadership of the advance, rallying more than 3 points to 147 3-4, within a few points of its record high. Other motor shares, however, failed to make such an impressive showing although strong support was extended to Mack's Trucks, Dodge, Nash and Willys-Overland.

The demand for equipment, chemical and various specialties stocks increased as trading progressed. A long list of advances ranging from 1 to 5 points included Baldwin, General Railway Signal, Pullman, General Electric, U. S. Cat Iron Pipe, Dupont, American Smelting, Allied Chemical, the Commercial Solvents issues, U. S. Industrial Alcohol, United Cigar Stores and Westinghouse Air Brake. Oil shares were neglected and a few issues, such as Case Threshing Machine, moved downward against the trend.

With speculative enthusiasm centering in the industrial division, rail shares were relegated to the background, although the maintenance of a steady investment demand pushed the price average to a new high mark for the year. Chesapeake and Ohio issues, Atlantic Coast Line and Louisville and Nashville were the strongest features, rising 1 to 3 points.

Comodity prices were mixed, with some encouragement derived from the firmness of the wheat market. Cotton futures declined 15 to 22 points on Wall street liquidation inspired by more favorable weather and crop news. Sugar prices were marked up moderately but coffee worked lower.

Foreign exchanges were somewhat easier, with French and Belgian francs depressed by indications that stabilization plans would be delayed pending applications for credits abroad. Demand sterling held firm around $4.85 1-4.

Call money ruled at 5 per cent all day with time money and commercial paper rates unchanged, although conditions were reported somewhat tighter.

MEMORIAL AT LEBANON TO DR. WILLIAM BEAUMONT

BEAUMONT MEMORIAL BOULDER DEDICATED AT LEBANON COMMON

Lebanon's world-famous son, Dr. William Beaumont, a frontier army surgeon in 1822, whom one biographer has called a "backwoods physiologist," had enduring tribute paid to him in his home town Tuesday afternoon when a memorial boulder to him was dedicated and presented to the town of Lebanon by the Beaumont Medical club. The boulder, which was secured from the Beaumont farm in Lebanon, is set at the northerly end of Lebanon Common, framed between two trees, a pine and an elm, and bears a bronze plate with the following inscription in raised gold letters:

In that part of Lebanon known as "Village Hill" some three miles from this spot on the road leading from Lebanon to Willimantic was born Nov. 21, 1785

a surgeon in the United States army who later became illustrious as a pioneer investigator of the physiology of digestion through his painstaking and valuable observations continued throughout many years and largely at his own costs upon the person of Alexis St. Martin who recovered under the skillful treatment of Dr. Beaumont from a severe gunshot wound of the abdomen which healed with a permanent gastric fistula.

In appreciation of his valuable services to science and to humanity this tablet has been placed here by

THE BEAUMONT MEDICAL CLUB

The dedication exercises were held at 4 o'clock, d. s. t., at the boulder, where an audience of about 100 was gathered. Professor Lafayette E. Mendel of Yale medical school, president of the Beaumont club, presided. The attendance included Col. A. S. Fairchild, U. S. A., New Haven, representing the medical corps of the army; Dr. John E. Lane, New Haven, representing the American Medical association; Dr. W. H Carmalt, New Haven, representing the Connecticut Medical association; Professor Ross G. Harrison, representing Yale university; and Leonard Woolsey Bacon, M. D., of New Haven, representing the Beaumont family. Dr. Beaumont was first cousin of Dr. Bacon's great grandmother, Alice Park Bacon of Lebanon, wife of Rev. David Bacon.

After the invocation by Rev. A. G. Littlefield, pastor of the Lebanon Baptist church, which is just across the street from where the boulder has been placed, Professor Mendel opened the exercises with brief introductory remarks in which he said that the Beaumont Medical club is an association of a small group of physicians and men of science who have a particular and intensive interest in the medicine of the past and in the lives of those who contributed to its welfare. The group is devoted to the study and promulgation of interest in the history of medicine and the allied sciences in this state. William Beaumont, whose name the club bears, was the pioneer physiologist of America. A son of Connecticut and a surgeon in the United States army, a man endowed with high ideals to which his life was faithful, a striking exemplification of the intelligent, patient, persistent investigator, quick to grasp a rare opportunity for scientific discovery and to profit by it—he became illustrious in the annals of medicine.

"Beaumont's outstanding achievement consisted in his professional services to the Canadian hunter Alexis St. Martin, a resident of Mackinac Island, Michigan, who received a gunshot wound in the abdomen about a century ago. He was cared for in the outlying army post by the Army Surgeon Beaumont and recovered; but an opening remained between the exterior of his body and the interior of the stomach. St. Martin was often called the man with the "lid on his stomach." Through this accident of nature Beaumont was enabled to secure specimens of human gastric juice—a novel opportunity; and samples were sent to Professor Benjamin Silliman at Yale in New Haven for analysis. Beaumont's studies on St. Martin furnished some of the first reliable information regarding digestion in the human stomach and many of his observations have become classic and are still referred to at the present time in the textbooks of the subject."

Presentation of Memorial

For the presentation of the memorial, Professor Mendel introduced Dr. Leonard Woolsey Bacon of New Haven who spoke as follows:

Mr. president; gentlemen, the selectmen of Lebanon, ladies and gentlemen:

It is my pleasant duty and privilege, as chairman of a committee appointed by the Beaumont Medical club for the purpose of erecting in his home town a memorial to Dr. William Beaumont, to present to the town of Lebanon the modest monument with its commemorative tablet which, by the courtesy of the selectmen, we have been allowed to place on this Lebanon common, and to offer, on this occasion, a few remarks on the relation of his Lebanon environment to the great services which William Beaumont was enabled to render to science and to the world.

From a hill to which your wonderfully kind and well posted town clerk, Mr. Abell, guided me a few weeks ago—a hill within a mile or two of the spot at which we are now gathered, there can be surveyed the whole breadth of the state of Connecticut, and the eye may sweep from Long Island on the south to Mount Tom beyond the Massachusetts border.

But over and beyond the natural beauties of the landscape, again we exclaim: The hills of Lebanon, the hills of Lebanon! How attractive they are with their inspiring memories and their historical associations, the cradle of Revolutionary worthies and gubernatorial dignitaries both of the colony and of the state? What men of thought, what men of action, what men of prescience and of wisdom, of moral grandeur and of abiding renown have come from the precincts of this little town among the Connecticut hills? To enumerate them is to call from a list of the most solid names in the annals of our country.

Peletiah Webster, to whom this nation owes in large measure one of the most distinctive features of our country's constitution; Jonathan Trumbull, the provider, from the old "war office" across this Lebanon common, of the sustenance of our Revolutionary armies, the "Brother Jonathan" of affectionate tradition; his scarce less famous son, of the same name, again and again governor of this state; William A. Buckingham, our war governor, in the Civil war;—would it not seem that something in the wide-ranging views from these Lebanon hills reacted, as an abiding physical and mental stimulus upon the lives of those who had settled among them, engendering in them a mental and moral outlook, wider in scope and more extended in vision than was vouchsafed to those dwelling where the outlook upon nature was more restricted, and where physical isolation, in the days of crude pioneer communications, was more complete?

Or was it the other way 'round", and the group of men who severally sought out Lebanon for their home, were they insooth men whose innate character craved wide expansive views and vistas of other distant settlements, such an outlook as they found on these Lebano hills, as a site suitable for the homes they were to build for themselves and for their offspring? That the influence of the Lebanon hills was a factor in the life of one of the early Lebanon settlers is shown by the site selected for his home by William Beaumont, who came to Lebanon from Saybrook, in 1746 and built him a house on "Village Hill," where it still stands today, just on the crest, overlooking the broad valley of the Willimantic river.

With industry and zeal William Beaumont labored to establish him a home in these Lebanon hills, and with his zeal he mingled no small amount of the distinctively New England virtue of "gumption".

He prospered, despite the rocky nature of the soil of his domain, and the land records of the town show that he added, from time to time, adjoining parcels of land to his original modest home-plot on the crest of Village Hill, until he became at length possessed a considerable acreage on both sides of the highway that runs north and south along the "Village Hill," though most or his purchases of land,—for the most part bought, according to the recorded deeds, "with the dwelling house and barn thereon" —lay, as did his own home, "on the easterly side of said highway."

Not many rods, in fact a scant quarter of a mile, south of the home-lot of the original domicile of the first Lebanon Beaumont, William, was the house of his son Samuel. Just how Samuel Beaumont came into possession of this house, whether by purchase, or by inheritance from his father, the search of your wonderfully interesting Lebanon land records, by the town clerk, Mr. Abell, has not yet disclosed; but a fully authenticated document attests that this was the dwelling-house of Samuel Beaumont "whereof he died possessed." The ownership of this house has been the kind diligence of Mr. Abell, the nind diligence of Mr. Abell, the town clerk and of his daughter, Miss Abell, down to the present day, when it stands in the name of Mr. Philip Krause, who is among those gathered here today.

The Beaumont Medical club, feel an especial obligation to Mr. Abell and to Miss Abell, an obligation which it is a pleasure to have this opportunity to acknowledge, not only for having established, by careful and laborious search, the identity of this house, but also for having presented to the Beaumont Medical club, without fee, complete and officially attested transcriptions of the documents which identify this house as the dwelling of Samuel Beaumont, whence we may infer that with little doubt it is the actual birth-place of his distinguished son, Dr. William Beaumont, whose memory we are gathered here today to honor.

To Mr. Philip Krause also, the present owner of the Samuel Beaumont house, the Beaumont Medical club wishes to extend its thanks for permission to dig up, and to bring to this spot from the pasture lot adjacent to his house, the great and sightly stone which bears our commemorative tablet. Mr. Krause was, indeed, generous enough to offer us all the stones in the whole pasture lot, as a free gift to so worthy a cause; but the committee of the club felt that to accept so much, without further requital, would be trespassing too much on his great good will; nevertheless the chairman sighed as he thought of what an imposing cairn all the stones in a Lebanon pasture lot would have made. Cheops and Rameses would have had to look to their laurels for had not the committee prudently held its hand, and had all the stones in the erstwhile Beaumont pasture lot been piled upon this fair common, the "Pyramid of Lebanon Green" might have overtopped the pyramids of Egypt.

But why so much pains and trouble on the part of so many people to trace the identity of that little old farm-house on Village Hill? Who was this Lebanon farmer's son whom we desire to honor? What did he do that made his the most widely known name of all that ever came forth from Lebanon?

Peletiah Webster is almost forgotten of the world at large. His renown exists today only among students of constitutional history and law, and among antiquarians.

The names of Jonathan Trumbull, father and son, are, indeed, much better known in Connecticut and in New England than is the name of William Beaumont; but this is largely because of their association with the epochal events of the American Revolution. Outside of this country their names are known only to special students of American history. Their association with Washington and Lafayette and with the glories of a successful war make their names conspicuous in the minds of all, indeed, to whom the American Revolution is the epic, the picturesque, the beneficent, the fruitful event of all time; but as compared with that of William Beaumont, even these distinguished names mean but little in Europe, in India or in Australia.

The name of Governor Buckingham is dear to us as that of our honored war governor during the Civil war; and we do well to be proud of him; but his renown has scarcely spread, as has that of William Beaumont, all over the world.

What about this William Beaumont? Did he exceed those others in remarkable intellectual endowment? Do we honor him as a stupendous genius, as a Shakespeare or a Goethe, as an Ericson or an Edison, as a Bonapart or a Caesar? No!

Dr. William Beaumont was a plain man, a man of judgment and of "parts," indeed, but not transcendent above his fellows in intellect, not conspicuously successful even in his own professional work. He was a good surgeon and he devoted himself to his patients, as other good surgeons have done. But we honor him today because he left the world a great legacy. One great opportunity for service to science and to mankind he had the "gumption" to perceive; the skill to develop; and the zeal and perseverance to exploit and to follow up, with much toil and sacrifice, through a long series of years.

In the achievements of Dr. Beaumont, lies an inspiring lesson for every man among us. Not transcendent intellectual endowments; not conspicuous rank or office; not wealth and influential friends; not wide learning and extensive travel; but, on the other hand, the diligent use of the simple, homely qualities which came to him from his New England ancestry enabled him to leave this great legacy to the world "Gumption" to perceive, reasonable skill to develop, and zeal and perseverance to follow up an opportunity, these are homely enough virtues, quite of the kind we have learned to look for from Lebanon.

I can tell you, in very few words, what it was that he did. Prof. Chittenden is far better fitted than I to tell you what this thing which Beaumont did has meant to science.

Briefly then, Beaumont, as a surgeon in the United States Army, was stationed at a post near Detroit. There he was called upon to treat a Canadian trapper named Alexis St. Martin who had been injured by the accidental discharge of a musket at close range. The wound laid open the belly, and the charge carried away or destroyed a portion of the belly wall and likewise a portion of the wall of the stomach.

Through the good surgical care which Dr. Beaumont gave the injured man, this very extensive and grave wound was brought to heal; but in healing, the inflammatory process which attended it caused the wall of the stomach to become adherent to the wall of the abdomen, and when the healing process was complete, the defect in the belly wall and the defect in the stomach wall coincided in position, so that, though the rest of the abdominal contents, the coils of intestines, etc., were held back in their proper place within the belly by the adhesions which glued the stomach to the belly wall, yet a continuous passage persisted, through the skin and muscles of the belly wall, right on through the muscular coat and the mucous lining of the stomach, so that, except when this passage, which is technically known as a "gastric fistula," was artificially plugged up, a part, at least, of the stomach contents was discharged through this aperture directly onto the skin surface of the abdomen; while only a part of the food which had been swallowed passed on in its natural course through the stomach into the intestine.

Three facts stand out in the history of this case of Alexis St. Martin. In rescuing his patient from the perils of such an extensive abdominal wound, Dr. Beaumont showed, undoubtedly, a high degree of surgical skill.

For many years Dr. Beaumont supported St. Martin at his own cost, although the doctor was not a man of means, and watched, observed and recorded, with a high degree of accuracy and judgment, a long series of feeding experiments which laid the foundation for our present knowledge of the physiology of digestion. Therein lay this zeal and his perseverance.

It is his exercise of this skill, this "gumption," this zeal and perseverance that we are gathered together today to do him honor.

And it is but fitting that the surgeon general of the United States Army has ordered here today, to attend our ceremonies, an officer of the army to represent the Army Medical corps, that old service to which Dr. Beaumont belonged.

It is but fitting that the American Medical association has sent its delegates.

It is but fitting that the Connecticut Medical society has done the same; while Yale university has also sent of its best to honor the celebration. In this, his home town, of the most widely renowned citizen of Lebanon.

My further duties on this occasion are simple, they consist, in their first phase, in offering the thanks and acknowledgments of the Beaumont Medical club for the kind co-operation which the people of Lebanon have given us. I would more especially thank the good pastor of the Baptist church for the shelter of the church edifice which he so kindly placed at our disposal. Also would I thank, in the name of the Beaumont Medical club, the Jonathan Trumbull chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution for their kindness in opening the historic Lebanon War office especially to the club and to its guests on this occasion.

The second phase of my duties begins also with thanks to the selectmen of the town of Lebanon for their permission to place our monument upon this historic Lebanon Common. This seemed, to the members of the club, to be, on the whole, a more fitting site for our memorial than the less frequented highway which passes the Beaumont homestead, though we have already secured the permission of the present owner of the birth-place of Dr. Beaumont to place a somewhat similar "marker" in front of that house on Village Hill.

And now finally, Gentlemen, to your charge, as selectmen of the town of Lebanon, the Beaumont Medical club, commits this monument in honor of your erstwhile fellow-citizen, Dr. William Beaumont, for his line is gone out through all the earth, and his words to the ends of the world.

Accepted for Town

"In representing the people of Lebanon, I would say we are glad to accept this beautiful memorial to Dr. William Beaumont, glad to know about another of the great men who have gone from this town, leaving with his passing out from this world something that has been and will be for the betterment of mankind. We should not feel puffed up over the fact that Dr. Beaumont was a native of Lebanon, only as the lesson it teaches in the knowledge it has brought to us through these men who are honoring him today.

Gentlemen of the Beaumont Medical club, we are pleased to join with you on this occasion to learn more of this celebrated surgeon."

In closing Selectman Bishop announced that the Lebanon D. A. R. chapter had the war office open this afternoon and would welcome visitors there.

Delivered Medical Address

Russell H. Chittenden, director-emeritus at Sheffield Scientific school at Yale, delivered the address applying to the service to the medical profession which was rendered by the experiments and observations of Dr. Beaumont upon St. Martin.

The narrative was taken up as of 1822 when the army surgeon was looking after the health of a troop of United States soldiers preserving order at Fort Mackinac, Michigan, among Indians and fur traders.

In that generation hospitals, laboratories, research institutions and specialists were non-existent, Mr. Chittenden said, and the surgeon had to contend with an army of invisible foes. Infection, suppuration, putrefaction, almost invariably appeared to hinder or destroy the benefit hoped for in any surgical operation. Pasteur, Koch and Lister had not yet done work to throw light on the cause of these conditions. The beneficient action of ether and chloroform was not yet available. Old theories and hypothesis, more romantic than scientific, clung with persistency; the stomach was the outstanding figure in the digestive scheme. In Great Britain and Europe trained physiologists and chemists sought facts to build up a rational theory of gastric digestion.

"It remained for America, through her 'backwoods physiologist' to contribute an epoch-making series of discoveries," said Mr. Chittenden.

"Dr. Beaumont had had no special training, neither was he trained in methods of science, but he possessed latent genius. On June 6, 1822, Alexis St. Martin, a hunter, received a gunshot wound which tore out a portion of his left breast. It was supposed to be a mortal wound. The diaphragm was lacerated and a perforation made directly into the stomach by which food was escaping. Dr. Beaumont gave surgical care and in ten months the wound was partially healed. Intercostal muscles retained the orifice of the stomach in contact with the external wound. The wound could not be closed. The man was taken by Dr. Beaumont into his own family. An artificial lid of lint was made to keep the contents of the stomach in place.

"In 1825 Dr. Beaumont wrote that as St. Martin lay on his side he could see into the cavity of the stomach and almost see the process of digestion. He could pour in water with a funnel or put in food with a spoon and draw them out with a siphon. Later, Dr. Beaumont wrote that the case offered excellent opportunity for experimenting upon gastric fluids and process of digestion. He took St. Martin with him when ordered to Fort Niagara, N. Y., and later to Burlington, Vt., and Plattsburgh, N. Y. Experiments continued until near the close of 1833, St. Martin being under written agreement to 'serve, abide and continue,' with Beaumont."

Dr. Chittenden said hundreds of experiments carried out by Dr. Beaumont covered seven years and were published in 1833. "Even today," said Mr. Chittenden, "Beaumont's name is to be found with that of St. Martin in every treatise of physiology. Noteworthy is the fact that some recent results on secretion, notably studies by Mr. Pawlow, were actually anticipated by Beaumont." * * * He forwarded to Professor Silliman at Yale a sample of gastric juice begging him to analyze it. This Silliman did without definite result but he wrote that "much in physiology eludes the scrutiny of chemistry."

Dr. Chittenden in summing up what Beaumont did said that what he accomplished in the unique study of gastric digestion has become such an integral part of knowledge of the subject that it is unnecessary to particularize. "It is fitting that here in Lebanon where he was born," said the speaker, "this memorial tablet should serve as a reminder to coming generations of the name and fame of William Beaumont. In the words of another 'let us preserve the memory of the deserving; perhaps it may prompt others likewise to deserve.'"

Pilgrimage to Beaumont Farm

Following the address of Dr. Chittenden, an automobile pilgrimage to the Beaumont farm was led by Dr. Bacon after which the Beaumont club members and guests motored to an inn at Saybrook for a private dinner at 7.30, covers being laid for fifteen.
